BRAIN TRUSTERS COME AND GO IN RAPID PARADE

Many Quit Because of Policies.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 14.—[Special.]—The lengthening list of official casualties in the Roosevelt administration already has broken all records within the memory of official Washington's oldest inhabitants.

George N. Peek of Illinois, foreign trade adviser to the President and president of the Export-Import banks, who resigned last week, is the latest one to join the procession of those who have broken with Mr. Roosevelt and departed from the New Deal household.

Many and varied are the reasons that have impelled these coadjutors of the President to forsake the New Deal. Some found the New Deal economically unsound or too Socialistic to endure, some complained that Mr. Roosevelt had not lived up to his public and private promises, some were the victims of rivalry with officials more influential than they at the White House.

Peek's Career Stormy.

Mr. Peek, a Republican originally who went over to the Democrats to get the brand of farm relief the Republicans had rejected, had a stormy career in the New Deal. He started out as co-administrator of the AAA, but he wasn't radical enough to suit Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace and Prof. Rexford Guy Tugwell and other members of the brain trust. They were stronger than he at the White House and they forced him out of the job.

But Mr. Peek was reputed to be a power among the farmers and Mr. Roosevelt preferred to keep him on the inside of the New Deal looking out than to allow him to run riot on the outside. So he made a job for Mr. Peek, that of foreign trade adviser, although he already was receiving plenty of foreign trade advice from Secretary of State Cordell Hull and Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper.

Ridicules Hull's Advice.

Almost from the start Mr. Peek clashed with Mr. Hull. He gave the President foreign trade advice the antithesis of Mr. Hull's. He ridiculed Mr. Hull's reciprocal tarif agreements embodying the unconditional most favored nation principle under which tarif concessions granted one nation were extended to all others.

When Mr. Hull announced his reciprocity agreement with Canada Mr. Peek got busy on a report to the President denouncing this bargain most comprehensively as inimical to the interests of American farmers. But he never got a chance to submit the report. He had in the meantime incurred the ire of the President in a speech in New York to his fellow alumni of the war industries board in which Mr. Peek served under Bernard Mannes Baruch.

In his speech Mr. Peek lampooned the theories of Secretaries Hull and Wallace. The President wrote Mr. Peek a sharp letter that left him nothing to do but resign.

Another Hull Victim.

The enforced resignation of Mr. Peek added another notch to Mr. Hull's shooting, for he had not been the first to get in the way of the Tennessee mountaineer who heads the cabinet.

The first one was Raymond Moley, who at the dawn of the administration was the No. 1 member of the brain trust. He was first in the confidence of the President; he shaped policies and drafted Mr. Roosevelt's speeches. Mr. Roosevelt made him assistant secretary of state and for a time he exercised more power in the state department than Mr. Hull, more power in the government than all the cabinet members put together.

Prof. Moley had been profoundly influenced by the economic philosophy of John Maynard Keynes, the British economist whose theories the British government had rejected as impractical, unsound, and visionary. Prof. Moley brought the President under the spell of Keynes.

Moley Gets Upper Hand.

The President sent Mr. Hull to London at the head of the American delegation to the economic conference. Mr. Hull, an orthodox internationalist, proceeded to carry out the

HIT POLITICIANS' RULE OF WPA'S 'SEWING CIRCLE'

Only Democrats Get Executive Jobs.

BY STANLEY ARMSTRONG.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Flora, Ill., Dec. 14.—[Special.]—In a little country-wide sewing project located over a Democratic grocery store residents of Flora have found an epitome of the Works Progress administration's dictum in southern Illinois that only "loyal and deserving Democrats" can be placed in charge of WPA projects. Other instances of Democratic favoritism are known, but the sewing project has gripped their imaginations as illustrative of the whole program.

Born out of an intimate knowledge of what WPA is doing locally, the 4,500 residents of this Clay county Egyptian town sum up their opinions and pass judgment in 13 words strung in this colloquial pattern:

"It is getting so that decent people are holding their noses on it."

Called "Rotten Mess."

Visit in the homes of the poor, the well to do, or engage in conversation with those unemployed men on the First National bank corner, who have managed to eke out a bare existence without going on the relief rolls, and the Florans say further that WPA is a "rotten mess."

They are speaking of the "loyal and deserving Democrats" order sent out and admitted by Walter Williams, WPA administrator for 22 southern Illinois counties, to cover the selection of directors, superintendents, foremen, and timekeepers on WPA projects. Williams told these people that 90 per cent of WPA jobs were to go to those on relief and the other 10 per cent to the unemployed. Instead of going to the unemployed, the boss jobs have been given to unneedy persons on the endorsement of Democratic county central committee chairmen.

Democrat Withdraws.

The criticism does not come from Republicans only. When he saw the politics in the sewing project, Ed Given, Democrat, who is chairman of the Clay County Emergency Relief committee, had a statement published in the local paper announcing withdrawal of the CCERC from any connection with WPA projects. The statement reads in part as follows:

"It has been the effort of this committee to stay entirely out of politics for the reason we do not believe that politics should be injected into a program dealing with human suffering and the CCERC will not be, in any manner, connected with any projects for this reason."

"What caused you to issue that statement?" Mr. Given was asked.

"Some time ago," he answered, "I signed a WPA application blank with the understanding that it was to be filled out to cover the continuation of a sewing project which the CCERC had operated as a work relief project.

Declines to Play Politics.

"When it was filled out, it called for a number of other projects besides sewing. The sponsor was ignored, and the project was turned over to the chairman of the county Democratic central committee. I'm a Democrat, but I'm not going to play politics with this stuff."

What happened when the project was taken by WPA from the CCERC

A DISCUSSION OF THE WAR DEBTS

"Are you writing to Santy, poppa?"

"Probably. I'm paying my income tax."

"Do you like to pay taxes, poppa?"

"I decline to answer with children present."

"Isn't it funny, poppa—war debt payments and income tax due the same day?"

"Yes, both due Dec. 15—but not funny."

"Why don't you cancel your income tax, poppa? Wouldn't that be lots cheaper?"

"Not in the long run, Sylvester."

"But, poppa, if they paid what they owe and agreed to pay, you wouldn't have to pay so much?"

"It's all very complicated, Sylvester. The demagogs, trying to get votes, are always yawping about how Europe ought to pay what they owe us! Stirring up ill feeling between this country and friendly nations over there!"

"You mean they are so friendly they won't pay us for fear of hurting our feelings or something?"

"I'll try to explain. Now, listen! The greatest calamity that could happen to this country would be the payment of these war debts. They can be paid only in gold or in goods. There isn't enough gold, so they'd have to be paid in goods. This flood of goods, made by cheap foreign labor, would ruin us. Factories closed, industry crippled, working men starving! Why, just think! Ten billions in goods!"

"But, poppa, they wouldn't pay all at once!"

"The principle is the same. What would the cotton planters say if Europe paid in cotton?"

"But Europe doesn't raise any cotton, poppa!"

"They could buy from some outside country."

"Isn't that what they call a triangular trade?"

"I think it's called something like that."

"And they say it's a big factor in world exchange. Couldn't they pay partly in that way instead of shipments of goods direct?"

"Ha ha! Where do you get this crazy talk?"

"From Hoover's message to congress, December, '32."

"Um—m! Well, anyway, that wouldn't amount to much. The main payments would have to be made in goods manufactured abroad, shipped here in competition with ours. That's the only way our debtors can get the foreign exchange necessary to make their debt payments."

"But, poppa, isn't payment in goods or gold a kind of a false representation?"

"What's that!"

"When American tourists go abroad and spend hundreds of millions, and emigrants in America send more than a hundred million dollars a year to their folks in Europe, isn't that foreign exchange?"

"What's that?"

"You heard me, poppa. And don't these two items alone provide our debtors with five or six times the total amount of their war debt payments?"

"It may have a bearing. First, let me know who told you this."

"That's also from Hoover's message in '32. And how about foreign investments by Americans and dividends sent from the United States to residents abroad—can't they be considered?"

"To a slight extent."

"But in 1931 these two items amounted to more than a billion and a quarter dollars. They aren't goods that would compete with our factories and workmen."

"Ha ha! my boy, you've been studying up, I see."

"O, I'm awfully ignorant about money, but I like to talk about it. If you're not too tired, I'd like to talk some more."

"By all means. I'll try to keep my temper."

"Well, poppa, after we made our debt settlements, and the payments began to come in, didn't our foreign trade and the foreign trade of all the world begin to flourish?"

"Impossible! Why, those payments would hang over the world like a heavy cloud!"

"Why, poppa, I thought every one admits that the payments were not an insuperable obstacle to a very good foreign trade."

"Loose talk, son! Absolutely demagogic! You say 'every one'! Just name a single one!"

"I was quoting ex-President Coolidge, poppa. Was he a demagog?"

"Heavens! Do be careful what you say!"

"And he also said the nations that owed us the money and signed pledges to pay should do so."

"O, yes, I remember: 'They hired the money, didn't they?' He was a great man, but he had an off moment now and then. We all do."

"But, my goodness, poppa, Andrew Mellon must have been a regular old hundred per cent demagog."

"Sylvester! This is sacrilege! I want to hear no more of this. Why do you say such things?"

"Well, poppa, you said these people who want the war debts paid are demagogs. And didn't Mr. Mellon work for months to get the debtors to tell how much they were able to pay and then they all freely signed the pledges to pay? Why, he even reduced the debts an average of 43 per cent! Italy was cut down 76 per cent, and even at that has hardly paid anything. If she had paid us, perhaps she wouldn't have been able to build up a vast armament to threaten world peace!"

"O, dear! To think I brought up a son to utter such heresy—speaking about Mr. Mellon that way!"

"And isn't Stanley Baldwin another demagog?"

"Most certainly not. He's a pillar of strength, a most able British statesman! I hope you are not thinking of attacking him!"

"Wasn't he the able statesman who signed the war debt settlement with the United States?"

"He did, and he also reminded us that every cent they borrowed was spent for goods in this country!"

"But didn't all the goods go abroad? That is, they got the goods and we got the promissory notes which he now defaults! Isn't that a rather dangerous economic principle to get circulating around, poppa?"

"The war debts should be canceled! Then this principle, as you call it, would not operate to strain the good relations between friendly nations. I tell you, the payment of these war debts would ruin this nation!"

"Why didn't somebody think of that before we lent them the ten billion dollars?"

"It was during the war, Sylvester."

"I thought it was during their war, poppa, and before they got us into it. Also I thought France insisted that the loans were business transactions and not a gift, and I thought that three billions were lent after the war was over. That certainly wasn't to help win the war."

"I was speaking in general terms, my boy."

"Poppa, if it is impossible to pay except in goods, as you insist, how is it that Finland pays her instalment regularly every year? Is it because she wants to ruin us?"

"But if she can pay $230,000 a year with a population of three and a half million, shouldn't Great Britain, with an empire population of 420,000,000 and a home population of 40,000,000, be able to pay something more than nothing at all?"

"Hi hum! I'm getting sleepy."

"Thank you, poppa, for trying to show me the light on this debt proposition. And just one more question: If the United States owed England four billion dollars and owed France three and a half billions, do you think they would ask us not to pay them because it might hurt their business? Don't you think they would find a way of paying if we had a lot of islands along their coasts and the Suez canal?"

Boy Becomes 'Human Echo' When Asleep

HAWKSHEAD, Lancashire, England, Dec. 14.—(AP)—The mystery of Frank Atkinson, 7 years old, who "vibrates" when he sleeps and whose body produces strange "knockings," has been solved—in principle at least.

Through some unknown physiological process, doctors said they had determined the boy, while asleep, becomes a "human echo" and reproduces a noise created anywhere near him.

His parents, however, Dr. W. E. Allen, a local physician, said today, still cling to the belief their son is the victim of some unworldly power.

"Abnormal Nervous System."

"I am convinced that an abnormal nervous system is responsible for the weird sounds apparently emanating from the boy's abdomen," Dr. Allen said. "Tests with the boy sleeping in a neighbor's home had no variant results."

For some time the story of the boy brought talk of ghosts and of supernatural powers. To soothe public fears Dr. Allen, with several policemen, made an investigation.

"When any one taps on the wall," the doctor reported, "there is a sound from Frank's abdomen. I do not know whether the noise comes from the stomach or the intestines. The number of noises produced always corresponds with the knocks on the wall.

"Whole Thing Uncanny."

"The whole thing is uncanny. I found that there was no reaction if I held part of the boy's body. I tapped four times near him while holding his hand. I released the hand and tapped another four times. Frank produced eight noises. When he makes these noises his whole body and the bed he is lying on shake with vibration."

Brain specialists are interesting themselves in the case, and various theories are being advanced. One is that the sound of the knocks, passing along the child's auditory nerve and transmitted to the brain, causes a spasm of some sort, which produces in turn the knocking sound.

[Copyright: 1935: By the New York Times.]

TSINAN, China, Dec. 14.—Five million of Shantung province's 37,000,000 population are homeless, Yellow river floods having submerged ten counties and parts of three others.

About 350,000 refugees recently arrived in Tsinan, creating danger and disorder. Gen. Han Fu-chu, governor of the province, ordered most of them scattered over eighty-five unflooded counties. Only 18,000 remain in refugee camps in Tsinan.

Until last week thousands of starving beggars roamed Tsinan's streets. More than a dozen corpses of starvation victims were found in the streets daily.

Police rounded up thousands into refugee camps. More than 200 died in one inclosure in one night.

PUTS PRESSURE ON ETHIOPIA TO ACCEPT TERMS

Promise to Stop Oil Ban Made to Italy.

LONDON, Dec. 14.—(AP)—Critics of the Anglo-French peace formula received a new shock with the publication of an official document today, which disclosed unexplained discrepancies in the manner in which the plan was broached to Premier Mussolini of Italy and Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia.

A foreign office "white paper" showed that Britain sought to induce Haile Selassie to accept the peace plan, which would give about two-thirds of Ethiopia to Italy, and also to have Mussolini do so, under the hint of not applying of an oil embargo.

Orders Pressure on Ethiopia.

A different method of approaching the warring governments was noted and was expected further to embarrass Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin and Sir Samuel Hoare, foreign secretary, in next Thursday's debate on foreign affairs in the house of commons.

The documents established that Hoare sent strong instructions to the British minister to Addis Ababa that the utmost influence should be brought to bear upon Haile Selassie. Hoare's telegram, dated Dec. 10, said:

"You should use your utmost influence to induce the emperor to give careful and favorable consideration to these proposals and on no account lightly to reject them.

"On the contrary, I feel sure he will give further proof of his statesmanship in realizing the advantage and opportunity for negotiation which they afford and will avail himself of them."

Hints at Action on Oil.

At the same time, Sir Samuel gave this information to the embassador to Rome:

"If, as they hope, the reply in principle is favorable, the French and United Kingdom governments will immediately take steps in order that the committee of five [of the league of nations] may be called together Dec. 12.

"In that case, the meeting of the committee might modify the object of the meeting of the committee of 18 which is fixed for the same day." [This "object" was to discuss an oil embargo.]

Observers said the Anglo-French recommendations and the promise to use their influence at Geneva to secure league approval of the peace plan appeared at variance with the attitude adopted at Geneva by Premier Laval and Capt. Anthony Eden, British minister for league affairs, two days later.

Eden Returns from Geneva.

Eden returned today from Geneva for week-end conferences with government leaders and Hoare prepared to break short his Swiss holiday to attend the commons' debate.

A spokesman for the Ethiopian legation said of Hoare's telegram to the minister in Ethiopia:

"It is ridiculous to describe the act of giving half our country away to an aggressor as good 'statesmanship.' Further, the emperor's is not the only voice so far as Ethiopia is concerned. His countrymen will have to be consulted."

In informed quarters belief was expressed that the government would not fall as a result of the blasts of criticism against it for the peace plan, but sharp reproof from Laborites and Liberals is anticipated.

Britain Approaches Hitler.

Meanwhile, it was learned, Great Britain has taken steps to secure a closer relationship with Nazi Germany and Reichsfuehrer Hitler.

Sir Eric Phipps, British ambassador to Germany, conferred with Hitler and Konstantin von Neurath, German foreign minister, yesterday. A communique issued in Berlin said they discussed "the possibility of restriction on armaments and the Anglo-French proposal for an air pact to be signed by the Locarno powers."

SNOW HALTS PLANES AND SLOWS UP AUTOS HERE; COVERS REGION

A steady wet snowfall in Chicago and throughout the central west began late yesterday and caused suspension of all operating schedules at the Chicago airport. The forecast today was for more intermittent snow here and in most of the midwestern states.

Last night's snow covering extended from Nebraska, North Dakota, and southern Wisconsin on the north, through Iowa and Missouri, to central Illinois and northern Indiana on the south, and Toledo, O., on the east. Poor visibility and a low ceiling forced the grounding of all planes at the airport. The last arrival yesterday was a 5 o'clock plane from the west.

As the snow continued unabated during the evening, motor trafic in Cook county was slowed down. Numerous minor collisions were reported by the police, but no fatalities.

Girl Sees Her Rejected Suitor Drink Fatal Poison

Gerald Stumps, 25 years old, 430 Seminary avenue, Aurora, an advertising salesman, walked into the Hotel Aurora grill last night and ordered a cup of coffee from his former sweetheart, Miss Ruth Gillespie, 20 years old, a waitress. He told her he'd kill himself unless she would marry him. When she refused he dropped poison in the coffee, drank it, and then drove to St. Charles hospital, where he died.

Jas. A. Reed Ready to Vote Republican

Cedar Rapids, Ia., Dec. 14.—[Special.]—Former Senator James A. Reed of Kansas City, Mo., for many years a wheel horse of the Democratic party, bolted President Roosevelt's camp today. In an interview here he declared if Roosevelt is nominated, he is prepared to vote for the Republican nominee for President in 1936.

The Republicans, however, he said must present a candidate pledged to stand by the constitution and fundamentals of American civilization, to get his vote.

Mr. Reed is believed to be the first of the old line Democrats to declare he will not vote for Roosevelt, although many less ardent partisans have criticized the New Deal.

Mr. Reed did not concede that by voting for a Republican he will forsake the Democratic party. He charged the group now controling the national administration has betrayed the principles of democracy.

"If I have to choose," he declared, "between a Republican who stands by the constitution and an alleged Democrat who proposes to destroy all that has been created in the past, I shall vote for the Republican, even though there are many policies of the Republican party which in the past have been obnoxious to me."

"In so acting and voting I shall continue to be a real Democrat. My democracy shall not be taken away by any one man or group of men who have attained office by posing as Democrats and who have turned out to be enemies of all the Democratic party has advocated in the past and which the real Democrats of the United States still cherish."

Referring to the President's recent speeches, former Senator Reed said: "I don't believe they are fooling any one. The fact that he is making them shows that the New Deal is in a situation just like Wilson with the league of nations."

CLEVELAND OBTAINS DARKEST CITY TITLE UP TO DECEMBER 14

Cleveland, O., Dec. 14.—[U. P.]—Clevelanders had the word of the United States weather bureau tonight to confirm their impressions that the city should be called "the dark city."

Every other city in this section, including smoky Pittsburgh, was out of the running. The weather bureau chalked up just eleven hours of sunlight out of a possible 120 hours so far this month.

Pittsburgh had 32 hours out of a possible 130. Toledo had 17 out of a possible 129; Buffalo 16 out of 118.

This proposal came forward in an under-surface struggle over the peace plan advanced by France and Great Britain. The smaller powers maintained that any concessions to Italy might mean the death knell of the league and of collective security.

A belief appeared to be growing that Ethiopia will be put under some form of foreign guidance—primarily one of league supervision—but that the league council cannot go on record as approving the Franco-British peace plan. The plan will be considered by the league council next Wednesday.

Oil Embargo Laid Aside.

Meanwhile the question of an oil embargo has been laid aside. A spokesman for the Italian delegation said:

"Do you realize there are a whole lot of representatives of the oil interests now in Geneva?"

The league today issued a chart showing that 46 nations accepted in principle a proposal whereby states will come to the aid of those countries especially hit economically as a result of the general boycott of Italy.

This unprecedented system of sanctions, built up at a period of indignation and enthusiasm to halt the "war of aggression," league officials said, can scarcely be abandoned before a peace acceptable to Ethiopia appears to be under negotiation.

Fog Veils Situation.

Although a fog enshrouded the present crisis, there seemed to be a strong current that a general drive in some as yet unperceived manner would be made to restore peace.

Premier Laval of France was said to be an instigator of this movement. He was reported to have remarked that he prepared to go down fighting for peace rather than on domestic issues. Laval's favorite slogan is: "Peace should come, therefore will come. Now let's get about it."

Many cablegrams protesting the Franco-British peace plan have been received by the league from the United States, officials said today. Most of them came from local branches of league of nations associations.

BRITAIN SEEKS TO BUILD STRATEGIC ARABIAN RAILWAY

JERUSALEM, Dec. 14.—(AP)—An unconfirmed report said today that the British government had started negotiations with Saudi Arabia for permission to build a railroad linking the Mediterranean seaport of Haifa with Akaba, on the Gulf of Akaba north of the Red sea.

The report followed a visit by a British representative to King Ibn Saud of Saudi Arabia. The British agent is also reported to have discussed the possibility of constructing airdromes at various sites along the Persian gulf.

Both a railroad and airports would have a tremendous strategic value in case of war. The railroad would be of especial benefit to Great Britain since it would provide a route from the Mediterranean to the Red sea in event that the war affected the Suez canal. The Arab press reported recently that such a railroad was being built secretly by Britain.

MUSSOLINI ASKS 'CLARIFICATION' OF PEACE OFFER

Fascists Direct Storm of Criticism at Plan.

ROME, Dec. 14.—(AP)—Premier Mussolini today showed a coolness toward the Franco-British peace plan and inspired sources expressed doubt tonight of the formula's success.

Dissatisfaction with the terms was shown in several ways, and Il Duce asked for "clarification."

Since the proposals were put forward as a "basis for discussion," Mussolini may accept this, but informed sources said he would never settle on the lines offered.

Il Duce's answer to Paris and London is expected after a midnight session of the Fascist grand council next Wednesday.

Press Criticizes Plan.

Gloom spread today over the peace outlook. A government spokesman showed no worry over explosions of opposition to the plan in other countries. He said even the attitude of Geneva would not affect Il Duce's decision.

Sharp criticism of the plan appeared in newspaper editorials, which discuss such delicate state affairs only when their editorials are "inspired."

Il Favoro Fascista said bluntly of the proposals: "It can be affirmed they are not such as to open too rosy prospects," called them "inadequate," and added: "The possible failure of the plan neither disturbs nor frightens us. Our military possibilities and power of resistance, as superbly shown by the Italian people, are such as to make us serene about the war in Africa."

Counts on Italian Unity.

Rejection of the plan or a failure in negotiations, the paper said, "would not injure in the slightest the solidity of the régime, the unity of the Italian people, or their firm will for victory.

Tribuna, after decrying the obscurity of the proposals, concluded: "Premier Mussolini's Italy has a right and duty to maintain intact her mistrust and strengthen her determination."

Editorials indicated Italy might seek to turn the league of nations against Ethiopia because Addis Ababa had denounced the Franco-British plan.

British Soldier Attacked in Cairo; Students Save Him

LONDON, Dec. 14.—(AP)—An Exchange telegraph report from Cairo said that the attention of Premier Tewfik Nessim Pasha was called by the British residency to the alleged unprovoked attack upon a British soldier in a street tonight. A party of students, the report added, went to the soldier's rescue, beating off the attackers.

Rescue Pup from Between Buildings; Couldn't Turn

Cleveland, O., Dec. 14.—(AP)—Because a mongrel puppy failed to use his "reverse," the Animal Protective league rescued him today from between the walls of two buildings. The dog entered the crevice and was unable to turn. He could have backed out—but didn't.

WAR MAKES ASMARA A BUSY SPOT

ITALY IS ACCUSED OF STIRRING UP HAPSBURG ROW

VIENNA, Austria, Dec. 14.—(AP)—A news letter of Swiss origin which is widely circulated in Austria said today Premier Mussolini favors creating a regency in Austria so as to give the league of nations "something else to think about."

The letter was issued by Franz Burri, who is an intimate associate of the former Austrian vice chancellor, Franz Winkler, now in exile at Lucerne, Switzerland.

Attracting much comment, the letter said Italy sponsored a regency for Vice Chancellor Ernst von Starhemberg, who is a prince, and restoration of the monarchy so central European political disorder would divert attention from Ethiopia.

[Von Starhemberg indicated this week he would not oppose the crowning of Archduke Otto if certain conditions were met. Little entente nations, however, are expected bitterly to oppose any attempt to place a Hapsburg back on the throne.]

HOLD UP STORE; GET $45.

Three gunmen entered a grocery store at 323 South Kilbourn avenue yesterday, threatened 5 clerks and several customers and seized $45. The store owner, Joseph Pokonosky, 45 years old, rushed from the rear of the store and fired a shot at the robbers as they drove away.

POLICE THWART 2,000 IN RAID ON ITALIAN RALLY

New York, Dec. 14.—(AP)—Six hundred policemen tonight warded off an attempt by more than 2,000 young men and women to enter an Italian Red Cross rally in Madison Square Garden.

One group singing the communist "internationale" appeared first and so occupied police that a second group, throwing pamphlets berating Mussolini, nearly gained entrance.

Quick reformation of police lines, however, drove back both groups. One policeman was slightly injured.

Admission to the meeting was by ticket. Mayor La Guardia was listed as a speaker.

WHEATON DOCTOR TO BE BURIED IN ETHIOPIA TODAY

Emperor Sends Airplane to Get Hockman's Body.

Funeral services for Dr. Robert W. Hockman, 28 year old Red Cross worker of Wheaton, Ill., who was killed Thursday by an unexploded Italian air bomb, which he was examining at Daggah Bur, Ethiopia, will be held today in Addis Ababa, the Ethiopian capital.

Emperor Haile Selassie, according to dispatches from Addis Ababa last night, dispatched an airplane yesterday to Jigjiga, near where Hockman was killed, to bring back the body. Hockman's father, Dr. W. H. Hockman, 415 East Madison avenue, Wheaton, said yesterday the body will not be brought back to America.

Young Hockman died a victim of his hobby of collecting war souvenirs and of studying bombs. The bomb which killed him was a "dud" which had been dropped from an Italian airplane and had buried itself in the ground near Daggah Bur. Hockman was handling the projectile when it exploded.

The Hockmans are a missionary family. The father was a missionary in China for thirty years. The young doctor was born in China in 1907 during the Boxer rebellion, attended a British boarding school at Chefoo, went to London with his family when he was 17 and received his medical training at the Northwestern university medical school. His marks in the state board examination were said to be the second highest in the history of Illinois.

Never Saw His Baby.

Surviving are his widow, the former Winifred Thompson of New Concord, O., and his 6 weeks old daughter, Ruth, whom her father had never seen; two brothers, Charles Hockman, 4831 North Rockwell street, and Donald Hockman, a senior at Wheaton college; one sister, Mrs. Paul D. Friederichsen of Grand Rapids, Mich., and his parents.

The widow and her baby are at present in Egypt, where Dr. Hockman sent them when the war began. The baby was born there. Hockman had applied for leave recently to visit Egypt to see his daughter, but Red Cross authorities told him his services on the front could not be dispensed with.

GEM THEFT HOAX HEARING UNWINDS BIT OF MYSTERY

Police Deny Knowledge of Plot; Charges Fly.

The complex story of how Meyer Bogue, ex-convict from Indiana and erstwhile police and government informer, staged the $35,000 jewel robbery hoax in the loop last Sunday and then proceeded further to dupe law enforcement officials was retold with some new decorations yesterday before Judge Matthew D. Hartigan in felony court.

The occasion was the arraignment of Bogue and four henchmen he double crossed—three of whom have confessed—and at the conclusion of the hearing, carried out in town hall style, Judge Hartigan announced a continuance until next Tuesday morning to give the participants in the robbery an opportunity to employ counsel.

Police Deny Knowing of Plot.

Police officials and their assistants who shed considerable light on the complicated robbery mystery all denied they had previous knowledge that the robbery was to be staged. The victim of the robbery, Milton J. Jackson, 210 West 90th street, New York City, a jewel salesman, was held up at the corner of Wabash avenue and Monroe street.

It was again related that the plot was framed by Bogue, who arranged the holdup in order that he might, in turn, "solve" it, impress the officers of the Jewelers' association by whom he was employed, and thus retain his job as informer, loss of which was threatened by his previous inactivity.

One official of the Jewelers' association admitted that he "had an idea a robbery was to be staged some time or other. He said Bogue invited him to be present to witness the holdup of Jackson.

Albert Ellbogen, a member of the committee of the jewelers' association formed to help prevent and prosecute jewel robberies, said that about ten days ago, at Bogue's request, he found Frank Pishaw, 4300 Ellis avenue, a clerk in a loop jewelry store.

Gets a Strong Robbery Hint.

"Bogue then told me he was going to have Pishaw 'point out' a man for him," Ellbogen testified. "On the Friday preceding the robbery of Jackson, Bogue told me he was going to meet Pishaw Sunday morning and he was going to point out Jackson. Bogue asked me if I wanted to see it done. I declined. I didn't know just what he had in mind."

Q.—Did you know there was to be a robbery? A.—I imagined there would be at some time.

Judge Hartigan heard four solid hours of testimony from other officials of the jewelers' association and the police officials, who denied they knew Bogue was to double cross them all.

The hearing threatened to grow lively once when Chief of Detectives John L. Sullivan complained on the witness stand that he had not been informed by Capt. John Stege of the devious plan to trap the jewel robbers. He indicated by his testimony that dissension exists among the police officials.

Says He Ordered All Arrested.

"I was told of this thing over the telephone just before the arrests were made," testified Sullivan. "Sergt. Thomas Alcock called me and said somebody in the case was to 'get a pass' [be freed of complicity] and he did not like the set-up. I told him to arrest everybody concerned and he said Capt. Stege was in charge. I told him to lock up Stege if he interfered."

J. R. McWhorter, chief postoffice inspector for the Chicago district, admitted he was something of a sponsor of Bogue, the Indiana convict informer. He recommended him, he admitted, to William A. Schlossman, president of the jewelers' association, when the latter asked him for "a reliable informant" who could get some information on jewel robberies.

Capt. Stege, who was in charge of the police activities of the case, admitted that he had dealings with Bogue, which started when the latter was sent to him by McWhorter as an informer on Dillinger gangsters. Bogue, he said, helped the police to clean up five or six "good gangs."

Stege Gets Suspicious.

Capt. Stege said he became suspicious of the affair just before the arrests were made, and for that reason informed the state's attorney's office of the plot, the apparent aim of which was to trap the gem robbers and some receivers of stolen gems as well. He said as the negotiations progressed he became convinced that Bogue was trying to entrap two men as fences, instead of making it possible for the police to arrest the two in the act of actually soliciting the purchase of the gems, as Bogue had said they would do when he brought the stolen jewels to the office of Inspector McWhorter the same night they were stolen.

"I said, 'It looks like a conspiracy,' and I was not going to get a lot of policemen in trouble and maybe go to the penitentiary and take a lot of people with me," said Stege. "I went to the state's attorney's office and put the matter before Lieut. Kelly."

Much Still Unexplained.

Most of the policemen connected with the case said they became suspicious at some time or other "that all was not well," but no explanation was offered as to why the arrest of the robber gang and alleged "receivers" was heralded publicly as a clean-up of a national jewelry theft ring.

Assistant State's Attorney Charles S. Dougherty said he did not believe the confessed robbers were entrapped by Bogue, but acted on the belief that it was an ordinary, profitable robbery. He therefore asked that James [Lefty] Brezak, paroled Indiana convict; Harry Malin, 1208 S. 57th court, Cicero, and Patrick Sullivan, bartender in a saloon at 4210 Emerald avenue, and Pishaw, the alleged finger man, be held in $20,000 bonds each pending action Tuesday. This request was granted by the judge. Bogue also is in custody. None of the defendants testified.

SHOPPING THRONG RECALLS BOOM DAYS

The crowds of shoppers in the loop yesterday were so dense that apparently nearly everybody will receive a Christmas gift. This picture was made in State street at Washington street, looking northward.

LOOP THRONGED AS IN OLD DAYS; MERCHANTS GAY

Multitudes of Shoppers Are Equally Merry.

BY MARCIA WINN.

"It's coming back!" exclaimed State street merchants yesterday as Christmas shoppers jammed the great retail thoroughfare.

The "it" referred to, according to the State street council, is that almost forgotten period when all Chicago went a-Christmas-ing to the loop.

"This is one of the best days we've ever had," said one store official as he peered from his office window out over the sidewalks black with surging people. "The same Saturday last year was the best since 1930, but we've already beaten 1934 by a wide margin, and the day isn't over yet."

It Pans Out Real Gold.

Thereby, he pointed out, State street passed its own self-imposed "acid test," for yesterday had been set aside as a test day to determine whether or not the seemingly bumper sales of last week were due to foresighted shoppers, or were the beginning of a greater volume of Christmas buying.

"We were concerned," the official continued, "for the season started much earlier than usual this year, and has continued to be good right along."

State street itself was ready for the day. A double trafic force controled every street intersection. Mounted policemen guarded every other corner. Bus passengers were assisted onto coaches by cheerful sidewalk attendants—a holiday concession.

Carolers Lend Color to Scene.

Here and there a group of carolers paused, lifting their voices in clear Christmas song against the roar of street car and crowd. Red cloaked Salvation Army cadets merrily tinkled their bells and blew their trumpets. The shoppers, they reported happily, are "giving again."

Shops were elaborately decorated. Christmas trees, many of them sparkling with colored lights, were suspended from windows, or stood before entrances. Festoons of holly swung overhead. Red ribboned wreaths hung in window and on door. And, as a final tribute to "test day," the weather man permitted a light snowfall.

Windows Duly Appreciated.

Toy windows were obscured from morning until night by children trying to peer around or step between adults who had got there first. All enjoyed the animated scenes from toyland. In one, a smiling Santa Claus was receiving his Christmas facial, whisker trim and shine from a Mickey Mouse contingent. In another, a life size Tarzan swung nimbly in his jungle. Further on, Old King Cole nodded gaily as his three fiddlers sawed away.

Trafic policemen and merchants alike say cheerfulness dominates the 1935 Christmas shoppers. They progressed down State street an inch at a time, buffeted from side to side [and buffeting in return], but they progressed merrily.

As one woman exclaimed when she was shoved bodily from one corner of the sidewalk to another—"Say, this is good for me. If I keep pounding all around and from side to side, I'll lose a pound an hour."

CARNEGIE ENDOWMENT FOR PEACE MARKS ITS 25TH ANNIVERSARY

New York, Dec. 14.—(AP)—The Carnegie endowment for international peace celebrated its 25th anniversary today, hailing as partially accomplished the aims of its founder.

Trustees and foreign representatives of the endowment met in a room at the home of Mrs. Andrew Carnegie where conferences leading to establishment of the foundation had been held at the call of the late industrialist.

Dr. James Brown Scott, of Washington, secretary of the endowment, said "already enough has been done to justify Mr. Carnegie's bequest and to enable us to predict that largely through its endless activity Mr. Carnegie's dream of a world at peace may become a reality."

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia university, is president of the endowment.

FINED $300; GOES TO CELL.

Irwin Flight, 25 years old, 6022 Berenice avenue, was fined $300 yesterday by Municipal Judge Leon Edelman for disorderly conduct. Unable to pay the fine, he was taken to the Bridewell.

CHRISTMAS MAIL TO EUROPE BREAKS FORMER U. S. RECORDS

New York, Dec. 14.—(AP)—The postoffice reported today Christmas mail from the United States to European countries had set an all time record this year. There were 59,697 sacks loaded on outbound mail vessels at New York this week. The previous record was 44,434 sacks last year.

This year's record total was carried on six vessels, which the postoffice counted as the only "Christmas mail ships," as they were the only vessels which sailed after Dec. 1 in time to have their mail cargoes reach European destinations by Christmas day.

That mail required three storerooms, each 400 by 300 feet, in the New York postoffice while awaiting ships. Thomas C. Walter, superintendent of the foreign mails, said this was the first time all the unmoved foreign mail could not be stored in two of those rooms. The records only go back 5 years.

The average weight of a sack of mail is about 40 pounds, making this year's Christmas mail total a fraction under 12,000 tons.

POLICE GUARD SANTA; CANDY IS GIVEN AWAY

Oxnard, Cal., Dec. 14.—[Special.]—a police bodyguard had to accompany Santa Claus on the streets here today because the city fathers feared mob violence against old St. Nick.

A week ago, when Santa first arrived in town, he greeted all the children in the city plaza with free candy. But when the candy supply ran out ruffians knocked him down and walked on him, tore his whiskers and left his coat and trousers in tatters.

So Santa is not going to take any more chances—he'll be well supplied with candy and will have a police bodyguard just in case.

400 WOMEN HEAR RACKETS BLAMED FOR FOOD PRICES

New York, Dec. 14.—(AP)—Women were told tonight that a $100,000,000 annual racket levy and their own ignorance in scientific buying were responsible for the high price of food here.

Four hundred women gathered at a session of the Women's Conference Against the High Cost of Living.

William Fellowes Morgan said the toll exacted by food racketeers was one cause of boosted costs.

Donald E. Montgomery, consumer counsel of the Agricultural Adjustment administration, asserted, however, that "the cost of food is not out of line with other factors measuring the extent of recovery."

Morgan, referring to the AAA, said "its repercussions of increased food costs" are now being felt.

Compared with other costs, Montgomery contended, food prices were not high, although he said they were "a little high" when compared with factory pay rolls and with farmers' income.

SHOWBOAT GOES UPON SHOALS OF 77-B BANKRUPTCY

The Great Lakes Showboat corporation, 100 North La Salle street, owners and operators of the showboat Dixiana, yesterday filed a voluntary petition in the United States District court asking for reorganization under section 77-B of the amended bankruptcy law. The company has been presenting old time theatrical performances on the boat, which is moored in the north branch of the Chicago river at Diversey parkway. The petition, filed by the law firm of Ekern & Meyers, lists the company's liabilities at approximately $140,000. The assets consist of the showboat of undetermined value and its theatrical paraphernalia. The case was assigned to Federal Judge Philip L. Sullivan.

OFFICIALS 'PASS BUCK' IN LIGGETT SLAYING INQUIRY

Minnesota Law and Order League Demands Action.

BY WAYNE THOMIS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Minneapolis, Minn., Dec. 14.—[Special.]—With county and state law enforcing officials refusing to accept direct responsibility for the investigation into the murder of Walter Liggett, the Hennepin county chapter of the Minnesota Law and Order league today demanded some "constituted authority" take over active direction of the hunt for the slayers.

Reluctance of both County Attorney Edward Goff and Attorney General Harry H. Peterson to take charge of the investigation was pointedly illustrated today when the attorney general demand that he had agreed to do more than coöperate with police and other prosecuting authorities. His statement, he said, was his reply to reports early today that he had taken full charge of both the investigation and the prosecution of the Liggett case.

Goff Fends Off Questioners.

Most of the reports emanated from the office of County Attorney Edward Goff, who said that "every bit of evidence in the Liggett case has been turned over to the attorney general's office." Questioners asked if the county attorney's office would be responsible for the search for machine gun gangsters who killed Liggett. They were told that the attorney general had "taken over everything." Further questions were referred to Peterson's office in St. Paul.

"Apparently neither wants to take the lead in probing into this case," said Merrill Hutchinson, head of the Law and Order league, when he was apprised of conditions today.

"Our group demands that one or the other of the officials take active charge. We don't care which one, but some one must be held responsible or this investigation, like the one following Howard Guilford's murder a year ago, will die a natural death."

Don't Want Case "Ignored."

"We are prepared to offer considerable aid to authorities and we do not propose to have this case ignored," Hutchinson added. "Local people must step in now that the federal agencies have refused to act."

Attitude of the authorities, according to observers, is reflected in police efforts to solve the crime. It was pointed out that one of the city detectives who has been assigned to the case and told to check every detail of the alibi of Kid Cann, hoodlum, who has been identified by Edith Liggett, the editor's widow, as one of the men who killed her husband, is one of Cann's best friends.

The policeman, Joseph A. Lehmeyer, formerly was chief of police of Minneapolis under another mayor. While chief in September, 1933, Lehmeyer suddenly left the city without notifying any of the city authorities. He flew to Oklahoma City, Okla., where Cann and six other Twin Cities hoodlums were under indictment in connection with the kidnaping of Charles F. Urschel, oil millionaire. There Lehmeyer appeared as a defense witness, testifying in behalf of the gangsters.

Under No Compulsion to Go.

Upon Lehmeyer's return here A. G. Bainbridge, then mayor, immediately removed him from his post as police chief and conducted an investigation into the circumstances of his hurried trip south. It was learned that Cann's defense attorney had telephoned to Lehmeyer from Oklahoma City and asked him "to come right down." Lehmeyer was not under compulsion of a defense subpena when he left Minneapolis, although he was served with the paper upon his arrival at the trial.

Partly as a result of testimony given at that time by Lehmeyer, Cann and four of the others were freed by the Urschel jury. Two of the group were convicted, however, and sentenced to serve five years in the penitentiary. All the men were brought into the case through the tracing of portions of the ransom money to them.

Neither Lehmeyer nor any of the other detectives working on the Liggett case have reported any facts save that Cann's alibi has been thoroughly checked and found to be "air tight."

Olson "Challenges" U. S.

During the afternoon, Gov. Floyd Olson, through his public relations counsel in St. Paul, issued a "challenge" to United States Attorney General Cummings to make the Liggett murder investigation an occasion for airing all charges that the Twin Cities are "hot beds" of crime.

Referring to editorials and news stories which recounted crime conditions here, the governor informed Attorney General Cummings that these accounts "have created an obligation upon you to honor our requests for the use of department of justice operatives in the investigation of circumstances surrounding the Liggett murder."

Shortly before noon today police received a communication from Chief Deputy Coroner William Schlaeger of Cook county. He asked that one of the death bullets be sent to Chicago for comparison with bullets used in gang shootings and other unsolved murders there. Without mentioning specific slayings, the deputy coroner's letter said reports were current there that a Chicago gang had been renting machine guns to hoodlums of the Twin Cities territory.

Suspect Engages Counsel.

During the day Kid Cann made his first defense effort. Held since Monday night, a few hours after the murder, when he sauntered into police headquarters and offered his alibi, the prisoner previously had maintained that he did not need a lawyer.

Today he engaged Thomas McMeekin, St. Paul criminal lawyer who defended the Roger Touhy gang in the Hamm kidnaping case, as his counsel. Friends engaged Mortimer Boutell, Minneapolis criminal attorney, to coöperate with McMeekin. It was believed that Cann will attempt to force the state's hand tomorrow by filing a petition for a writ of habeas corpus. Hitherto no charge has been placed against him.

A TRIBUNE reporter today visited Mrs. Florence Davis, head of the Hennepin county child welfare bureau, the organization which County Attorney Goff has said turned over to him the information upon which Walter Liggett was prosecuted and acquitted of a statutory charge involving a 17 year old girl.

Origin of Charges Is Hazy.

Mrs. Davis, who has been head of the bureau for 15 years through half a dozen political administrations, was asked the origin of that prosecution.

"I've never been able to discover who brought the information into my office," she said. "The circumstances were rather peculiar.

"Last April 23, when I came into the office in the morning, I found a sheaf of mail, just like this [raising a pile of mail which had been opened and spread out on her desk].

"Among other papers was a copy of an affidavit signed by Theresa Hall of Austin, Minn., and naming Walter Liggett. The affidavit was not notarized and there was no date upon it. Attached to this affidavit was another by a young woman clerk in the Ritz hotel of this city, which also was unnotarized and undated.

Gives Papers to Goff.

"The charges were so serious that some preliminary investigation was made immediately. We often have material sent us anonymously and so it was not so strange as it might seem. I'd never heard of Walter Liggett at that time, but after I'd made inquiry I discovered he was the publisher.

"The preliminary work checked with the affidavits and so I visited the girl's home in Austin and talked with her. She admitted signing the affidavit and then I returned to Minneapolis and turned it all over to County Attorney Goff.

"I recall he told me when I went to his office that a copy of the same affidavit had been given to him, but he said he had done nothing about it.

Asked to Sign Affidavit.

"Theresa told us that a man who gave his name as Larson and said he was an oil salesman had asked her to sign the affidavit. Larson told her he knew all about the night Liggett and Frank Ellis spent with her and another girl in the Ritz hotel. [Ellis since has been convicted of abduction in connection with the same incident.]

"She said Larson arranged for her to come to Minneapolis and finally took her to the office of a lawyer, Lindahl O. Johnson. There she also met a woman who Larson told her was his wife. They got her to sign the affidavit when Johnson told her he wanted to have something to force Liggett to pay some notes due the attorney."

Close Friend of Gov. Olson.

Mrs. Davis said her office had treated the case as a routine matter and had followed the orders of the county attorney's office after it was turned over to Goff. She said she was a good friend of Gov. Olson because she had worked closely with him during the years the governor had been county attorney of Hennepin county.

Joseph A. Granbeck, Liggett's boyhood friend and defense lawyer at the trial, yesterday said he had attempted to subpena both Attorney Johnson and the mysterious "Larson," who never has been found. Granbeck said Liggett had proved during the trial that Emil Olson, state oil inspector at Austin, and Olson's sister had been present when the Hall girl made her affidavit. Emil Olson, while not a relative of Gov. Floyd Olson, is a state employé who campaigned for the governor at the last election.

SEIZE BANKER'S WIFE ON CHARGE OF HAULING LIQUOR INTO NEW YORK

Port Chester, N. Y., Dec. 14.—[Special.]—Liquor "trafic" across the Connecticut border into Westchester county was halted abruptly today when a liquor dealers' organization caused the arrest of a woman who allegedly violated the alcoholic beverage control law by transporting liquor from one state to another.

Mrs. Frank D. Potter of Rye, wife of a New York banker, was arrested here while driving to her home from Greenwich, Conn., where she had purchased four bottles of gin and six bottles of wine.

The wine, it was reported, cost a little more in Connecticut than it does in New York, but the gin is $2.40 a case cheaper. The difference in price results from the absence of a state tax in Connecticut.

Mrs. Potter was taken before Police Judge Abraham Lunick and released for hearing on Friday.

SCHALL ASKS U.S. PRESS TO BACK MINNESOTA FIGHT

Freedom of Newspapers Declared Goal.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 14.—[Special.]—In a vigorous denunciation of the alliance between crime and politics in Minnesota, Senator Thomas D. Schall [Rep., Minn.] today called upon the American press to join in a united effort to restore freedom of the press in Minnesota. His statement dealt with the assassination of Walter Liggett, Minneapolis editor.

Senator Schall asserted the most hopeful prospect in the Minnesota situation is the plea of Col. Robert R. McCormick, publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE and chairman of the freedom of the press committee of the American Newspaper Publishers' association, to the press of America to restore freedom in the state. This call, Schall said, gives assurance that the press of Minnesota will not be alone in the fight but will be backed by a united press, "a force more powerful than any group of office holding politicians—state, local, or federal."

Publisher Is Quoted.

"Col. McCormick calls upon the press of America—faced with the slaying of Walter Liggett at his editorial post—'to take every act necessary to restore freedom of the press in Minnesota,'" Schall said, and then continued:

"Liggett was slain—declares Col. McCormick—as the result of a terrible alliance between crime and politics. The slaying of Liggett and his martyred predecessor, Howard Guilford, is termed by the Chicago publisher an effort to throw the entire press of the state under a reign of terror.

Mrs. Liggett, despairing of state and local aid, has petitioned the attorney general in Washington. But when the federal machine is married to the state machine and is sending millions of public funds from Washington to St. Paul to effect a campaign coalition, an appeal to the federal government seems to be on all fours with a petition to the state government, which was the target of editorial attacks of both Liggett and Guilford."

Wants Bosses Stopped.

Senator Schall said the 700 newspaper editors and publishers in Minnesota have the nation behind them. The investigation, he said, should not end with the "finding and electrocuting of the weak tool who fired the gun, but the political gang behind the gun should be the main objective to achieve justice and lasting results.

"Thus the best news that has come to Minnesota in many a day of this prolonged terrorism—these several years of the 'terrible alliance between crime and politics'—is the call of Col. McCormick," the senator continued, "the call to take every act necessary to restore the freedom of the press in Minnesota."

Pleads for Justice.

"I trust that the people of Minnesota will speedily avail themselves of that national coöperation. I trust that my fellow townsmen and my friends throughout the 87 counties will give every practical aid to that helping hand. Let no stone be unturned until the organized political and criminal ring that has terrorized the state, robbed the banks, kidnaped distinguished citizens, disrupted industry and business, cracked down on citizens in the peaceful pursuits of daily life, and piled up public debt and taxes as the penalties thereof—shall be brought to justice."

GEORGIA ANTI-REVOLT LAW CALLED INVALID IN LATEST ATTACKS

Atlanta, Ga., Dec. 14.—(AP)—More issues in the legal battle over Georgia's ancient insurrection law were raised today by attorneys for Angelo Herndon, colored communist. Herndon gained temporary freedom a week ago from an 18 to 20 year chain gang sentence for "attempting to incite rebellion."

In a cross bill of exceptions the lawyers contended Superior Judge Hugh M. Dorsey erred by failing to rule the law unconstitutional because it restricted the colored man's right of free speech, free press, and free assembly.

Judge Dorsey, in holding the law invalid last Saturday, ruled it was too vague and indefinite. The state appealed.

Herndon was released on $8,000 bond awaiting a state Supreme court ruling in January or March. Both sides have indicated an intention of carrying the case to the United States Supreme court.

Whitney North Seymour of New York, former assistant solicitor general of the United States, and Elbert P. Tuttle filed the cross bill. Seymour was retained by the International Labor Defense, which has led the fight for Herndon since his conviction in 1932.

LYDIA SWIFT WED TO PAUL ROWAN IN QUIET CEREMONY

Ruth Cain Becomes Bride of Rudy Ruggles.

Miss Lydia Swift became the bride of Paul Rowan yesterday afternoon in the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alden B. Swift, at 209 Lake Shore drive. The Rev. Dudley S. Stark, rector of St. Chrysostom's church, read the ceremony in the presence of relatives and a few close friends, and a reception for the same group followed.

The bride looked stunning in a gown of traditional white satin cut plainly, with long sleeves and trimmed with a deep collar of lace. A veil of tulle and lace fell to the end of a medium length train and she carried a bouquet of white bouvardia.

Mr. Rowan, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Reilly of Sharon, Pa., and his bride repeated their vows before a screen of greens at one end of the Swifts' huge living room. Jefferson D. Currier, with whom the bridegroom shared bachelor quarters for several months, was best man for Mr. Rowan. The bride was unattended.

Quite Large Group at Ceremony.

Although the guests were limited to relatives and close friends there was quite a large group present at the ceremony, for the bride is related to half a dozen prominent Chicago families. Her maternal grandmother is Mrs. William C. Niblack, and her paternal grandfather is Louis F. Swift, who now lives in California and who is a son of the first Gustavus Franklin Swift, founder of the meat packing company that bears his name.

Mr. Rowan and his bride left afterward on a brief wedding trip. They will be at home in the Swifts' apartment during the next few months while Mr. and Mrs. Swift are away on a trip that will take them to New Zealand and Australia.

Miss Elizabeth Katherine Alexander became the bride of Orville Elias Babcock Jr. in the First Presbyterian church of Lake Forest yesterday afternoon, the Rev. Burtis McHatton officiating. Following the ceremony there was a reception at Winwood, the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James G. Alexander.

Bride in White Satin.

The bride wore white satin trimmed with white lace, embroidered in silver, at the square neck and sleeves, which were long and tight. A long veil of the same lace was held in place by a coronet of lace. The bridal bouquet was of white orchids.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Sidney D. Johnson of New York, wore powder blue made in princess style with elbow length sleeves and a high cowl neck. Her slippers, gloves, and hat matched the gown in color and the hat, a small one, was trimmed with a plume of the same color. The bridesmaids were Miss Margaret Taylor of Pittsburgh, Mrs. Newton C. King, Miss Myrtle Lampert, Miss Lillian Lampert, Miss Virginia Ashcraft, and Miss Suzanne Morris.

Bruce Babcock acted as his brother's best man and ushering were Nelson L. Barnes Jr., Aldis J. Browne Jr., Alexis Thompson, Newton C. King, David Schmid, Edson Cook, and Frederic Macfarlane. Mr. Babcock and his bride will live in Lake Forest after a brief wedding journey.

The Ruggles-Cain Wedding.

A special arrangement of lights outside the stained glass windows above the altar illuminated the chapel of the First Methodist Episcopal church of Evanston for the wedding at 8:30 o'clock last night of Miss Ruth Cain and Rudy Lamont Ruggles.

It was an all-white wedding, with the only color note struck by the flowers of Miss Cain's attendants and by the long skirted pink taffeta dress of the little flower girl, Patty Williams, the Preston H. Williams' daughter.

Mrs. Norman B. Johnson, the matron of honor, and Mrs. Wallace D. Mackenzie and Mrs. Charles F. Meyer, the bridesmaids, were dressed alike in white crêpe threaded with silver lame, with V necks and short trains.

Dr. Wolfe Officiates.

Dr. Paul Wolfe performed the ceremony, and Rolly M. Cain gave his daughter in marriage. Norman B. Johnson was Mr. Ruggles' best man, and H. Robinson Safford, Albert Johnson, James Munro and Dr. Wallace D. Mackenzie were ushers.

White chrysanthemums and cedar boughs decorated the Glen View club for the reception following. Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Emery Ruggles of Brookline, Mass., parents of Mr. Ruggles, were in the receiving line with the bride and groom and Mr. Cain.

Mr. Ruggles and his bride will be at home at 1519 Hinman avenue, Evanston, after Dec. 21.

Vierling-Cushing Wedding.

Miss Floyd Cushing, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel T. Cushing of Bogalusa, La., and Robert Louis Vierling, son of Mrs. Louis Vierling of Chicago, were married yesterday in the chapel of St. Matthew's Episcopal mission in Bogalusa. Barbara Cushing, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Her brother, Frederick, acted as best man. The other groomsmen were Charles W. Goodyear III. of Bogalusa, and Roy R. Black Jr. and John L. McNeil, both of Chicago.

GUNMEN GET $325 PAY ROLL.

BORAH STRENGTH IN N. Y. TOLD BY HAMILTON FISH

New York, Dec. 14.—(AP)—Representative Hamilton Fish Jr., mentioned as a presidential possibility, tonight said Senator William E. Borah would have "plenty of friends and delegates" in New York if he sought the Republican nomination.

Scoffing at a prediction by Melvin Eaton, Republican state chairman, that New York delegates at the G. O. P. convention will support a midwestern business man, Fish said:

"When he says that delegates from New York state will be against Senator Borah he is talking for himself and the old order and reactionaries.

"I do not know whether Senator Borah will be a candidate or not. He will make known his decision during the next two or three weeks, but if he is a candidate he will have plenty of friends and delegates from New York City and upstate."

Fish added that if Borah becomes a candidate "he will be easily nominated and elected." With him, Fish declared, Borah would return control of the house of representatives to the Republicans.

JAIL BREAKER WINS WAY WITH SMUGGLED GUN

New Brunswick, N. J., Dec. 14.—[Special.]—Armed with a smuggled revolver, Edward Metelski, 27 years old, who was to have gone on trial for his life Monday for the murder of a state trooper, seized the Middlesex County jail here this afternoon, locked an assistant warden in a cell, and then forced another prisoner to flee with him.

A few minutes later he and his companion, Paul Semenkewitz, 22 years old, slugged Lawrence Offenbecker, an automobile mechanic, in an unsuccessful attempt to obtain an automobile for their flight. This occurred only two blocks from the three story county jail, adjacent to the county courthouse.

POULTRY STORE ROBBED.

Two men armed with revolvers entered C. V. Fowler's poultry store at 5926 South Ashland avenue late yesterday and robbed him of $50.

U. S. ATTORNEY'S ASSISTANT HURT IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Assistant United States Attorney Martin Ward, 41 years old, 6206 Wabansia avenue, was painfully injured last night when the automobile he was driving crashed into a parked car at McCormick boulevard and Main street, Niles Center. He was taken to the St. Francis hospital in Evanston. There it was found Mr. Ward had incurred a chest contusion when he was thrown against his steering wheel and physicians advised him to remain for observation.

The coroner's office announced that up to 2 p. m. yesterday 961 persons had been killed by automobiles in Cook county since Jan. 1. In the same period 747 were killed and 16,870 injured within the Chicago city limits.

William Scofield, 20 years old, 823 North Lamon avenue, a filling station attendant, died early today in Garfield Park hospital of injuries received last Thursday when the car in which he was riding crashed into an elevated railroad pillar in front of 4527 West Lake street.

WOMAN, 78, DIES OF POISON.

Miss Louise Reinholdtsen, 78 years old, 2741 North Wabansia avenue, died in the County hospital yesterday apparently from the effects of having swallowed a quantity of poison on Thursday.

The boy had suffered a fractured arm and other injuries when he fell off a haystack on his father's farm and was taken to the hospital.

LICENSE BY MAIL AVOIDS CROWDS, MOTORISTS TOLD

Secretary of State Edward J. Hughes announced yesterday that motorists planning to purchase their license plates from the branch office at 120 South Ashland avenue can avoid the crowds there and obtain their plates within a few days by applying by mail to Springfield, where improved facilities have speeded up service. Secretary Hughes said the sale of plates is running far ahead of last year. At the Chicago branch, he said, plates are being sold at the rate of 10,000 daily.

Robbers Menace 8 in Shop; Take $400 and Seize Auto

Three masked robbers entered the R. & R. hosiery store on the sixth floor at 300 West Adams street last evening and fled with $400 from the cash register after forcing five members of the store staf and three women customers to lie on the floor. Outside the building the bandit trio took an automobile from Miss Florence Walsh, 2515 Pine Grove avenue, and drove away in it. Among those held up in the hosiery store were Joseph Reeder, the owner, and his wife, Pauline.

LABOR TURNOVER IN BRAIN TRUST SETS A RECORD

Can't Stand Roosevelt Policies, Many Quit.

President's plan for international stabilization of currencies. But Prof. Moley remaining behind undermined Hull and soon had the President converted to an isolationist policy in general and the commodity dollar in particular.

Then Moley went to London to interpret the mind of the President to the conference and Herbert Bayard Swope went along to interpret the mind of Moley to the world press. Moley sidetracked Hull, the British dealt with Moley and took Moley into camp. Then suddenly the President kicked over Moley's negotiations and scuttled the conference with his commodity dollar cablegram.

Moley came home under a cloud and Hull regained the ascendancy, though he could save nothing from the conference. When Hull came home it was a question whether he or Moley would have to resign. It was clear the two rivals could not remain in the state department. The President decided to keep Hull and transfer Moley to the department of justice to study Crime.

Dislikes Eclipse; Quits.

But Moley did not enjoy his eclipse and he soon seized the opportunity to get out of the administration. He became editor of the Roosevelt organ Today, the angel of which is Vincent Astor, the President's yachting crony. Though out of the administration, Prof. Moley has continued to be an ex-officio member of the brain trust, standing ace high at the White House.

Uninterruptedly he has continued to have a hand in shaping policies and the President's state papers. One of Washington's little amusements is to read an editorial one week in Today advocating a certain policy, to read a presidential message the next week asking congress to enact the policy into legislation, and an editorial the succeeding week praising the wisdom of the administration in adopting the proposal. But it is all Moley from start to finish.

When Moley was in his ascendency in the state department, Mr. Baruch was much in the limelight. While Mr. Hull and Prof. Moley both were in London Mr. Baruch occupied the Moley office. It was rumored that Mr. Baruch would be secretary of state if Mr. Hull were forced out. But when Mr. Hull returned and regained his prestige at the White House Mr. Baruch faded out of the picture.

Big Money Man.

Mr. Baruch was a large contributor to the Roosevelt campaign fund and was entitled to handsome preferment. But the logical portfolio to have given him, that of secretary of the treasury, was politically out of the question because he was a stock market speculator.

Moreover, he was as much against devaluation of the currency as was Senator Carter Glass who refused the proffered post because of distrust of the President Elect's money views.

For a long time, however, and even after devaluation, Mr. Baruch enjoyed close relations with the President. He had a good deal to do with the selection of Mr. Peek to head the AAA and everything to do with the choice of Gen. Hugh Johnson to head the NRA. Both were his protéges and Johnson was in his employ.

Eventually, however, the President and Mr. Baruch began to drift apart. Though a foe of devaluation, Mr. Baruch was reaping handsome profits from gold mines he had owned for years and silver mines in which he became interested after the advent of the New Deal—profits due to the Roosevelt monetary policies.

But as a bedfellow of the brain trust Mr. Baruch was becoming more and more unhappy. He ill concealed his conviction that the administration was going haywire with brain trust schemes. His visits to the White House became rarer and eventually ceased.

Douglas Disillusioned.

Lewis H. Douglas, whom Mr. Roosevelt appointed director of the budget, got his fill of the New Deal in less than a year and a half, though he hung on out of a sense of loyalty long after he had become disillusioned. He entered the administration full of enthusiasm for the Roosevelt economy program which was to reduce the cost of the federal government by not less than 25 per cent, the Democratic platform pledge.

He had a big hand in putting through the economy legislation which curtailed expenditures to the extent of several hundred millions annually. All went well with his relations with the New Deal until the effacement of the economies began, and the brain trust plans for the socialization of the government and the Roosevelt monetary policy began to take shape. He opposed devaluation of the currency and the huge public works program which he pronounced economically unsound and it was on this latter score that he eventually resigned.

But for a long time before that he had found himself excluded from White House councils because of his opposition to the New Deal experiments and the inflationary directions of the Roosevelt fiscal policies.

Dean Acheson Fired.

The next victim of the Roosevelt monetary schemes was Dean Acheson, undersecretary of the treasury, who owed his appointment in the first place to Mr. Douglas. Acheson opposed the gold purchase scheme in the fall of 1934 and the President summarily replaced him without allowing him to send in his resignation. Mr. Roosevelt said Acheson was a nice boy, but a lightweight.

Another victim at about this same time was Prof. O. M. W. Sprague, who had been the President's instructor at Harvard and who had been brought into the administration as adviser to the secretary of the treasury. In September, 1934, Prof. Sprague completed a plan for conversion of the Liberty loans. Then along came the gold purchase experiment and knocked the conversion plans into a cocked hat.

Sprague had not been taken into the President's confidence on the gold purchase policy and did not know it was impending. He resigned in a long letter which raked the administration monetary tinkering fore and aft.

James P. Warburg, son of a great financier, was a charter member of the brain trust, once wrote its history. But he didn't last long after the President began to pull fiscal rabbits out of his hat.

Warburg was sent to London at the time of the economic conference to negotiate international currency stabilization. But he came home disillusioned after Mr. Roosevelt repudiated the negotiations and came out for a commodity dollar. He ceased all connection with the administration and became one of the most inveterate and forceful assailants of New Deal economics.

The currency devaluation policy sprang from the brains of Prof. George F. Warren of Cornell university and James Harvey Rogers of Yale. For several months they enjoyed the ascendancy in the administration. There came a time, however, when the President evinced disillusionment with respect to the devaluation experiment.

Rogers Sent to China.

The manipulation of the currency had not produced the rise in prices that he had been promised. The visits of the two professors to the White House became few and far between. Prof. Rogers was sent to China to study the silver question and several months later returned and submitted a report reputed to have been most unfavorable to the administration silver policy. The report was promptly suppressed.

Gen. Johnson got out just ahead of the collapse of the NRA, and Donald Richberg, his successor, fell when the Supreme court gave the institution its coup de grace in a decision riddling the case Richberg had chosen as an easy one for the government to win. Richberg is practicing law in Washington and still is on good terms with the White House.

Johnson is out of favor. He goes about the country declaring the Roosevelt policies a failure but recommending Mr. Roosevelt for reelection. Such devotion is entirely too qualified to please the President.

Others Fade from Scene.

There are numerous minor figures that have faded from the picture for one reason or another. Thomas Hewes, assistant secretary of the treasury, quit because he couldn't abide Secretary Morgenthau. J. Crawford Biggs was replaced as solicitor general because he was unequal to the job, but he was given another berth. Seth Thomas resigned the job of solicitor of the department of agriculture after giving an opinion that the Bankhead cotton act is unconstitutional, but he was appointed to the Circuit Court of Appeals.

James A. Moffet, the oil man, relinquished the direction of the housing administration after that venture had proved a good deal of a flop, and Joseph P. Kennedy quit as chairman of the Securities and Exchange commission, presumably to repair his fortunes in the stock market, although it was no secret he was not in sympathy with the holding company legislation.

In another upheaval in the AAA Jerome Frank, Fred Howe, and Gardner Jackson were forced out. Howe and Frank were given other berths, but at present Howe is the only one of the trio still in the administration.

CHICAGO OPENS DRIVE TO GET G.O.P. CONVENTION

Committee Will Meet Fletcher Tomorrow.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 14.—[Special.]—Chicago opened its drive to get the Republican national convention next June as members of the Republican national committee and party leaders gathered here for a meeting Monday to select a convention city and to apportion convention delegates.

Albert D. Lasker and Robert F. Carr, co-chairmen of a citizens committee formed to obtain both Republican and Democratic conventions for Chicago, met in the morning with Henry P. Fletcher, chairman of the Republican national committee. Mr. Lasker, as co-chairman to get the Republican convention was spokesman.

Lasker Pledges $150,000.

Mr. Lasker pledged the city to meet all expenses of the convention up to $150,000. He pointed out the obvious advantages of Chicago in location, rail and hotel facilities.

On Monday he will present his case before the national committeemen. With him will be Mr. Carr, Mayor Kelly and George W. Young, president of the Chicago Association of Commerce. Mr. Carr as co-chairman of the committee to obtain the Democratic convention will make a similar plea at a meeting of Democratic national committeemen next month.

"Chicago is favored by all leaders to whom I have spoken," Mr. Lasker said. "We are very hopeful that Chicago again will get the Republican meeting."

Two Principal Rivals.

Chicago has two serious rivals, Cleveland and Kansas City. The question of finance does not enter into the selection as all three cities are able to meet convention costs, but political reasons may take the meeting from the popular choice, Chicago.

Chicago is the home city of Frank Knox, one of the potential candidates. Kansas City, Mo., is close to the state of Gov. Alf Landon, another potential candidate. These candidates might force selection of Cleveland, not because of any influence home town crowds might have on delegates, but the fact that selection of Chicago or Kansas City might be interpreted as indicating the sentiment of the national committee toward one of the two men.

Reports that the committeemen might decide to hold the convention as late as Aug. 1 in the hope that Democrats would hold their session first continued to circulate as members gathered. Leaders, however, insisted there is no possibility of such action as there is nothing to be gained by such action and campaign time would be lost.

TOWNSEND PLAN TO NAME TICKET ONLY IN DEFENSE

R. E. Clements, one of the leaders of the Townsend plan organization, said in Chicago yesterday he thought the statement of Dr. F. E. Townsend that the pension plan supporters will launch a third party had been misinterpreted.

"We will file petitions in every state," said Clements, "but only for our own protection. I think we will set up our own candidates only where the candidates of both parties agree to soft pedal the Townsend issue."

DUNHAM REFUTES RUMOR HE PLANS GOVERNOR RACE

Denies Published Report He's Democrats' Choice.

BY PARKE BROWN.

Robert J. Dunham, president of the Chicago Park district, said definitly and with finality yesterday that he is not and will not be a candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor.

He made the announcement because of a published assertion that Chicago Democratic leaders had "tentatively selected" him as their entry for the April primary. It was an old story which appeared in a political weekly a month or so ago and was denied at that time. Its new appearance was considered an effort at mischief making.

Choice of Candidate Unsettled.

Mayor Kelly and County Chairman P. A. Nash told representative downstaters a week ago that their minds are open in reference to the selection of a candidate to replace Gov. Horner on the organization slate. Credence for the Dunham story, it was said, would arouse the belief downstate that the Chicagoans were not on the square and might interfere with the later conferences contemplated.

Although the two are close friends and meet frequently, Dunham said the question of his being a governorship candidate had never been discussed between him and Mayor Kelly.

"I undertook the job of president of the consolidated park districts with every intention of completing the tasks confronting me, and my intentions have not been changed a particle. It is a big job, an interesting one. Such things as the reconstruction of Burnham park, the completing of Grant park, finishing the Lincoln park extension, and building the outer boulevard bridge are of sufficient magnitude and interest to absorb my entire energy.

Prefers No Contest.

"I have no political aspirations outside of that field. Under present conditions I would not enter a contest for a political state office. I prefer not to be considered for anything of that sort."

Mayor Kelly is remaining in Washington to join with the nonpartisan committee in urging the Republican national committee at its meeting tomorrow to choose Chicago as its 1936 convention city. No date has been set for the resumption of his and Nash's conference with downstaters concerning the governorship problem.

In the meantime, it was learned yesterday, the state house at Springfield has distributed Horner nomination petition blanks among the downstate counties in an effort to obtain thousands of signatures before the organization leaders select the regular candidate.

Shun Cook County.

The first day for filing petitions is almost two months away. No attempt, it was said at Springfield, will be made to circulate the petition in Cook county at this time.

It also has been disclosed that the imposition of assessments upon state employés as a means of raising a Horner campaign fund has been under way on a large scale for some time. The assessments are called "dues" to the Illinois Iroquois league, which was incorporated recentlly and is said to be under the direction of W. J. Walsh, chairman of the patronage committee. The assessments are said to be on a percentage basis and in proportion to salaries.

R.G.Dunmore Accidentally Slain; N. Y. Ex-Legislator

Utica, N. Y., Dec. 14.—[U. P.]—Russell G. Dunmore, 51, New Hartford Republican, for ten years New York state assembly majority leader, accidentally shot and killed himself tonight while cleaning a revolver in his home, it was reported.

AUTO FISHED OUT OF LAGOON

Driver Wades Out

Joseph Cavanaugh, 61 years old, 940 Glengyle place, a broker, escaped serious injury early yesterday morning when his automobile skidded off the Outer drive in Lincoln park, plunged through a steel fence, and finally came to a stop in a lagoon near the jackknife bridge. The car was only partly submerged and Cavanaugh, uninjured, waded to shore. He told police he was on his way home alone when the car skidded.

HOLDS POLICIES OF ROOSEVELT SLOW RECOVERY

Governor Sees Start of "New Error."

New York, Dec. 14.—[Special.]—Gov. Harold G. Hoffman of New Jersey and Capt. Dan D. Casement of Manhattan, Kas., president of the Farmers' Independence council, today condemned President Roosevelt's New Deal as a threat to American institutions at a luncheon of the National Republican club.

Gov. Hoffman asserted that President Roosevelt had abandoned completely the Democratic national platform and had adopted a socialistic and communistic program. The President's policies, he added, had retarded recovery, impeded business and had not resulted in a reduction in the number of unemployed.

Assails AAA Policy.

Capt. Casement attacked the AAA as violative of natural laws in its program of an "economity and scarcity," and urged the leaders of the Republican party not to be misled into adopting any equally fallacious farm program to attract the votes of farmers, the great majority of whom, he asserted, did not want governmental aid.

"The issue which will confront the country at the election in 1936 is whether the strangling hands of the burocrat will be taken from the throat of American business," Gov. Hoffman said.

"Next Wednesday, I understand, there will be several millions of one dollar silver certificates distributed throughout the country by the treasury department. They will bear the Latin inscription, 'novus ordo seclorum,' which means, in effect, 'the beginning of a new era.' It would be more accurate to say on these New Deal bills 'the beginning of a new error.'"

Relief Is Necessary.

Gov. Hoffman said it was certain that relief must be provided for a large number of Americans and that no American should be permitted to starve because he was without opportunity to earn food.

"Our economic machine has not broken down, although some of the bearings are running hot and there is a lot of alarming noise in the gears. The wheels are turning and we are moving, but there isn't enough power to pull all the passengers who want to ride."

SCAN HOOVER'S TALKS FOR DATA TO AID NEW DEAL

Washington, D. C., Dec. 14.—[Special.]—With White House approval, research experts of several federal departments have been going through the record of past public utterances by Herbert Hoover to discover possible inconsistencies in his position then and now, to discredit his attacks on New Deal principles and, by that device, the arguments of other Republican spokesmen as well.

Search for this campaign material thus far has led to one interesting disclosure—that Hoover's testimony before the house military affairs committee in 1924, when as secretary of commerce he urged the broadest powers for the chief executive in time of war, was strangely missing from the committee files.

Federal workers and their stenographers finally located the printed transcript in the house library and it was being studied tonight for inclusion in a coming address of a high administration official. They said Hoover's proposal for broad presidential powers in event of armed conflict and his subsequent remark that depression is worse than war would dampen considerably his more recent charge that President Roosevelt had demanded of congres "powers reaching to dictatorial dimensions."

Peruvian Ex-Consul Here Held in Toledo for Fraud

Jorge M. Chavarri, former Peruvian consul here, was arrested last night in Toledo on a federal warant charging him with accepting money from American exporters for duties levied by the Peruvian government after he was succeeded Sept. 8, 1933, by Dr. Abel Larrain. The charge was made by Dr. Larrain. Chavarri, who is a part time professor of Spanish at the University of Toledo, denied there ever had been any irregular acts committed by himself and said the charge was motivated by Peruvian politics.

HAUPTMANN PINS HOPE FOR LIFE ON GOVERNOR'S HINT

Expects Reprieve; Calm at News He Must Die.

New York, Dec. 14.—[Special.]—With the same stony calm that has characterized his demeanor since he entered the state prison death house at Trenton, Bruno Richard Hauptmann today received the news that he was to die in the electric chair during the week of Jan. 13 for the kidnaping and murder of the Lindbergh baby.

One reason for Hauptmann's inscrutable calm was seen in the fact that Gov. Hoffman had strongly indicated in an interview earlier in the day that he intends to grant the condemned man a reprieve. At any rate Hauptmann is confident that "something will turn up" to save him from the electric chair, according to Col. Mark O. Kimberling, principal keeper at the state prison.

Hauptmann was resentenced to the electric chair yesterday, but the news was not broken to him until today. The prisoner slept late today, as usual.

Governor Explains Attitude.

In indicating that he would grant Hauptmann a reprieve, Gov. Hoffman said that, in his opinion, execution of the prisoner would not remove doubt from the minds of many concerning the Lindbergh case.

"I have hardly spoken to a person who believes that the execution of Hauptmann will write the final chapter in this crime," he said. "They doubt that there has been complete solution.

"If Hauptmann were to be electrocuted tonight there still would be in my mind, and, I am convinced, in the minds of hundreds of thousands of people, doubt that the Lindbergh baby murder had been solved and that all the facts in connection with the case were known."

Gov. Hoffman is a member of the New Jersey board of pardons. Hauptmann rests his hopes for clemency upon the board and upon a new appeal on the basis of new evidence. The governor has the power to grant up to three reprieves of thirty days each.

Answers His Critics.

Gov. Hoffman replied to criticism that has been directed at him since he visited Hauptmann in the death house.

"I know I stuck my chin out when I openly began consideration of this case," he declared.

"I actually began consideration of the affair from the moment of the conviction, however. I went at the question openly to keep myself square with my conscience. I am not prompted by political ambition or a desire for publicity, as has been said.

"As the situation now stands, death would lock Hauptmann's lips forever. If he later should be found innocent a terrible moral crime would have been committed by electrocution. If he is guilty and accomplices exist all hope of bringing them to justice would be destroyed."

Early today Trenton police said that the arrest in Dallas, Tex., of Joseph Schaz, whose real name is James Capezzi, had no relation to the Lindbergh case, as was reported last night. The man is being brought back to New Jersey to face a robbery charge.

MARK L. REQUA OF CALIFORNIA ARRIVES FOR G. O. P. MEETING

Washington, D. C., Dec. 14.—(AP)—Mark L. Requa, Republican national committeeman for California and personal friend of former President Hoover, arrived today for the national committee meeting on Monday.

Reluctant to comment because "anything I say would be construed as the attitude of Mr. Hoover," Requa denied he had "any ideas whatever" or was "even thinking about anybody" as the possible Republican nominee, including the former President and Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas.

On his way east Mr. Requa stopped over in Topeka for a two hour political and economic discussion with Gov. Landon.

Clipper Ship Arrives at Guam on Way to Manila

GUAM, Dec. 15 [Sunday].—(AP)—The Pan-American Airways Philippine Clipper alighted here at 3:13 p. m. today [11:13 p. m. Saturday, Chicago time]. The trans-Pacific air mail liner, aided by brisk tail winds, covered the 1,536 miles in 9 hours 53 minutes. After a day's stopover the Philippine Clipper will head for Manila, terminus of the 8,000 mile scheduled route from Alameda, Cal. The final lap is 1,700 miles.

REPUBLICAN EYES PLATFORM CAST ASIDE BY RIVALS

Washington, D. C., Dec. 14.—(AP)—Willingness to campaign in 1936 on the Democratic 1932 platform was expressed by Ralph Williams of Oregon, vice chairman of the Republican national committee, as he arrived here today for the committee meeting.

"It's a darn good platform; the Democrats haven't used it, why shouldn't we," he said.

He expressed favor for Chicago as the convention city and said that selection of the home town of any candidate "doesn't change a single vote."

Col. Frank Knox, Chicago publisher, is a Republican presidential possibility.

Landslides Delay Opening of Mexican Highway Again

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 14.—(AP)—Opening of the Mexico City-Laredo highway, scheduled for tomorrow, again has been postponed because of frequent landslides in the mountains in San Luis Potosi and Hidalgo. The department of communications advised tourists today not to come on the road at present.

NRA PREPARING TO QUIT; WEEDS OUT EMPLOYES

Those on Staf Working on Code Histories.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 14.—[Special.]—The NRA quietly prepared today to go out of existence with the serving of dismissal notices, effective Jan. 1, on several hundred of the remaining employés.

Already the weeding process, begun when the Supreme court outlawed the Blue Eagle last May, has cut the staf from 4,500 to 2,000 workers. The dismissals have been carried out slowly under New Deal burocractic red tape.

L. J. Martin, retiring deputy administrator, said he is studying plans for turning the unit over to some other governmental agency. This course was advocated by secretary of commerce Roper's business advisory council.

History Nearly Completed.

Most of the 2,000 employés still on the pay roll are working for the review division, preparing a gigantic history of the codes and a study of various American industries. The history, destined for the national archives, is nearly completed. The stories of 329 codes are in final form and most of the work on 700 others is done.

The typewritten history of the lumber code alone fills 20 feet of shelving in NRA files. The history is to include proposed codes as well as those approved.

Meanwhile, the federal trade commission disclosed that industry apparently wasn't much interested in the voluntary code plan provided in the resolution of last June which extended the life of the NRA until April 1, 1936, before the Supreme court stripped the unit of its powers. The blowup of Administrator George L. Berry's conference with industrial and labor leaders early this week was acknowledged as a death blow to voluntary codes.

Only Nine Are Submitted.

Only nine voluntary codes were submitted. The commission has approved all of these and forwarded them to the NRA for inclusion of labor provisions. One of these—for wholesale tobacco—has been returned to the commission with labor provisions, but the others are still kicking around in the NRA.

These codes were submitted by the braided nonelastic cord, solid braided cord, asbestos manufacturing, candle manufacturing, expanding and specialty paper products, rock and slag wool manufacturing, and fertilizer manufacturing industries.

Other divisions of the NRA still operating include the consumers' research bureau, which publishes a monthly bulletin, and the committee headed by Capt. W. P. Roberts, studying code compliance since the Schechter decision.

Field Force Utilized.

The Roberts committee has utilized the field force in its study. Martin said 250 field workers had been given dismissal notices Dec. 1 but a portion of the force is to be maintained.

President Roosevelt has said he is awaiting reports from the federal trade commission, the NRA and other agencies before he makes a decision on seeking new NRA legislation.

MOSCOW POLICE SEIZE 8 WIVES AS SPECULATORS

MOSCOW, Dec. 14.—(AP)—Police raided an apartment building tonight and arrested all the housewives in it on a charge of speculation.

The wives, eight in number, were accused of purchasing goods from state stores and reselling them at higher prices to persons who were too pressed for time to take part in bargain counter rushes. Eighteen hundred yards of dress cloth, 50 shawls, and a large supply of boots, shoes and galoshes were found in the apartments.

The chairman and secretary of the house committee, the organization representing the tenants which are under the soviet cystem managers of apartment houses, also were arrested and charged with criminal negligence for not reporting the speculation, of which they allegedly were aware.

'Deserving Democrats' Get Best Jobs.

and turned over to the Democratic committee chairman is familiar to all Florans, and further inquiry disclosed the following situation:

Given had the project running in a former dress factory over the general store of a Republican, J. C. Scudamore. The commodious room, 20 by 100, was equipped with three electric sewing machines, an electric cutter, and a 5 by 40 cutting table. There was ample space for the employés that WPA was going to put on the sewing, and a companion public nursing project.

Place Offered Rent Free.

The room and all the equipment was offered rent free when the WPA $19,500 project was approved, providing the Republican's daughter, who had operated the dress factory, was made superintendent "to protect the equipment" from damage at the hands of inexperienced users.

That wouldn't have been in agreement with the Williams order. So the project now is set up in an 18 by 18 room over the store of Myrl Gahan, supervisor of WPA timekeepers in 10 counties. Gahan receives no rent, according to Florans, but gets $35 a month for light and water.

In charge is Mrs. Maude Taylor, wife of the Harter township supervisor, who is a Democratic precinct committeeman. Thirty-four others are crowded into the small room, two men—a janitor and a machinist—25 women who are sewing or learning to sew, a timekeeper, and a graduate nurse and five assistants whom she is teaching practical nursing.

Huddled Closely Together.

Half way up the long flight of stairs to the project room one can hear the hum of conversing women. The hum separates into individual voices as the door is opened. Women are huddled closely together on chairs and benches, some working and some too busy talking to keep fingers at their tasks. All look up calmly, but curious.

"It is mostly a school of instruction," explains Mrs. Taylor, a pleasant woman, who evidenced much satisfaction with the project. "Some are just learning to sew, and it is plain sewing for beginners. We do need more room."

Another tale that catches Flora's fancy is about the efforts of R. E. Renfro, chairman of the county Democratic central committee, to get some one to act as agent for the federal housing administration. Several to whom he offered the job were found to be Republicans. Upon hearing this, Renfro is reported to have turned on heel remarking, "Sorry, but we've got to have a New Deal Democrat."

Favoritism Is Charged.

Names are reeled off in great profusion when one asks for specific instances of WPA jobs going to Democrats who are on some other pay roll or have a farm and a good living. One well known one is Arthur Nugent, farmer, who has charge of the farm-market road project. They cite also instances where Republicans on relief found difficulty in getting transferred to WPA jobs.

Few projects have been approved for Flora, and they say here, rightly or wrongly, that the Democrats are scrapping among themselves for the chief jobs. "They sit like buzzards at Harrisburg, the district WPA headquarters, waiting to grab off the head jobs as soon as projects are approved," the people here say.

Meanwhile, the unemployed shiver in the colder breezes, and wait hopefully for a job.

WRONG WOMAN YEAR IN PRISON; SHE GETS PARDON

Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 14.—(AP)—All because she resembled another woman, Mrs. Louise Botts, 26, of Brazil, Ind., served more than a year in the Indiana woman's prison here.

Gov. McNutt pardoned her today on recommendation both of Mrs. Marian Gallup, superintendent of the prison, and the state clemency commission.

Mrs. Botts was convicted in Kokomo on Nov. 22, 1934, of forgery and sentenced to prison from 2 to 14 years. She swore she was not in Kokomo at the time the bogus checks were passed.

When C. A. O'Neal, chief of police at Kokomo, told the clemency commission that Mrs. Botts undoubtedly was innocent, because similar forged checks have appeared recently, the pardon followed.

GOVERNOR CLINGS TO HOPE OF U. S. AID FOR RELIEF

Alternative in $3,000,000 Deficit Is in Doubt.

Gov. Horner clung last night to the hope that the federal government would extend last minute aid to Illinois to stave off a prospective $3,000,000 a month relief deficit.

The governor, who is in Chicago for the week-end, said he had been trying vainly for two days to telephone to Harry L. Hopkins, federal emergency relief administrator and chief of the Works Progress administration.

Until he had presented the critical situation to Mr. Hopkins, the governor asserted, he would know nothing definite about relief prospects. Mr. Horner apparently was not discouraged by lack of response from the capital.

Talks with IERC Chief.

Late in the afternoon he consulted on the situation with John C. Martin, chairman of the Illinois Emergency Relief commission, but neither man would disclose whether they had evolved any course of action to pursue if the national government persisted in refusing more funds for direct relief.

Louis J. Owen, chief statistician for the IERC, yesterday estimated that Illinois' relief needs for 129,000 families in January would total $4,515,975. This outlay would entail a monthly deficit of approximately $3,000,000 during the first quarter of the year on the basis of present estimates of available cash.

Ralph H. Burke, deputy WPA administrator for Illinois, declared that the WPA is making progress toward removing employables from relief to work relief rolls. To date, he computed, the WPA and other federal work projects have taken 194,743 persons from the relief rolls in Illinois. Of this total 89,515 were put to work by the government in Chicago, according to Mr. Burke.

Assign 4,000 a Day.

"Recent final approvals in Washington, especially for white collar, or professional and service projects, make it possible now for us to issue assignments at the rate of 4000 to 5,000 daily," Mr. Burke said. "This activity means that the total of employables taken from the relief rolls and put to work soon will total 200,000 for the state."

Mr. Burke declared yesterday that the speed with which the WPA office here is daily mailing checks to its employés in Chicago should obviate the need of evicting WPA tenants for nonpayment of rent.

Last week the Municipal court delayed action in 50 eviction cases because the defendants, largely WPA workers, said they were expecting checks with which to pay rent before Christmas.

"Any worker with money coming should receive it before the court order is effective Dec. 26," Mr. Burke said yesterday. "Checks usually are mailed within seven days after the pay rolls are made up."

Posted Within Seven Days.

Raymond Hilliard, attorney for the investigation department of the Illinois Emergency Relief commission, said yesterday that eight persons will be tried before Municipal Judge Eugene Holland tomorrow in relief fraud cases.

Burke announced that the WPA and the IERC would open jointly this week an information service at 10 East 11th street in an effort to speed the solution of the flood of problems presented by relief and WPA clients. He expected the information office to start functioning by Tuesday with a staf of ten persons.

Just a Forwarding Point.

The office will merely receive queries, relaying them to the proper relief and WPA offices at 1319 South Michigan avenue, but it intended to end the crowding which has handicapped the central office in the past.

POSTAL CLERK KILLS SELF AT BRANCH OFFICE

William Bork, 36 years old, 325 North Kilpatrick avenue, a money order clerk in the South Chicago branch postoffice at 92d street and Exchange avenue, closed his window at quitting time last night, balanced his accounts, walked to the shipping room, picked up a .45 calibre pistol which is kept there, and killed himself with a bullet through his heart. Bork had been married only a month ago. His brother, Robert H. Bork, 9721 Avenue H, said he had been ill recently. F. H. Bryar, superintendent at the branch postoffice, said Bork's accounts were in perfect shape..

G. O. P. LAWYER TO DEFEND TVA IN HIGH COURT

Washington, D. C., Dec. 14.—[U. P.]—John Lord O'Brian, a Buffalo Republican, and assistant attorney general in the Hoover administration, has been chosen to defend the New Deal's Tennessee Valley authority program in the Supreme court next Thursday. That was learned today.

The Roosevelt administration's decision to rely upon O'Brian was disclosed as the government filed its brief in defense of the project to develop the Tennessee river basin. Solicitor General Stanley Reed, the New Deal's usual pleader before the court, will develop only a part of the argument.

It was said the decision to employ O'Brian was made long before Reed's collapse on Tuesday while defending the Bankhead cotton control act. He has been special counsel for the TVA in the case brought by the Alabama Power company stockholders.

AGENCY TO TEACH JOBLESS HOW TO HUNT FOR WORK

50 Free Classes Will Be Opened Next Week.

Job hunters will have an opportunity to learn the facts about various occupations next week when 50 classes in "vocational information" are set up in park field houses and other Chicago community centers, it was announced yesterday by William J. Campbell, state director of the National Youth administration.

Students who enroll in the classes will be passed on to a job counseling service which is being developed by the Illinois state employment bureau. Here tests will be available for students to help them determine whether they have the qualifications required for certain kinds of jobs.

The program is the first to offer the general public of Chicago facilities to aid in intelligently planning a search for the "right" job. It will be free of charge. For the past eleven years the school of commerce of New York university has offered a fee course for adults in "vocational orientation" and personality improvement. Tomorrow a research staf of 15 will start gathering material which will be used in the classes. It will have the help of an advisory board comprised of educators who have specialized in the field of occupational guidance.

Stating one of the aims of the program, C. Myers Bardine, assistant state director of the National Youth administration, said:

"We would rather place one person in a permanent job than ten in temporary jobs."

Chicago public schools had a department of vocational guidance that was wiped out in 1931 because of lack of funds to carry on the work, but its services were not available to adults.

R. O. T. C. CADETS JOIN RANKS OF GOOD FELLOWS

Will Help Take Baskets to Needy.

BY PHIL MAXWELL.

Good Fellows will appear in various uniforms at Christmas time. Another was added yesterday—that of the Reserve Officers Training corps. For 317 cadets of the R. O. T. C. at Calumet High school, 8135 South May street, have joined THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE'S annual Good Fellow campaign and the day before Christmas these young men will take baskets of food, toys, and candy to unfortunate families on the south side of the city in the neighborhood of the school.

Cadet First Lieutenant William C. Arnold is chairman and First Lieutenant Fred Rice assistant of the committee planning for the unit's participation. Robert G. Jeffery, principal of the school, will give his cooperation to the movement.

Pupils to Bring Food.

Beginning this morning the students will bring canned goods and nonperishable foodstuff and during the latter part of the week small contributions will be accepted. A special detail of cadets in uniform will distribute the baskets. The Calumet group, the eighth largest in the city and second on the south side, is instructed by Corporal John Berry, U. S. A.

Other persons in uniform who will take baskets are members of the American Legion, aviators, stewardesses, and Boy Scouts.

Dancing feet flew yesterday afternoon in the ballroom of the Ideal Dancing Studios, 3907 Madison street, practicing for a Christmas Good Fellow party which will be given there next Sunday afternoon, from 2 to 4 o'clock, directed by Miss Mayblossom Macdonald. The boys and girls hope to raise enough money at the recital to take 25 Good Fellow baskets to the needy on the west side.

Fraternity Men Will Aid.

Roy J. Maddigan, chairman of Phi Kappa Psi Good Fellows, reports that enough money to purchase 30 baskets has been raised by the fraternity brothers of the late Edward C. Fitch, the original Good Fellow and a member of this group at the Indiana university chapter at Bloomington. A memorial luncheon for Mr. Fitch will be held at 12:30 o'clock, Dec. 23, in the University club and additional funds will be received to add 20 more baskets. More than 300 Phi Psi alumni are expected to attend this service. Final plans for the program and basket distribution will be made at a luncheon on Wednesday.

The Good Fellow bureau at The Tribune's Public Service office at 1 South Dearborn street is expected to be a busy place this week. There still is ample time to join the Good Fellows. You may do so by appearing in person at this bureau, filling in the accompanying Good Fellow coupon or by calling Superior 0100.

Hundreds of letters from unfortunate people are pouring into this bureau daily, asking Good Fellows to remember them at Christmas time. These come from old folks, widowed mothers and girls and boys just old enough to write. To read the letters makes you realize that not all the heroes fought in battles. They tell why there is a Good Fellow movement.

School Boy Fire Marshals Warned of Holiday Perils

Junior fire marshals appointed by high school principals were warned of fire dangers from Christmas trees and decorations at a meeting of the Fire Prevention league of Chicago high schools yesterday at the Chicago Lighting institute. Richard E. Verner, member of the fire prevention committee of the Association of Commerce, explained to the students the proper safeguards against flames.

Plan Memorial Service for First Good Fellow

Alumni members of Phi Kappa Psi, college fraternity to which the original Good Fellow, the late Edward C. Fitch, belonged at Indiana university, plan a memorial service for the originator of the Christmas movement. It will be held at 12:30 p. m. Monday, Dec. 23, in the University club. Roy J. Maddigan, president of the University of Chicago Alumni club and Phi Psi Good Fellow chairman, is holding a picture of Mr. Fitch. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

NIGHT OF STARS SHOW TICKETS ARE SOLD OUT

All tickets have been sold for the Night of Stars, the huge entertainment program scheduled to take place in the Chicago Stadium next Wednesday evening to raise money for Chicago's Own Christmas Benefit fund, which is used to buy clothing for 50,000 needy children in the city, it was announced yesterday by Barnet Hodes, city corporation counsel. Hodes is secretary of Mayor Kelly's committee, which is sponsoring the drive.

Mr. Hodes said $266,000 already has been raised in the campaign. Sale of tickets to the stadium show yielded $95,000 and $100,000 was received from the sale of advertising space in the programs to be distributed to the Night of Stars audience. The city high school championship football game brought in $71,000.

The fund is being audited by George Rossetter & Co. Disbursements of the money are handled by a citizens' committee made up of heads of State street department stores.

SABATH DROPS REALTY BOND HEARINGS HERE

Congressman Adolph J. Sabath [Dem., Chicago], chairman of the house committee investigating real estate bondholders' reorganizations, said yesterday that the meeting of the committee scheduled to be held here tomorrow would be postponed indefinitly for lack of a quorum of committee members able to be present. Mr. Sabath said that future meetings of the committee would be held in Washington.

SANTA CLAUS TO PRESERVE MAIL FROM CHILDREN

Santa Claus, Ind., Dec. 14.—(AP)—A lot of children's mail is going to be preserved for all time beneath the 23 foot statue of Santa Claus here Christmas afternoon.

A vault, built beneath the statue, will hold the mail. All any child has to do to have his name and address dropped into the vault is to mail it on a penny postcard. The name must be written, however, in a space one and one-fourth by three and a half inches.

The postcards must be addressed to the secretary of Santa Claus park here. The names of President Roosevelt, Gov. Paul V. McNutt and other persons also will be put in the vault.

Guard Plant from Damage in North Chicago Strike

Officials of the Oakes Products company of North Chicago, makers of motor car accessories, informed the police last night that they had established a private guard of twelve men because of rumors that employés who struck last Tuesday planned to damage the plant. Representatives of the Metal Polishers and Buffers' union, local 140, who called the strike of their 80 members employed in the plant, claimed yesterday that 95 per cent of the 800 plant employés had walked out. The union demands better working conditions and reëmployment of skilled workers who have been replaced by unskilled operators of new automatic buffing machines.

GOOD FELLOWS' 15 FOOT CHEESE PUT ON DISPLAY

Arrives from Wisconsin as Gift to Needy.

The mammoth cheddar cheese sent by Wisconsin dairy makers to the needy of Chicago as a Christmas remembrance was placed on exhibition in the lobby of Tribune Tower yesterday afternoon after a ceremony of presentation. Col. R. R. McCormick, publisher of THE TRIBUNE, to whom the cheese was sent for distribution in Good Fellow Christmas baskets, accepted the gift from Miss Virginia Kelly of Clintonville, Wis., dairy queen of the 1934 Wisconsin state fair.

The cheese weighs 3,744 pounds and is 15 feet in circumference. Steve Suidzinski of the Shefford Cheese company, Green Bay, national champion cheesemaker, said that he used in it a two day supply of milk [41,496 pounds] from 988 cows. He declared it was not only large but of a prize winning quality, samples having taken exposition prizes.

From Cheese Center of U. S.

Suidzinski and other Wisconsin representatives were introduced by Phil Maxwell, master of ceremonies. Lee I. Yorkson, secretary of the Stevens Point, Wis., chamber of commerce, said that Wisconsing has 60,000 farmers whose herds of cows produce 340,000,000 pounds of cheese annually, almost 60 per cent of the United States' total.

Charles L. Nye, manager of the Shefford Cheese company; Tommy Yorkson, 8 years old, and Glen J. Toule, press representative, were other members of the party that escorted the cheese to Chicago.

Accepting it on behalf of the families who will receive sections, Col. McCormick declared that he saw "not only the qualities of skill, ingenuity, and enterprise in the product but above those true Christian kindness a quality that exemplifies the American people."

Exhibited on Way Here.

The cheese left Green Bay Friday morning and a two hour stop was made in Madison where it was exhibited in front of the state capitol. After an overnight in Milwaukee the truck bearing it arrived at the loading power of the Tribune Tower shortly after 1 p. m. Almost an hour was required to hoist the heavy slab from the truck and roll it into the lobby in its especially constructed wooden mounting.

It has been estimated that the cheese will provide generous portions for 5,000 families.

Father of 8 Slain; His Son-in-Law Called Killer

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 14.—(AP)—Charles Soave, father of eight children, was killed today. Police Lieut. Paul Wenzel said Soave's son-in-law, Carmine Franchi, had confessed the slaying. Mrs. Soave is in a hospital with the youngest of their children, a boy born ten days ago.

BLIND, HE WINS AN ARGUMENT WITH HIS PISTOL

Richmond, Ky., Dec. 14.—(AP)—Charlie Hurst, blind for many years, fought with his former wife and her present husband. He won. She had divorced him and married Fred Bryant, and the three lived under the same roof in Jackson, Ky. They then moved to Richmond, but recently the Bryants decided to move back to Jackson, without Hurst. Hurst, armed with a pistol, defied any one to come in and move the furniture from the Richmond house. Finally the Bryants invited Hurst to accompany them to their new home. Hurst agreed. The trio started moving.

70 CHRISTMAS PAROLES GIVEN STATE CONVICTS

Chartered Buses Bring Freed Men Here.

Seventy convicts imprisoned in the old Joliet and Stateville penitentiaries were granted their freedom on paroles yesterday by order of the state board of pardons and paroles. The prisoners are freed in accordance with an annual custom by which those who would become eligible for parole during December, January and the first half of February, are turned out just before Christmas.

Warden Joseph E. Ragen, who has been in charge of the penitentiaries since the resignation of Col. Frank D. Whipp as warden on Oct. 15, supervised the releases yesterday. Nearly all the convicts had been sent to the prisons from Chicago and adjoining counties and three buses were chartered to bring them to the Chicago office of the parole board in the Transportation building, where they were given final instructions.

Names Are Kept Secret.

According to the warden, the prisoners paroled yesterday obtained their liberty as a matter of routine and as a special holiday favor. However, the prison superintendent refused to make public the names of the convicts, asserting that it was not in accordance with the rules of the department of public welfare.

Names of those paroled are given to state's attorneys of the counties from which the convicts were sentenced, however, said Robert Phillips, secretary of the parole board. The names are suppressed only at the time of the release, he added.

Later in the day Henry Barrett Chamberlin, head of the Chicago crime commission, assailed the practice of secrecy.

Demand Full Publicity.

"In a report I recently made to Gov. Horner on the parole situation," he said, "I suggested that full publicity be given all parole matters, including names of those released by pardon and parole. I believe that the public should be informed of the release of these men for its own protection."

A bill providing parole publicity was introduced in the Illinois legislature at its last session, but was defeated by the Democratic majority.

Preparations for putting the Christmas paroles into effect were begun at the prisons Friday night. Those of the prisoners who needed them were supplied with new suits of clothing in which they dressed themselves yesterday morning.

Get $10 and Best Wishes.

After breakfast those in the old prison who were to be freed were marched to Stateville and were lined up in a cell house. One by one they were received in the clerk's office, where records of their releases were made. Each was given a $10 bill and had a brief talk with Warden Ragen, who extended his best wishes for the future.

These formalities ended, the men were marched into the prison yard where they boarded the waiting buses for a nonstop drive to the Chicago parole office. No relatives or friends were present at the prison.

In the Chicago office, the state supervisor of paroles, George T. Scully, instructed the former prisoners how they were to conduct themselves while on parole. Then they walked out into the street, free.

None of Parolees Are Killers.

According to Warden Ragen none of the prisoners had been sentenced for murder. One of those released was Louis Longo, who served as cook for the various wardens during the eight years of his imprisonment. The warden asserted that about 25 more prisoners, who were eligible for parole at this time, were not given their freedom because their sponsors were unable to find immediate work for them.

He said that the probable time a prisoner is to serve is fixed by the board within a year following his sentence. When the time arrives for parole, an investigation is made of the sponsor and the opportunities the convict will have to re-adapt himself to society. If no employment or means of a livelihood can be found, the prisoner is not paroled, the warden asserted.

Nearly a dozen of the men freed yesterday were sent to Hope hall, 6036 Ravenswood avenue. This home was formerly conducted by private social workers for former convicts. The place now is under the supervision of the public welfare department.

FAKE POLICE ROB WORKER.

Posing as police detectives, two men early yesterday morning accompanied George Busch, a laborer, to his home at 6134 South Park avenue, where they robbed him of $42.

PRISON PLANS TRADE TRAINING WORK ON JAN. 1

Springfield, Ill., Dec. 14.—[Special.]—Plans for a vocational training school at the Stateville prison on Jan. 1 were reported to Gov. Henry Horner today by A. L. Bowen, director of public welfare. Instruction in trades such as carpentry, plumbing, sheet metal, electrical and metal fabricating will be given prisoners by inmate instructors who were employed in the trades prior to their imprisonment.

"In supplying occupation for the 2,500 idle men in both the old and new prisons at Stateville, Warden Joseph E. Ragen is following the policy he established at the Menard prison where daily occupation was provided for the inmates," Director Bowen said.

Additions to the industrial plants within the Stateville also are contemplated as a means of employing idle men. Establishment of an aluminum manufacturing plant for the production of aluminum tableware for the prison and other state institutions and installation of looms for weaving rugs, tablecloths, towels and other goods for institution use are two of the major projects under consideration.

I. C. Inspector Is Killed at Randolph Station

Charles Ott, 69 years old, 4552 North Springfield avenue, a car inspector for the Illinois Central railroad, was crushed to death under a suburban electric train yesterday morning near the South Water street entrance of the Randolph street station. Hundreds of commuters saw the accident which occurred when Ott's clothing caught on some part of a moving coach. He was about to be retired on a pension.

6 MORE NATIONS DEFAULT; TOTAL INCREASED TO 8

Only Finland Will Pay Its Instalment to U. S.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 14.—[Special.]—The semi-annual "defaulters' parade" was held today in the state department. Representatives of six nations almost stepped over one another in carrying notes expressing regret that their countries will be unable to pay current war debt instalments due tomorrow or anything on past instalments in default.

The day's delivery brought the total of default notices to eight, Great Britain and Lithuania having sent "so sorry" notes during the week. Three more are expected tomorrow—from Belgium, Esthonia and Latvia. The day's defaulters were France, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Italy, and Rumania.

Finland Meets Obligation.

Of twelve debtor nations, Finland only has served notice that it will meet its obligation in full or in part. Finland, as usual, will make its payment of $230,453 in full. This payment gives Uncle Sam a net of 1.4 mills on the dollar in trying to collect $155,051,031 in war debts due Dec. 15.

The nations, with the exception of Finland, one by one notified Secretary of State Hull that continued adverse economic conditions made it impossible to pay. The French representative carried his country's seventh default note to this government.

Finland will make the payment in American dollars which are now 39 per cent cheaper than when the United States so generously made the loans. In its note the government of Finland proudly pointed that as usual it will meet its obligations.

The notes were accepted in chill formality at the state department. Each representative reported he had a note from his government. With a formal bow the notes were accepted and the representatives hastily withdrew. The majority of the notes were carried by attachés of the various embassies and legations.

The total debt is about 22 billion dollars. The government notified defaulting debtor nations that it was fully disposed to discuss any proposals they wished to set forth in regard to payment but not one accepted the proposal. Repayments to date aggregate $2,747,271,136 to last March 1.

Accumulated Amounts Due.

The accumulated payments due Dec. 15 are as follows:

Britain	$582,803,306
France	250,292,292
Italy	47,858,383
Belgium	33,690,269
Poland	32,595,988
Czechoslovakia	9,584,149
Rumania	8,843,750
Estonia	2,611,886
Latvia	976,995
Lithuania	776,319
Hungary	290,381
Finland	230,453

Greece and Jugo-Slavia are also in default but their instalments are not dated with those of the twelve nations. Greece owed $4,263,338 and Jugo-Slavia $1,150,000 last month. Under a special financial arrangement, Austria, which owes about 24 million dollars, is not classed as a defaulter.

Sells Relief Coal While Babies Shiver; Goes to Jail

Walter Glimuske, 25 years old, 249 West 48th place, was fined $100 for disorderly conduct yesterday by Municipal Judge Francis Borrelli when his wife, Mrs. Marie Glimuske, testified that her husband sold coal given to the family by the relief commission and bought liquor. She and their four small children almost froze to death, Mrs. Glimuske said, while her husband was out drinking. Unable to pay the fine, Glimuske was taken to the Bridewell.

MONGOLS BID FOR SOVIET AID; FEAR INVASION BY JAPS

Leaders Tell Moscow of Nipponese Threats.

MOSCOW, Dec. 14.—(AP)—The prime minister and minister of war of the republic of Outer Mongolia, which, soviet accounts said, has been threatened by a Japanese-Manchukuan invasion, sat in a long conference today with Premier Molotov at the Kremlin.

The two officials arrived unheralded at the head of a delegation Wednesday after an eight day railway journey from Ulan Bator.

No official information was obtainable on matters discussed at the conference, but foreign observers were convinced that it dealt with the situation resulting from the alleged threats.

Reject Japanese Demand.

Mongolian accounts said the government rejected Japanese and Manchukuoan demands for de facto recognition of Manchukuo in the face of a declaration that troops of Manchukuo and the Japanese Kwangtung army might feel obliged to occupy Ulan Bator and the greater part of Mongolian territory.

Outer Mongolia skirts a large section of the soviet frontier. Its occupation would put hostile troops within striking distance of the all important trans-Siberian railway, linking Moscow with Vladivostok.

The government of Outer Mongolia, or the Outer Mongolian People's republic, is of the soviet type and is linked in close ties of friendship and commerce with the soviet union.

The soviet press has been accusing a high Japanese military clique of sponsoring plans for an invasion with the purpose later of aggression against the soviet union.

After the conference Molotov, who is chairman of the council of people's commissars, entertained Prime Minister Gendun, War Minister Demid, and other members of the delegation at a luncheon which was attended by Dictator Josef Stalin and other high officials.

Defend Increase in Forces.

TIENTSIN, Dec. 14.—(AP)—A Japanese army spokesman said tonight there was no reason for other countries objecting to the strengthening of the Japanese garrison in North China "in view of Japan's special position in this area."

The army spokesman said he was confident the Japanese government would approve the increase in forces and that such increase was not in violation of the protocol ending the Boxer rebellion.

Foreign observers estimated that at present there are 3,000 Japanese troops along the Peiping-Shanhaikwan railway and 7,000 along the Great Wall.

New Warning to Nanking.

NANKING, Dec. 14.—(AP)—The Japanese embassy warned the central Chinese government again today that it must check the spread of anti-Japanese student agitation, arising from the North China autonomy movement.

140 JAPANESE SEIZED IN SHANGHAI; ACCUSED OF SMUGGLING SILVER

SHANGHAI, Dec. 14.—(AP)—Japanese consular police arrested 140 Japanese today in a blow at a huge silver smuggling ring. The suspects had attempted to embark for Japan aboard the Tatsuta Maru with 242,000 silver dollars.

Ships arriving from Japan of late have been crowded with Japanese fortune hunters attracted by the easy profits of the silver smuggling racket which has been organized along the lines of the bootleg industry of the United States' prohibition days.

[Under the Chinese silver nationalization laws the price of silver in China is considerably below the world price. Consequently it has been possible to export silver surreptitiously from China despite an embargo decree and sell it abroad.]

NEW PREMIER OF SPAIN TO WAR ON TERRORIST GANGS

MADRID, Dec. 14.—(AP)—Manuel Portela Valladares initiated his appointment as Spanish premier today by announcing a "war without quarter" against gangsters and terrorists.

Portela, a former minister of the interior, took over the premiership through appointment by President Alcala Zamora after Spain had been without a government for six days.

In a brief statement at the simple ceremony, Portela said: "Gangsterism and terrorism must be eliminated and will be eliminated. War without quarter will be waged against all such menaces to law and order. A nation-wide cleanup campaign will be launched immediately to pave the way for orderly and honest elections."

THREAT OF NAVAL INTRIGUE PERILS LONDON PARLEY

LONDON, Dec. 14.—(AP)—The shadow of secret diplomatic maneuvers fell tonight across the week old naval conference, struggling to extricate itself from the complications of Japanese parity demands.

Uncertainty hinged on two developments, both originating with the Japanese.

Some observers expressed the fear that the conference might be turned into a "super-secret" session, coupled with the launching of separate talks. They said this might steer the conference on the rocks of bilateral conversations, which wrecked preliminary negotiations last year.

Americans are Uneasy.

The Americans were uneasy at this trend from the open round table discussions, which they feel are vital to avoid the playing off of one nation against the other.

Great Britain's delegation hastened to clear up the status of its private talk last night with the Japanese and said it was purely supplementary to the conference itself. Such talks among the various delegations will continue from time to time, the British insisted.

Nevertheless, the feeling remained among observers that the Japanese are trying to drive a wedge between the Americans and the British in their opposition to Tokio's equality proposal. This seemed to be borne out by Tokio dispatches hinting that equality in Japan's demands is equality with the United States.

Secret Meeting Tomorrow.

No formal session of the conference was held today. The American delegation is spending the week-end in the country. Instead of a general session Monday, a secret meeting will be held attended only by delegates.

This development was the result of Japanese requests on the grounds that general sessions are cumbersome and unsatisfactory.

Japan opened the conference by firmly demanding the scrapping of the 5-5-3 ratio and equality with America and Britain. The conference is seeking to agree on a treaty to replace the Washington and London pacts, which end next year.

WORST MASSACRE IN HISTORY

NO more blood-curdling tale has ever been written than the horrible toll of automobile accidents in the United States. In 1934—36,000 were killed and 954,000 injured. Latest reports on accidents in 1935 indicate 40,000 dead and over 1,000,000 injured.

About 1,500,000 cars will be involved in accidents this year. That means 1 out of every 16 cars.

One person out of every 124 is marked. That means one person out of every 25 to 30 families.

Yet, according to statistics, less than 5% of the people of this Country protect themselves against loss of time, caused by being injured, and every man and woman should secure this protection without delay.

By writing to the North American Accident Insurance Company, 291 Title Building, Newark, New Jersey, an illustrated booklet entitled, "CASH OR SYMPATHY," will be sent free of cost, showing the benefits paid under the new $10,000.00 Health and Accident Policy, which also pays a weekly benefit of $25.00 for stated accidents and sicknesses. The entire cost is only $10.00 a year, payable $2.50 down and balance in monthly installments.

"I FOUND AGRICULTURE PROSTRATE."

The President told the American Farm Bureau federation that he came to office finding agriculture prostrate and had made it prosperous. The prices paid to farmers had fallen so much faster than the prices paid by farmers that their purchasing power had been cut in half. Said the President, "I promised to do what I could to remedy this, and without burdening you with unnecessary figures let the records show that a relative purchasing power of below 50 has now moved up to better than 90 per cent."

That farmers are better off than they were at the low point of the depression there cannot be the slightest doubt. But there are the strongest reasons for doubting that the betterment has come from the remedies applied by the President. It should be observed at the outset that the improvement for which the President can make even the shadow of a claim is that which has occurred since the measure creating his agricultural administration became a law. It was on May 12, 1933, that the President signed the bill which brought AAA into existence, and it was not until somewhat later that the newly created body began paying farmers for plowing up cotton and slaughtering pigs and pregnant sows. The November issue of the department of agriculture's publication, "Crops and Markets," discloses that in the month of the enactment of AAA the ratio of prices received by farmers to prices paid by farmers was 67. The fluctuations which have taken place since the index was 67 in May, 1933, are coincident with the life of AAA.

AAA could have had nothing to do with the increase in the index from 54, the lowest point [not below 50 as stated by the President] to 67, because AAA was not in business at the time. And the fact is further shown in the department of agriculture's own bulletin that a year after AAA was signed, or in May, 1934, the index stood at 68, a gain of one point in a year. To be sure there has been a further increase since then, but the rise was coincident with a world-wide increase in agricultural prices which affected commodities without the benefit of the government's attention as well as those which the government was managing.

A study made by the department of agriculture and published in July of this year disclosed that in the calendar year 1934 farm income had increased by 894 million dollars over the year before. That was a tidy sum, to be sure, but at that rate of annual increase our farmers would have many years of depression ahead of them. But not all of even this increase can be credited to the AAA. The government report showed that actual receipts from the sale of grain last year were not more but less by 68 million dollars than in the year before. Income from raising hogs, under government management fell off by 4 million dollars. Those who live off sugar crops realized 18 million dollars less than the year before. From cotton there was an apparent gain of 35 million dollars, but in this connection it must be remembered that a large part of that cotton was not sold in the market, but to the government, at an excessive price, and the government hasn't sold it yet. For all the commodities affected by AAA taken together, the government report showed that incomes had increased by the very small sum of 10 million dollars. In contrast cattle and calves, which were without the government's assistance toward better times, increased so much in price as to add 241 million dollars to farm incomes; poultry and eggs added 103 millions; fruits and nuts, 52 million dollars.

All the commodities under the wing of AAA taken together added 10 millions to farm income; all commodities outside the jurisdiction of AAA added 568 million dollars.

Even taking into consideration the tax collections from the poor in the form of the pork tax, the bread tax, the tobacco tax, and the cotton tax, which were distributed among the farmers, 64 per cent of the increased income received last year came to them from the sale of uncontroled commodities. If the products on which AAA worked had done as well as those which it ignored, farmers would have been a half billion dollars richer last year than they were. Figures for 1935 have not been made available by the department of agriculture, but the preliminary estimates indicate that the increases in farm incomes have again come from the uncontroled commodities. With a slightly larger yield of cotton than in 1934, the price is materially lower and the income is less. And there were so few hogs that the high prices have meant little to the farmer. Cash incomes of farmers for 1935 have been estimated at 413 millions larger than a year ago. But the larger part of this increase appears to have come from commodities whose production and prices were not managed by AAA.

The President found agriculture prostrate, and now it is a little more prosperous, but the government's own publication establishes that the betterment has not come because of what the President has done. Indeed the facts show quite conclusively that agricultural recovery would be further advanced if he had kept his hands off.

THE UNINTELLIGENTSIA.

Persons who think there is something a little unusual in the credulity displayed by the investors in the Drake estate can read with profit Prof. Joseph Jastrow's recent volume entitled "Wish and Wisdom."

The Drake investors were ordinary folk, with no pretense to learning. Conan Doyle, one of the most ingenious and successful authors of his day, believed in fairies. Prof. Jaeger, who translated Darwin for German readers, believed that the human soul would escape the body in emanations through the skin unless imprisoned by clothing of virgin wool. Later on he discovered that camel's hair was an even better soul net. [His strange notion survives as Jaeger underwear.] Prof. Franz Joseph Gall, a leading anatomist of his day, founded the self-styled science of phrenology. Henry Ward Beecher believed in it. Dr. Luys, a member of the French Academy of Medicine, believed in something which he called the "exterioration of sensitiveness." A friend of Goethe's named Johann Kaspar Lavatar wrote five volumes to explain how a man's character could be read in the contours of his face. Prof. Beringer of the University of Würzburg believed that fossils were pages from God's notebook; when the Creator got an idea he made a note of it and filed it away for possible future use. Some of Prof. Dr. Beringer's students worked up a practical joke. They modeled likely looking fossils out of clay and planted them where the learned professor would find them. He did. He found fossil sketches of comets and even Jehovah's signature in Hebrew. He wrote books about the proof he had found to support his theory.

All of these learned saps had their followings, large or small. Prof. Jastrow calls these credulous persons "the unintelligentsia," a coinage for which he ought to receive the Nobel prize in literature. The world is full of the unintelligentsia, as is proved by the fact that tens of thousands of people, including many college graduates, are believers in what is called numerology. By numerology you can prove that the wages of sin is death because the letters in "what is death?" count up to thirty-eight and so do the letters in "wages of sin." There is also a higher form of numerology which incorporates some of the deeper truths of astrology.

Prof. Jastrow's book is entertaining, but it is also disquieting. If numerology and other manifestations of what Dr. David Starr Jordan called "the Higher Foolishness" have their thousands of followers, the fact reflects no credit upon our schools and colleges. They are not doing their job as well as it might be done. Perhaps some benefits would flow from teaching unscience as a branch of science. If high school and college students were taught what not to believe and why not to believe it they might be better equipped to cope with the problems of life.

As Prof. Jastrow says, it is necessary in living to accept many beliefs without proof. Even the ablest and most learned of men have to take a good deal on faith. By teaching unscience along with science the schools could help the ordinary mortal avoid at least the coarser forms of credulity. A good many lives lost through quackery might be saved; a good deal of money lost in fancy investments might be saved, and possibly some progress might be made in combating the cruder forms of political charlatanism.

THE REAL VICTIMS OF CORRUPTION.

When a public official abuses his trust and wastes or steals the money confided to him it is no adequate description of his act to say that it robbed the public funds. "Public funds" is a frigid, disembodied phrase and the turpitude affects not a bag of money but the people whose earnings have gone into the accumulation. Before political dishonesty can be properly characterized the vision must take in the thousands of people who have contributed the stolen money.

Taxpayers are not all people of wealth. Thousands of them are modest home owners with little more money than they actually need. Throughout the year they save the sum required to pay their taxes. In many instances this represents sacrifice. The people do without things they would like to have. They deprive themselves of little luxuries and even bear down on their necessities. The money given the tax collector is paid with real effort. With great bitterness the people can reflect that what the dishonest official misused or put in his own pocket was the fruit of their self-denial.

A proper understanding of what goes into public funds and a realization of what it means to the people who have paid it would put a greater stamp of rascality upon mishandling of public money. Frauds in private life often expose the misdoer to consequences much more severe than follow frauds in public life, and yet in private affairs the victim always has more of a chance than the victims of the public defrauding. In one instance private judgment entered even though it was betrayed. The public tax collector does not offer the payer an alternative. He insists upon getting the money, which makes the trust reposed in the public officials the more binding and its betrayal the more infamous.

THE REVIEW OF THE WEEK.

Readers have shown gratifying appreciation of the review of news published each Sunday in THE TRIBUNE. Among the many features of a metropolitan Sunday newspaper there is much for every reader to choose from, according to his or her special interests. The news review, we believe, has a general appeal, for careful as the reader's attention may be to the swiftly running current of daily report, there is for all of us substantial advantage in looking back upon outstanding occurrences and reflecting upon them. In the great newspapers interesting as well as important reports may easily be missed in the reading of the day. They may be picked up in the weekly review. There is often, also, significance in a series of events which the weekly review will bring out, missed links in a chain restored, and memory refreshed to seize the whole picture.

We think the review is one of the most instructive as well as the most interesting features of the Sunday issue, one to make a fixed habit of reading.

WHAT IS THE CONSTITUTION?

II.

BY ROBERT R. McCORMICK.

Article Four contains two vital paragraphs.

"The citizens of each State shall be entitled to all privileges and immunities of citizens in the several States."

"The United States shall guarantee to every State in this Union a Republican form of government, and shall protect each of them against invasion . . . and against domestic violence."

Yet the State of Rhode Island is groaning under a tyranny set up by a military coup d'état, and the United States has ignored this guarantee.

Article Five provides for the amendment of the Constitution.

Article Six, Paragraph Two, enacts that "the Constitution 'shall be the supreme law of the land,' and shall therefore prevail when in conflict with any act of Congress or of the States."

Paragraph Three again imposes a prohibition upon Congress.

"No religious test shall ever be required as a qualification to any office or public trust under the United States."

Article Seven provided that the Constitution should become effective upon its adoption by three-quarters of the States.

As three-quarters of the States were needed to create the Constitution, so three-quarters of the States are required to amend it.

When the Convention sent this Constitution to the States for ratification a strong sentiment swept over the country that the rights of the citizens and of the States were not sufficiently protected against the men who would hold political power in the central government.

It was therefore agreed that immediately after ratification amendments would be adopted curing the omissions in the Constitution.

This was accomplished by the first ten amendments, containing those provisions of the English Bill of Rights which had been omitted and other rights not guaranteed to Englishmen, especially the first amendment, which reads:

"Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the government for a redress of grievances."

Article Three restrains the quartering of troops upon the citizens as had been practiced by Louis XIV. to enforce religious conformity.

Article Four, "The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated."

Articles Five and Six, governing trials of accused persons, were intended to prevent such tyrannous persecutions as citizens have suffered in the last two years.

"No person shall be held to answer for a capital crime unless on an indictment of a Grand Jury; nor shall any person be subject for the same offense to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb; nor shall he be compelled to be a witness against himself, nor be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor shall private property be taken for public use without just compensation.

"In all criminal prosecutions, the accused shall enjoy the right to a speedy and public trial, by an impartial jury of the State and district wherein the crime shall have been committed; to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation; to be confronted with the witnesses against him; to have compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in his favor, and to have the assistance of counsel for his defense."

Article Seven provides for jury trial in civil suits under the common law, and

Article Eight that "excessive bail shall not be required, nor excessive fines imposed, nor cruel and unusual punishments inflicted."

Articles Nine and Ten provide how the Constitution shall be construed:

"The enumeration in the Constitution of certain rights shall not be construed to deny or disparage others retained by the people."

"The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people."

In the face of this definite phrase, it is obvious that every effort of Congress and the Executive to go beyond the powers listed in the document is usurpation and tyranny.

Articles Thirteen, Fourteen, and Fifteen provide for the freeing and enfranchising of the slaves and forbid the States to oppress their citizens.

"Neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime whereof the party shall have been duly convicted, shall exist within the United States, or any place subject to their jurisdiction."

"All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and the State wherein they reside. No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws.

"The right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any State on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude."

Editorial of the Day

SNOW ROLLERS.

[St. Louis Post-Dispatch.]

Want to do the United States weather bureau a favor? Keep your eyes peeled for snow rollers this winter. Every year during the months in which snow falls these curiosities of nature are formed somewhere on fields and lawns, and it may be that this area's turn is about to fall due. As a usual thing these strange formations—generally they are shaped like a lady's muff and may range from several inches high to the diameter of a barrel—are rolled up by the wind at night and not seen until the next morning, each at the end of a shallow trough whose length and width depend on the distance the roller has been propelled by the wind. More rarely, when the wind in a skittish mood changes direction while engaged in making snow rollers, round balls are produced instead of the muff shapes.

The weather bureau would especially like to have reports from persons who see snow rollers take form, with particular reference to the wind's scooping up of the initial masses. Thoreau, so the current issue of Nature Magazine reminds us, was entranced by a field of snow rollers made by a northwest wind a century ago. The pages of his journal describe the naturalist's discovery. Since then meteorologists have kept watch for these curious formations, but the exact nature of their origin remains a mystery.

How to Keep Well

TOXINS MAY CAUSE DIZZINESS.

Some months ago mention was made in this column of a peculiar type of vertigo [dizziness] which accompanied the condition known as Ménière's disease. There are, of course, numerous states of the body in which dizziness will be a prominent symptom. Not infrequently the principal complaint of certain individuals will be vertigo and on careful examination some toxin will be found to be responsible. Many of us have—no doubt—experienced the symptom as an accompaniment of weakness following a prolonged illness.

Just what controls the balance of the body? From our studies of physiology we have learned about the vestibular apparatus—so-called—which lies within the bones of the skull and which forms a part of the hearing mechanism. Therein are found tiny canals which contain fluid. They assist in conveying sensations of sound to the brain. Whenever we move the head the fluid within the canals will flow and stimulate certain fine hairlike nerves. For example, if we whirl rapidly the fact will be conveyed to the brain through the position assumed by this fluid. Should disease, toxins, or physical damage occur to the nerve pathways of hearing [the semicircular canals] vertigo may result.

Toxic dizziness may be due to stimulants such as alcohol and tobacco, to drugs such as quinine, or to infection following influenza, septic sore throat, etc. Vertigo may occur at any period during an illness. It may appear suddenly, perhaps even while the patient is lying quietly in bed. As a rule, however, the symptoms will follow a change of position such as sitting up in bed or turning the head. There may be a feeling that surrounding objects are whirling or that the patient himself is moving. If standing at the time he may reel or stagger; occasionally he may fall.

If dizziness is severe, although consciousness is maintained, nausea and vomiting frequently ensue. In addition to vertigo, eye symptoms are sometimes observed and the eyeball will be seen to move back and forth on a horizontal plane. This phenomenon is called nystagmus. The condition must be observed by a second person, as it cannot be detected by the sufferer even when looking into a mirror. Along with dizziness there is often a high pitched ringing in the ears. The attacks are ordinarily of short duration, but they may recur when the position of the head is again changed suddenly.

It is of great moment that every possible cause of dizziness shall be studied before it is assumed that toxins alone are responsible. Sudden attacks with nausea, vomiting, and falling are not customary unless there has taken place some slight hemorrhage into the brain or a block in a blood vessel cutting off circulation to important nerve centers. While such accidents are possible they are not frequent and we should endeavor to explain dizziness on the basis of simple reasons rather than those that are rare and unusual.

Chronic diseases such as syphilis or tumors, skull fractures, and anemia may all be unsuspected causes of the complaint. It is also known that arteriosclerosis may be associated with dizziness, but most of the attacks can be traced to some form of poisoning, the result of disease, or perhaps one with which the patient is in daily contact. Excessive smoking is a common factor and periodical attacks will often disappear when the daily ration of tobacco has been reduced substantially. Lastly, the eyes should be examined carefully, as an error in refraction may be the sole cause of the discomfort.

Treatment of the toxic varieties of dizziness consists of eliminating infections, particularly of the throat and ears, in reducing the number of contacts with poisons, in providing adequate elimination from the intestinal tract, and in correcting errors of diet. High blood pressure itself may exist on a toxic basis and as such should receive attention and study.

HAVE PHYSICIAN TEST.

Mrs. C. writes: The members of my family for some time have had very peculiar symptoms. A few months ago a physician made a diagnosis of metal poisoning, and our plumber finds we have a defective water tank.

Our 9 year old child has a case of drop ankle or paralysis; a 13 year old girl has marked shoulder muscle weakness; and a 14 year old boy has weak foot muscles. My feet "go to sleep" when I am walking and the muscles of the ankles and the legs ache at all times. The children are better than they were but they still have head pains, occasional diarrhea, constipation, and large stools. They are extremely excitable.

Our gums were not dark but white, soft, and sore. A rash on the face gets better when citrocarbonate is taken. We had extreme thirst and a choking feeling. The veins and capillaries of the body stand out and are dark blue. There are brown spots on the knuckles and spine and blisterlike places. The tongues look cracked at the end and tingle. What does this suggest to you? If we have lead poisoning have we any chance of overcoming the bad effects? What tests should be made?

REPLY.

The diagnosis of lead poisoning does not seem to be fully established, although many of the symptoms are quite characteristic. Examination of the blood will tell whether or not lead is present inasmuch as the red cells have a "speckled" appearance. In cases of actual lead poisoning the lead can be removed from the body by means of a low calcium diet and the taking of acid salts. However, this is a dangerous procedure unless one is under the observation of a careful physician. Your physician will be able to direct proper tests so that an accurate diagnosis may be made. I assume that pellagra has been considered.

FROM ACROSS THE SEA

BY GUSTAVO BENO.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HAVANA.—The slightest indication of communistic propaganda in any school of the Cuban educational system, which is undergoing extensive development and expansion, will be sufficient for the immediate expulsion of those found guilty of spreading Red doctrins, Secretary of Education Dr. Leonardo Anaya Murillo told THE TRIBUNE correspondent.

Anaya, who is 35, took his cabinet post upon an hour's notice eight months ago in the midst of a so-called revolutionary strike. He is credited with having swept out within forty-eight hours what were considered dangerous groups of agitators who were "boring from within" in the department of education.

"There is no room in this department for subversive activities," Dr. Anaya said. "We are interested only in a constructive effort to eradicate illiteracy.

"A significant fact is the average increase of 70 per cent in the number of pupils matriculating in public schools this year as compared with 1934. In many cases the increase was more than 200 per cent.

"In the last eight months we have spent more than $800,000 in establishing new schools and repairing and maintaining old ones. We have added 1,700 new classrooms, raising the total to 10,000. We have added 150 kindergartens, making their total 300. The new schools are modern buildings especially adapted to local climatic conditions.

"Nearly 130 special schools to teach only English have been established. Some 15 vocational schools have been created in the cities, raising the total to 65. The study of English is compulsory in these schools.

"We have established 25 new high schools. They are virtually completed and will be officially inaugurated on Jan. 2, 1936. Of the pupils in these schools, 50 per cent must be graduates of the superior schools of primary instruction operated by the government; 25 per cent graduates of private schools, and 25 per cent students who have studied by themselves.

"For the first time in Cuban history private schools have been authorized to award high school diplomas, entitling the holders to enter the national university of Havana without examination."

Physical culture, elemental agriculture, political economics, and manual training have been made compulsory studies in all public schools. Anaya's bureau of school hygiene is charged with the good health of Cuban public school children. Physicians, dentists and eye and nose specialists have been engaged. The dental service includes free fillings and extractions.

About 17 per cent of the government's total budget, or, for the current fiscal year, $11,500,000, is spent by the department of education.

Secretary Anaya is the son of an American, the late Walter Anaya, a native of Philadelphia, Pa., who was quartermaster general of the United States army of occupation in Cuba following the Spanish-American war in 1898. The elder Anaya married Maria Murillo of Santiago, where the son was born.

REQUIREMENTS FOR CITIZENSHIP.

Chicago, Dec. 5.—[Friend of the People.]—I am 69 years old and want to become a citizen. I took out my first papers for which I paid a lawyer $27. At first he said it would be sufficient if I could write my own name, but now I have been informed that I must take instructions and go to school. I have an ailment of the head and feel unable to do this. Will this bar me from becoming a citizen? Must I go to school [I cannot read or write a word of English, only my own name, though I have lived in the United States 42 years], before I get final papers? A. M.

The inquirer states she has taken out a declaration of intention [first paper] and now desires to apply for final papers. She states she is not able to read or write a word of English other than her name. A petitioner for citizenship must be able to speak English and have an elementary knowledge of our government and its institutions. There are free citizenship classes being conducted throughout the city under the supervision of the adult education department of the Chicago board of education, and the inquirer may, if she desires, attend one of these classes. Information in regard to the one situated nearest to her home may be obtained from the department of the board of education above mentioned.

GRANTING EXTENSION.

Harvey, Ill., Dec. 6.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Our lodge elected a treasurer and accepted his bond with two signers on it. Later he was found short and promised to repay as best he could for which he gave a note with his signature only. He has defaulted and refuses to pay. 1. Are the bondsmen released of their obligations because the lodge accepted the personal note of the treasurer? 2. How should the lodge go about collecting and from whom? A. Z.

1. It is a general rule of law that an extension of time granted to a principal debtor without the consent of a surety releases the surety. If a substantial amount is involved, you should go over your facts in a personal interview with an attorney and see whether your case comes within one of the exceptions.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

TAX FORFEITURE.

Chicago, Dec. 7.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—When a tax bill is stamped forfeited [1] will this property be offered for sale? 2. If sold after forfeiture what time is there for redemption? 3. Will it take buyer two years to get tax title and seven years to perfect title? 4. When not sold after forfeiture what terminates owner's right to property? M. A. C.

1. The forfeiture is a substitute for sale as far as that year's taxes are concerned.
2. If sold for a subsequent year's taxes, two years will be allowed for redemption.
3. Yes.
4. See 3. In general, the forfeiture can be adjusted at any time. Apply to the office of the county clerk.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

DERIVATIVE CITIZENSHIP.

Chicago, Dec. 5.—[Friend of the People.]—A boy came to the United States with his parents in 1866, at the age of 6 years. The father died and the mother was married to a United States citizen when the boy was 12 years old. Does that make the boy a citizen? J. B. R.

Under the facts stated, the boy became a citizen through the naturalization of his mother by her marriage to a citizen prior to Sept. 22, 1922 [under the laws then in effect], and during the boy's minority.

FALLACY.

Glen Ellyn, Ill., Dec. 9.—Tonight, in a radio address, Maj. George L. Berry, government coördinator, struck and stressed the high point of the fallacy on which so many experiments are based and which prevents the solution of the very problems the present conference at Washington is called to consider.

He spoke repeatedly of managers, investors, labor and industry as separate entities whose differences must be "composed."

The truth is that each and every citizen is a manager, an investor, a worker and an industrialist to the extent of his abilities and tastes.

The attempt to allocate various individuals to these separate groups and to foment antagonism by charging one group with responsibility for the other is a crime against the basic principles upon which our American system was founded. It is the source of many ills and the basis on which an ever swelling burocracy rests, or better, the food upon which it feeds.

Every real man renders some service and is a worker; handles his own affairs and is a manager; buys on his own judgment and is an investor; is "industry" when he employs himself properly and does not wait to be "absorbed" by others upon whom he hopes to shoulder the responsibility for his sustenance.

REPLY TO CARTER HARRISON.

Chicago, Nov. 30.—It is a pity that so intriguingly written a book as Carter Harrison's "Stormy Years" should let fly so many poisoned arrows. Some pierce the living, even those who were Mr. Harrison's friends. They can strike back. Others pierce the dead, and they are powerless to answer.

Evidently Mr. Harrison did not know my father, William J. Onahan, although he was a loyal supporter of Carter Sr. until the latter bolted the Democratic party. Even then their friendship did not cease and the name Carter Harrison has always been held in high esteem in the Onahan family. He never would have counted any one out, least of all his old friend. May I tell the real story of that election night which is so garbled on page 20? I often heard it from my father's own lips.

He was comptroller and the election returns were received in his office. Everything was straight and no tally sheets were allowed to be given out until he had put his O. K. on them. Late in the evening he was called out, or went out to get some supper, as there was a long night ahead. When he returned he was astonished to find things in an uproar. There were shouts, "Cregier is licked." My father raised his hand for silence and ordered the tally sheets brought to him. He discovered many errors, whether intentional or not, and tallied them over himself. Cregier had been elected and honestly elected. There was muttering on all sides. "Why didn't some one keep him out a little longer? We might have known we could not get away with anything with him around."

My father made a bitter enemy of Yerkes by blocking his brazen attempt to steal one of the city's tunnels. After the anarchist riots he refused to pay bills which he considered exorbitant. My mother said to him: "Why do you make so many enemies? You take more care of the city's money than you do of your own." He replied: "What I do with my own money is my own business. But so long as I am in charge of the city's money I intend to see that the city gets a dollar value for every dollar paid out."

He lost his job as comptroller because he was one of the leaders in the movement to raise the saloon license to $1,000. The pressure of the saloonkeepers was too great for Roche and so he fired his Democratic comptroller.

There are many other errors in Mr. Harrison's book. The statement that he could have beaten William E. Dever may well be questioned. Mr. Dever's many friends can only smile at it. The fling at Martin Russell, too, is uncalled for. Chicago's most precious heritage is its honor roll of dead. Why spoil an otherwise interesting book by striking at their memory? There are a few of the old guard left and they resent it keenly. The undersigned is one.

MARY ONAHAN GALLERY.

AM UNWILLING BOONDOGGLER.

Chicago, Dec. 10.—On page 7 of your paper of Dec. 10, Mr. Carl B. Roden, librarian, claims that there are no skilled painters from the list of relief clients assigned to the WPA. I beg to differ with him. There are enough mechanics on one project alone, No. 2672, where I am working, to furnish more than half the number he quotes.

I am over 50 years old and have painted nearly all my life and never had to use a pick and shovel before on nonsensical work. I would welcome a chance to work at my trade that I served as an apprentice for 6 years before I became a journeyman painter. In the parks are all kinds of painters, plasterers, electricians, in fact all kinds of mechanics who are organized. There seems to be a conspiracy to keep union labor on the streets and in the parks instead of fixing up the buildings in Chicago that need it.

It burns a man to have to work for $55 a month and try to support a family when there are any number of single men as foremen and what not, receiving $85 and $94 a month. E. B. M.

INCONSISTENCY.

JEWISH LEADERS IN POLAND ACT TO PREVENT 'GHETTO'

Claim Government Won't Try to Stop Anti-Semitism

BY DONALD DAY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WARSAW, Poland, Dec. 14—Following the refusal of the board of Lwow university to rescind a decree segregating Jewish students, and the alleged refusal of the Polish government to interfere with the action, leaders of Polish Jewry today announced plans to call a congress of Jewish organizations in Warsaw to devise means to combat the rising tide of anti-Semitism.

Anti-Semitism existed in Poland long before the Nazi creed obtained dominance in Germany, but according to Jewish leaders this is the first time since King Casimir granted Jews a refuge in Poland in the thirteenth century that the Polish government has not tried to quell the pogrom spirit.

The cabinet has refused to take action to insure the safety of Jewish citizens, it is charged, and the Polish censor has not attempted to halt a press campaign conducted in the nationalist papers against Jews.

Spreads to Villages.

Anti-Jewish excesses which began with the opening of the university year in November and which resulted in the temporary closing of many universities has spread into the villages, where the peasants are attacking Jewish merchants on market days.

Both Jewish and Polish leaders agree that the present wave of anti-Semitism is chiefly due to the economic crisis.

The Poles, however, deny the Jewish allegation that the government is failing to take the necessary measures. They report that the ministry of interior has issued orders detailing extra police to maintain order in the market towns and that the outbreaks cannot be blamed upon Poland since similar excesses have been reported in Hungary and Rumania during the past fortnight.

Paper Approves "Ghetto" Action.

The leading article in the Polish nationalist newspaper Dziennik Narodowy, discussing the action of Lwow university, declared:

"The Lwow decision to segregate Jewish students into a ghetto is historical, being the first time the ghetto has been introduced in Poland with official approval. While the action of the university board applies only to a small part of Polish society we hope the movement spreads and that the result will be a complete segregation of Christians and Jews, with the government placing a ban on intermarriage."

Poland's only remaining liberal newspaper, the Socialist Rabotnik, which has survived more confiscations than other newspapers in Europe, condemns the university's action and government indifference. It asserted it is impossible to segregate Poland's four million Jews from the remainder of the nation.

Robert H. Ebert, 5462 Cornell avenue, and Rea Keast, 1005 East 60th street, both seniors and "A" students at the University of Chicago, were nominated last night as the Illinois candidates for this year's Rhodes scholarships to Oxford university in England. The nominations were made by a committee headed by Dr. Arthur Cutts Willard, president of the University of Illinois. Wisconsin, Michigan, Ohio, Kentucky, Indiana, and Illinois all have named two candidates. The district committee will meet at the University of Chicago Monday to make final selections for awards of the four scholarships. Ebert is a medical student and Keast is majoring in English.

$500,000 FUND LIFT TO AID AMERICAN ARTS, LETTERS

New York, Dec. 14.—(AP)—Because of the generosity of an anonymous donor, the American Institute of Arts and Letters and the American Academy of Arts and Letters were confronted today with the problem of spending $500,000.

Gov. Wilbur L. Cross of Connecticut, president of the National Institute of Arts and Letters, announced receipt of the gift, which came in form of a trust fund leaving discretion for its use to the organizations.

The money will be spent in furtherance of arts and letters, possibly by endowing scholarships. It is expected each body will appoint committees to consider use of the money.

STEALS BOOK; 30 DAYS.

Vincil Ingall, 31 years old, 849 Townsend street, a WPA worker, was sentenced yesterday by Municipal Judge Eugene J. Holland to serve 30 days in the House of Correction for stealing a book from a loop department store.

T. W. HOUSE JR. KILLS HIMSELF IN TEXAS HOME

Widow Is Daughter of Charles S. Deneen.

Waco, Tex., Dec. 14.—(AP)—Joe Trippett, assistant district attorney, announced tonight that self-inflicted bullet wounds caused the death today of Thomas William House Jr., 31, nephew of Col. E. M. House.

House, vice president of the Texas Long Distance Telephone company, was found fatally wounded in the basement of his home. He had been shot four times in the chest, one bullet making a flesh wound and the other three going through the body. A pistol was nearby.

Dies at Hospital.

He was dead upon reaching a hospital, but a physician reached the scene before he died.

House had been here about eight months. Previously he had been stationed in Cincinnati, New Orleans, and Washington, D. C.

Besides the widow, survivors include a daughter, Bess Ashly, 3, born in Cincinnati, and another daughter, Bina Louise, born here three weeks ago.

House was the son-in-law of former Gov. Charles S. Deneen of Illinois.

Father Arrives by Plane.

Thomas William House Sr., the father, arrived here by airplane. He declined comment. The physician summoned by the family limited himself to the statement that the bullet wounds caused death.

Police took no official notice, saying no complaint of foul play was made. No inquest was held.

DENEEN RECEIVES WORD.

Charles S. Deneen, former United States senator and former governor of Illinois, said yesterday he had received a brief message informing him of the death of his son-in-law, Thomas William House Jr., in Waco, Tex.

Deneen said the message came from his daughter, Mrs. Bina Deneen House, who was in Tulsa, Okla., and who possessed only meagre information of the shooting of her husband. He said she planned to leave immediately for Waco in a chartered airplane.

Mrs. House, a popular debutante, was introduced to society in Washington in 1927, and was married to House in Covington, Ky., April 30, 1931, but the marriage was not announced by her parents until May 17, 1931.

Claim Cuban Kidnap Victim on Yacht; Gunboat in Hunt

HAVANA, Dec. 14.—(AP)—As newspapers here advanced the theory that Nicolas Castano, wealthy Cuban kidnaped last Monday and held for $500,000 ransom, was a captive aboard a yacht at sea, the gunboat Yara was ordered out at Matanzas hurriedly tonight under secret orders. Informed sources said they believed the vessel had been ordered to some north coast point.

DRAW BACK VEIL ON ERA BETWEEN DEATH, FUTURE

Narrows No-Man's Land in Immortality Hunt.

Editor's Note: Dr. Alexis Carrel's address this week on "The Mystery of Death" has occasioned wide discussion. In the following story Howard W. Blakeslee discusses some additional angles of Dr. Carrel's startling thesis, including the penetration of the no man's land between life and immortality.

BY HOWARD BLAKESLEE.
[Associated Press Science Editor.]

New York, Dec. 14.—(AP)—The no-man's land between life and immortality was partly cleared this week by some new scientific facts and points of view reported to New York physicians by Dr. Alexis Carrel of the Rockefeller institute. He narrowed this unknown zone in two places.

One was laboratory evidence for the physical immortality of living things much more complex than the single cells, or simple groups of them, previously found deathless.

The other was his own scientific investigations of the nature of the messages which spiritist mediums receive from "controls." Dr. Carrel found an explanation for the messages in unknown laws of nature.

Yearns for Better Facilities.

He concluded that investigation of life after death is outside present facilities of science, but that "it is far from being unreasonable to believe that some part of human personality may escape death."

On the side of physical immortality Dr. Carrel said:

"When small fragments of tissue removed from an organ are cultivated like colonies of bacteria, they grow for a while, age, and die.

"What is the cause of death? Probably the waste products set free by the living cells.

"According to this hypothesis, the colonies of cells were washed frequently in a saline solution, and given proper food. A striking result was obtained.

"Aging and death were suppressed. The colonies originating from a fragment of tissue extirpated from a chick embryo nearly 24 years ago still are alive. Not only are they alive but they grow as actively as on the first day.

Cells "Potentially Immortal."

"Two important facts were brought to light by this experiment. First, removal of waste products and proper food prevent, in a colony of tissue cells, the occurrence of death. Second, the cells that build up the body are capable of unlimited multiplication. They are potentially immortal.

"Still more useful information can be obtained from viscera living outside the body. An organ such as a thyroid gland, ovary, spleen, etc., is placed in an apparatus recently invented by C. A. Lindbergh, where it is completely protected from bacterial infection.

"Through its arteries a nutrient fluid is caused to pulsate and circulate, just like the blood pumped by the heart through the whole body. Under these conditions organs taken from dead animals not only survive, but also grow and set free active substances in the circulating fluid.

"Thus the mechanism underlying the development or the degeneration of anatomical structure may be analyzed. The presence of certain chemical substances and the lack of elimination of waste products are found to be the cause of most of the alterations of the organs."

Device Sustains Whole Organs.

The whole organs in this new device made by Col. Lindbergh live indefinitly. They may in time prove to be potentially immortal as the fragments of tissue.

But human personality, Dr. Carrel pointed out, appears only when the organs are gathered together completely to form a body, and mentality is the first entity to disappear when death comes.

Mental activity, he said, usually disappears before the death of the body, and certainly long before the deaths of many of its individual parts, which survive for hours or days, according to varying environment.

Ever since he began his medical work Dr. Carrel has sought facts about the human personality that disappears so much more quickly than the death of the body it inhabited.

He has investigated the experiences of mediums in receiving messages they think come from the dead. He said the importance of the facts cannot be denied.

Hidden in Debris of Race.

But in his own investigations he finds positive reason to think the messages are explained by clairvoyance or telepathy, rather than as communications from the dead. Clairvoyance and telepathy he holds as proven facts.

In his book "Man, the Unknown," he calls them "exceptional and elusive." They cannot be reproduced at will. They are hidden in the enormous mass of superstitions, lies, and illusions accumulated for centuries by mankind.

"Study of the phenomenon of clairvoyance should not be neglected any more than that of the chronaxy of the nerves, though clairvoyance can neither be produced at will nor measured."

To the physicians he said the evidence points to mediumistic messages being clairvoyance, or telepathy, so that at present it is impossible to distinguish between the survival of a personality or survival of a psychic principle and clairvoyance.

"But no one," he added, "has the right to say that such survival is impossible. We must remember that mental activities, although always bound to the body, are not completely described within the four dimensions of the physical continuum."

PLAN NUMBERING U. S. WORKERS AS PENSION RECORD

Seek to Avoid Confusing 'Smiths and Joneses.'

Washington, D. C., Dec. 14.—(AP)—The nation's 28,000,000 wage earners may be assigned social security "numbers" under an identification plan now receiving careful scrutiny.

Officials of the social security board said today that while the plan has not yet been adopted, it is under study as a possible solution to one of the vast administrative problems before them.

To determine how much an individual shall receive as an old age pension, the government must know not only how many years he has worked, but also his salary for each year after 1936.

Seek to Avoid Confusion.

With thousands of John Smiths in the country, it was explained that a New York Smith might try to pass himself off as a Chicago Smith and receive greater benefits than the Chicagoan was entitled to because he had worked longer and contributed more.

Under the plan—followed by most insurance companies—the New York Smith would be known as "No. 491374" no matter where he moved or what new job he took.

From the start, the board has realized it will have a staggering problem in trying to collect and keep records on all of the nation's workers who will be entitled to benefits.

Finger Printing Discussed.

At one time finger printing was discussed as a means of trying to prevent fraud and insuring proper identification, but this was ruled out because of possible protests.

Payments do not start until 1942, but employers and employés will have to begin making equal contributions in 1937.

These taxes, will range from 1 per cent in 1937 to a maximum of 3 per cent in 1949 and thereafter, computed on wages of $3,000 or less.

The minimum monthly pension is to be $10 and the maximum $85.

HOWARD HUGHES' 352 M. P. H. AIR RECORD OFFICIAL

Washington, D. C., Dec. 14.—(AP)—Five new aviation records, including a landplane speed record established by Howard Hughes of Santa Ana, Cal., put the United States ahead of France today in the race for aerial supremacy.

The National Aeronautical association announced three records had been approved by the Federation Aeronautique Internationale. It cited two other figures set for light type seaplanes this week at Miami by Ben King of Washington as giving the United States 39 against 38 for France, as soon as final official approval is forthcoming.

The Hughes flight of 352.388 miles an hour at Santa Ana Sept. 13 was described by an association representative as "likely to be unbroken for a long time unless somebody wants to spend a million on it, as Hughes did."

FILIPINO DEFENSE ACT IS APPROVED; PLAN ARMY DRAFT

MANILA, P. I., Dec. 14.—(AP)—The national assembly approved the Philippine defense act today. It provides for compulsory military training and would muster all residents and resources for defense of the islands in wartime.

The measure appropriates $8,000,000 for military purposes, including the customary $3,500,000 for the commonwealth constabulary, and $1,700,000 for the immediate purchase of equipment and for construction.

The defense act was the first major piece of legislation approved by the assembly, created when the commonwealth was inaugurated a month ago tomorrow.

5 Killed, 24 Hurt as Bus Dives from Bolivian Road

LA PAZ, Bolivia, Dec. 14.—(AP)—Five persons were killed and 14 injured today when a bus carrying 25 passengers fell off the Yolosa-Coroico road.

HEIRESS WILL REWED TODAY

Mrs. Marjorie Post Hutton and Joseph E. Davies, Washington attorney, will be married today in New York. Mrs. Hutton's marriage to Edward F. Hutton ended in a Reno divorce last September.

Her Third Venture

New York, Dec. 14.—[Special.]—Mrs. Marjorie Post Hutton, recently divorced from Edward F. Hutton, will be married tomorrow afternoon to Joseph E. Davies of Washington in Mrs. Hutton's home on East 92d street. The ceremony will be performed by the Rev. Clarence W. Pinkney of the First Congregational church of Watertown, Wis. This will be Mrs. Hutton's third marriage.

Mrs. Hutton, the daughter of the late Charles W. Post, the cereal manufacturer, was first married in 1905 to Maj. Edward B. Close, from whom she obtained a divorce in 1919. She married Mr. Hutton in 1920 and they were divorced last September. Mrs. Hutton has two daughters by her first husband, Maj. Close. They are Eleanor, who has been married three times, and Adelaide, now Mrs. Thomas Wells Durant.

Mr. Hutton is the author of the recent appeal to business men "to gang up on the New Deal." He was chairman of the board of the General Food corporation, in which Mrs. Hutton is a large stockholder, until his resignation last Tuesday.

UTILITY TO PAY $185,000 TAXES TO WAUKEGAN

The Waukegan Generating company, a subsidiary of the Public Service Company of Northern Illinois, arranged yesterday to pay $185,902 in back personal property taxes and interest for 1933 and 1934 to Waukegan Township tomorrow.

Payment of this amount, agreed to by the company because of the need for revenue of the township taxing bodies, will insure a full 9½ month school year for the Waukegan public schools and full yearly salaries for the city fire and policemen, city officials said.

The sum was entered in judgment yesterday by County Judge Perry L. Persons of Lake county with approval of the company. It represents the assessment figure set by the Lake county board of review, which is disputed by a Waukegan taxpayer in litigation pending before the Illinois Supreme court in which a higher assessment is sought.

HOPE TO REDUCE COST OF RUNNING SECURITY BOARD

It has been estimated that an army of 10,000 will be required to administrate the federal social security program, John G. Winant, chairman of the national social security board, told members of the Cook County League of Women Voters at a noon meeting in the Palmer house. Mr. Winant said, however, that with the mechanization of record keeping, he believed the federal administration staf could be reduced to 7,500 persons. This does not take into account the employés needed by the 48 states in carrying out social security legislation.

WOMAN STICKS TO STORY BOXER KILLED 6 PERSONS

Port Orchard, Wash., Dec. 14.—(AP)—A woman witness remained unshaken today in her testimony that Leo Hall shot, clubbed and stabbed six persons to death during a robbery. Mrs. Peggy Paulos testified for the state that Hall, a 33 year old boxer, forced her to accompany him to the Frank Flieder home. There she told that two women and four men were slain by Hall.

Defense Attorney Everett O. Butts asked her to show the jury how she bound the hands of the victims. Though she wore gloves, she quickly bound Butts' hands behind his back so well he had to ask the prosecutor to cut the cords as spectators laughed. Butts was attempting to demonstrate she could not have tied any one so tight.

BODY BELIEVED SECOND WIFE OF 'HIKER' IS FOUND

Edmond, Okla., Dec. 14.—(AP)—The body of a young woman officers said fits the description of the missing second wife of Chester Comer, mad Oklahoma City hitchhiker-slayer, was found in a roadside gully three and a half miles northeast of here today.

Officers said strands of hair found clinging to the skull were of a reddish color.

State crime bureau operatives said the hair of Lucille Stevens Comer, the missing second wife of the man believed to have done away with five persons, including his first wife, was reddish brown.

The girl has been missing since August.

ZIPPER STEP-INS FADE FROM VIEW IN CLUB PROTEST

Ventura, Cal., Dec. 14.—[Special.]—A set of zippered step-ins equipped with a large padlock and bearing a dainty inscription, "No, no, a thousand times no!" were discreetly removed from a local children's wear shop window today and a brewing underwear war apparently had been ended.

Outraged clubwomen led by Mrs. Mary E. Collins, a past president of the county W. C. T. U. unit, let it be known publicly today that any further display of streamlined scanties would lead them to call on police officials and ministerial associations who would tender rebukes of more serious consequences.

QUEEN MARY SHIP MODEL IS PUT ON SHOW

New York, Dec. 14.—(AP)—A scale model of the ship Queen Mary, so valuable that it is insured for $30,000, has been brought to New York. It is on display in the Cunard White Star Line's offices. The model is 21 feet long, with 2½ foot beam. Twenty-five workmen at Northampton, England, required three months to build the model.

Robbers Cure Hiccoughs; Fail to Steal Cash

San José, Cal., Dec. 14.—(AP)—Two robbers held up Ernest Stockton's Service station early today, but the only thing Stockton lost he didn't want anyway. Unable to compel Stockton to tell where he hid the keys to the safe the gunmen left in disgust. "It cured my hiccoughs," Stockton told police.

DUST STORM STRIKES OKLAHOMA, KANSAS; BLOW TO MOTORISTS

Guymon, Okla., Dec. 14.—(AP)—A dust storm swept the high southwestern plains today, borne on a cold north wind.

Clouds of silt reduced visibility here to a quarter mile. The storm was not as severe as those of last April and May.

At Liberal, in southwestern Kansas, motorists were forced to use their headlights in midday. The storm subsided tonight.

Only .83 inch of moisture has fallen here in the last two months. The year's rainfall has amounted to only 11.05 inches.

Herb Cavett, manager of a 25,000 acre erosion control project near here, said a shortage of men has delayed work on dust prevention plans. Higher wage scales on relief projects in surrounding states and ineligibility of farmers accepting rural rehabilitation loans were blamed.

H. C. Hyer, Texas county agent, said representatives of the affected states had agreed on a plan to battle dust storms and that a program would be submitted to government authorities at once.

French Deputies Adopt $396,000,000 Arms Budget

PARIS, Dec. 14.—(AP)—The chamber of deputies today adopted a 6,000,000,000 franc [about $396,000,000] extraordinary armaments budget after the government stressed the danger of "massive German rearmament." The armaments budget is an addition to the 7,000,000,000 francs ordinary budget.

TRIBUNE'S AUTO FINDS LENGTHY DETOUR IN DIXIE

Speed Trap Discovered in Georgia.

BY HAL FOUST.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Atlanta, Ga., Dec. 14.—[Special.]—A lengthy detour, a speed trap and a seasonal driving hazard are reported in today's account of the Tribune roadster's progress toward Florida in the van of vacationists headed south for the winter.

The detour, south of Murfreesboro, Tenn., is about 75 miles long and, while all pavement, includes some bumpy going, some bad curves, and adds 24 miles to the trip over the popular U. S. 41 route. With this information it might be worth while before leaving for Florida to consult the Tribune Public Service office about an alternate route through Birmingham and Montgomery, Ala.

Enforce Speed Law.

The Nashville Automobile club told about the speed trap, not using this term but merely advising that a highway patrol was enforcing Georgia's 40 mile an hour speed limit from a point south of Cartersville to about 10 miles south of Marietta, Ga.

The seasonal driving hazard is one that exists in Chicagoland as well as in the south, but it's more of a menace when in strange territory. Trafic lights are lost in a maze of red and green Christmas decorations.

The Tribune roadster left Nashville shortly after noon yesterday. There was a pause at the Stone River National park, near Murfreesboro, to read metal plaques that describe the engagement between Bragg and Rosecrans, two of the deadliest days of the civil war.

The detour, using U. S. 241 from Murfreesboro to Shelbyville and thence Tenn. 16 and U. S. 64 to return to U. S. 41 at Monteagle, carries the traveler over roads bordered by rail fences draped with honeysuckle and through wooded hills with tree trunks green with lichen.

Auto Plows Through Slush.

One is in forested mountains, altitude 2,250 feet, approaching Monteagle. The Tribune roadster splashed through slush from an eight inch snowfall on an unplowed pavement, easing its way around the winding road with fog limiting visibility to fifteen or twenty feet ahead.

Chattanooga was entered by skirting the foot of Lookout mountain on the routing of U. S. 41, which avoids the steep grades of Signal mountain. This route, including a toll bridge over the Tennessee river, has been finished for three or four years but it has been closed much of the time due to heavy landslides.

In Chattanooga, from a vantage point such as Lookout mountain or Missionary ridge, may be viewed the scene of action in one of the great military movements of history, Grant's relief of the confederate siege. Near by is the well marked Chickamauga battlefield.

136 Miles Covered at Night.

The 136 miles from Chattanooga to Atlanta was covered at night. Such forced marches are not recommended for tourists traveling solely for pleasure. There are poorly marked curves and unlighted wagons on the road.

Here in Grant park [named after a local boy and not Ulysses S.] is a cyclorama, a circular panorama, 400 feet long and 50 feet high, of the battle of Atlanta July 22, 1864, Sherman versus Hood, which resulted in 15,000 casualties.

CONFESSES SLAYING WOMAN

Sam Baronia, 29 years old, 846 Irving Park boulevard, a Filipino, confessed at the Town Hall police station last night that he shot and killed Mrs. Rama O'Connor Barreras, 27 years old, 934 Irving Park boulevard, late Friday, on the undeveloped part of the Lincoln park shore near Montrose avenue. Baronia is an attendant at the Lake View hospital.

Mrs. Barreras, a white woman, was the wife of Juan Barreras, a Filipino employed by the Pullman company. At the time of the killing he was on a Pennsylvania train. On his arrival in Chicago at noon yesterday he asserted Baronia had blamed Mrs. Barreras for advising his estranged wife, Mrs. Betty Baronia of 4757 Broadway, to leave him.

Mrs. Baronia told the police that she and Mrs. Barreras were in the Baronia home Friday night when the killer called and asked for an interview. Not wishing to meet him, she sent Mrs. Barreras to say his hopes of reconciliation were vain. Baronia himself completed the account:

"I invited Rama into a car I had hired and drove her down by the lake, not far from the outer drive. Then I went crazy because I thought she was keeping Bety from me. I shot her and drove away."

The body of the slain woman was found early yesterday morning.

8 SKUNK HIDES LIFT BAD ODOR FROM GUNPLAY

James E. Taylor, a farmhand residing near Channahon, ten miles south of Joliet, shot and killed on Friday a dog belonging to William Gillan, one of his neighbors. Arrested on a charge of malicious mischief, Taylor was found guilty by Justice of the Peace Cornelius Sullivan of Joliet and fined $100. When the magistrate offered to remit the fine if that amount were paid to Gillan, Taylor replied with a counter offer of 30 muskrat traps, an old Ford automobile and eight skunk hides. The settlement was accepted by Gillan.

ST. LOUIS THUGS BEAT REPORTER IN BABY TANGLE

St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 14.—(AP)—Police today investigated a report by Harry T. Brundidge, St. Louis newspaper reporter, that he was beaten by two thugs last night.

Brundidge was quoted by the police as having said he thought the attack was linked with the fact he and his wife have been looking after the welfare of Anna Ware, servant girl mother of the "gift of God" baby. The baby was awarded to her this week in her legal dispute with Mrs. Nellie Tipton Muench, who claimed the child.

The newspaper by which Brundidge is employed offered $1,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the purported thugs and $5,000 for the "person or persons who hired these thugs to do the job."

The newspaper said "unidentified interests have been engaging for weeks in a campaign of harassment and violence against Anna Ware and persons who have assisted her in efforts to recover her child."

Brundidge said two men beat him with a blackjack, stabbed at him, and knocked him to the pavement.

St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 14.—(AP)—United States Attorney Harry C. Blanton today appealed in the United States District court for permission to destroy 150 cases of beer which he said were shipped here by a brewing company of Milwaukee. Blanton's petition alleged the beer was misbranded, in violation of the pure food and drug act, labeled at 9 per cent alcohol by volume, while tests showed 4.77.

POPE TO ELEVATE 20 CARDINALS IN RITES TOMORROW

Allocution to Mingle Joy and Sorrow.

VATICAN CITY, Dec. 14.—(AP)—Joy and sorrow are likely to intermingle in Pope Pius' allocution to the College of Cardinals Monday.

Prelates believe the pope will express his satisfaction with such recent religious manifestations as the eucharistic congresses in Buenos Aires and Cleveland, and his discontent with "sieges" against spirituality elsewhere.

The cardinals will meet their sovereign in a secret consistory. He will elevate the 20 prelates whose names were announced recently, bringing the college to 69, one less than the total prescribed by canon law.

Public Consistory Thursday.

The consistory probably will confirm, or preconize, appointments of archbishops and bishops named since the last consistory.

The public consistory—one of the most elaborate and spectacular ceremonies of Catholic rites—will be Thursday. Then the pope will confer the red hat upon the new cardinals.

None of the new cardinals will attend Monday's consistory. They will await outside Vatican City the arrival of papal messengers with tidings of their elevations.

The existing cardinals, many of whom have come to Rome from distant archdioceses, will gather in the consistory hall under their dean, 84 year old Cardinal Pignatelli di Belmonte.

Allocution Unrevealed.

Often the pope's allocution makes a thorough examination of the whole range of religion. At other times he confines his remarks to specific instances of religious life which have caused him joy or grief. The exact nature of his allocution is never revealed beforehand.

After his address the pope will propose the 20 new cardinals and the sacred college will raise its red hats to signify approval.

Thereupon the consistory will send a chamberlain, a master of ceremonies, and a papal archivist to inform the new cardinals of their elevations. They will receive their "birettas," or square hats and skull caps, from the pope's hands Wednesday evening. Thursday morning they will receive formally the red hats in the public consistory ceremonies in St. Peter's basilica.

COMPLETES SIGNING $140,000,000 BONDS

Ross A. Woodhull, president of the sanitary district, affixing the last of 140,000 individual signatures necessary in the $140,000,000 bond refunding program of the sanitary district. James J. Sullivan, clerk of the district, is at the right of Mr. Woodhull.

New 20 Year Issue

Ross A. Woodhull, president of the Chicago Sanitary district yesterday completed the signing of bonds to be issued under the district's $140,000,000 refunding bond issue. Mr. Woodhull announced that under the refunding plan holders of defaulted Sanitary district bonds may now receive cash, plus interest, for the defaulted bonds while holders of district bonds not in default may exchange their bonds for the new 20 year refunding issue through the Harris Trust and Savings bank and associates.

John O. Rees, director of the committee on Public Expenditures, said this issue is the largest refunding operation ever undertaken by a governmental body in Chicago, and called it "the most constructive and far reaching governmental fiscal achievement of recent years in this community." He pointed out that the refunding plan will make possible a 20 cent reduction in the district's tax rate for the next few years.

Radical Labor Groups Urge 'Iron Man's' Expulsion.

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 14.—(AP)—Five senators who were prominent factors in the political machine of former President Plutarco Elias Calles were ousted from the senate today, one day after the return of the one time "iron man" from Los Angeles after six months of voluntary exile.

In an atmosphere of increasing political tension and expectancy, the five were expelled on charges of "seditious and rebellious maneuvers." The motion for their ousting was rushed through a secret session and no details of the charges were made public. The five expelled senators were consigned to the federal attorney general for trial on the charges brought against them.

Gen. José Maria Tapia, former director of public welfare and a close friend of Calles, applied to the federal courts tonight for an injunction to guarantee his personal safety.

Ordered to Leave Mexico.

Tapia asserted in his petition that he "feared for his life" and declared that President Lazaro Cardenas had called him to the national palace yesterday and "unconstitutionally and illegally" invited him to leave Mexico immediately.

What action, if any, Calles may be planning to regain the political domination he exercised for more than eight years could not be learned, but Cardenas was assured the support of a majority of labor organizations in the threatened struggle for control of the government.

Government officials continued to ignore the return of Calles, who left the country last June after objecting to Cardenas' economic policies as too radical, but it was stated in government circles that Cardenas and his supporters are ready for any situation that might develop.

Asks Cardenas for Arms.

The General Federation of Workers and Peasants, the General Workers' confederation, representatives of school teachers and several other organizations appealed to Cardenas to supply them arms to aid the government "in combating any political move Calles and his followers may attempt."

Forty-six labor organizations, most of them radical groups, joined in petitioning the government to expel Calles. They pledged Cardenas their support in the face of a "Fascist threat created by the arrival in Mexico of a representative of clericalism and reaction."

On the other hand, the powerful Regional Confederation of Workers apparently is behind Calles. Its leader, Luis Morones, arrived with Calles yesterday. Coincidentally, the confederation staged a series of strikes in various cities protesting against a communistic campaign being carried on by workers' groups, led by Lombardo Toledano.

Split in Labor Ranks.

The former "iron man," in an interview upon his arrival, said:

"I am absolutely responsible for the acts during the time I was president [1924-28], and I accept the responsibility which is mine for having supported the governments which succeeded me until June 15 of this year, and for the mistakes they have made."

Named in Obregon Plot.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 14.—Prosecuting Attorney Raul Castellanos today declared that if a formal charge is presented against the individuals now suspected of being the intellectual authors of the assassination of former President Alvaro Obregon, he will prosecute the persons, regardless of their political positions.

Further than that he declined to comment on the revelations made here by La Prensa that the former nun, Acevedo de Castro, "Madre Conchita," and her husband, Carlos Castro Balda, have accused Gen. Plutarco Elias Calles and Luis Morones, labor leader, as the real conspirators against Obregon.

The woman and her husband, who were imprisoned as accomplices in the assassination of Obregon, claim that for political reasons the crime was attributed to a Catholic conspiracy. They also allege that José de Leon Toral, who was executed as the assassin, confessed to "Madre Conchita" that he had shot the president under Calles' orders.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

RIO DE JANEIRO, Dec. 14.—France's largest flying boat, the Lieut. de Vaisseau Paris, arrived at Natal today, completing its flight across the South Atlantic. The plane attempted to make the flight from Dakar, Senegal, East Africa, yesterday but after being in the air an hour was forced to turn back because of engine trouble. The ship was built by the French government.

ENTIRE COUNTY QUARANTINED TO STOP MENINGITIS

Ten Cases Reported at Hobart, Okla.

Hobart, Okla., Dec. 14.—[U. P.]—Virtually every activity of the 30,000 residents of Kiowa county was governed tonight by a doctor's prescription.

The drastic regulations of mass quarantine were imposed by state authorities in an effort to halt an epidemic of spinal meningitis.

Two additional cases of the disease which inflames the spinal covering and frequently causes sudden death were found today, one at Cold Springs and the other at Snyder. This brought to nine the number of known cases.

Many Stores Closed.

To halt the epidemic Dr. C. M. Pearce, state health officer, ordered the mass quarantine. As a result of the stringent rules Hobart and other Kiowa county towns resembled deserted villages tonight. No more than three persons could congregate at one place within the county.

Only drug and grocery stores and establishments performing essential services were permitted to remain open. These were manned by skeleton stafs and their activities restricted in such manner as to prevent assembly of more than three persons.

All Churches Closed.

One had to have a doctor's prescription to buy a gallon of gasoline here. The limit on gasoline was designed to cut down trafic. Through transit was not hindered.

Worshippers will have to be content Sunday in hearing sermons over the radio because all churches have been closed. The town's only newspaper, the Democrat-Chief, suspended publication yesterday for the duration of the quarantine.

Merchants gave health authorities full coöperation after the seriousness of the situation was explained to them. The quarantine stalemated a thriving Christmas buying rush.

One hardware store advertised in the last edition of the local paper that it would deliver any article anybody saw in its show window and telephoned for. Barber shops were allowed to admit one person at a time.

Restaurants could admit as many as two persons at a time, but they were required to eat at opposite sides of the building and leave as soon as finished.

Kennett Rawson, Byrd's Aid, Gets Navy Cross

Kennett L. Rawson, 25 years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick H. Rawson, 1550 State parkway, was awarded the Navy cross in Washington, D. C., yesterday for distinguished service as a navigator with the second Byrd expedition to the antarctic. During his year and a half with Admiral Byrd, Rawson navigated the ship cruise, several of the plane flights, and a foot expedition into continental Antarctica. In 1925 Rawson was a cabin boy with the MacMillan expedition to the arctic. Two years later he went with MacMillan to Labrador.

397 'UNKNOWNS' GIVEN NAMES AFTER DEATH BY FEDERAL BUREAU

Washington, D. C., Dec. 14.—(AP)—By finger prints and teeth, experts of the justice department's division of identification in the last seven months have figured out names to attach to 397 bodies that had been tagged as "unknown."

Finger prints provided the most definite clew, but tooth marks and dental work were an important addition in learning the names of these persons, who had been found dead without either friends or identification cards to say who they were.

Out of the 5,400,000 finger prints records on file J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the "G men" and finger print authority, said his men identified 397 of the 1,520 prints of dead men's fingers sent to them by police and coroners.

John Hamilton, last of the Dillinger gang, was identified in an Illinois gravel pit a year after his death by his teeth, Hoover said. Many other criminal corpses have been identified in similar manner.

AWARD HONORS AT DOLL SHOW AT CHAMPAIGN

Champaign, Ill., Dec. 14.—[Special.]—Lois Hackmann, East St. Louis, Ill., was awarded first place honors for having the best dressed individual doll in the annual Y. W. C. A. doll show on the University of Illinois campus today. Her doll was dressed to represent Cinderella. Honorable mention was awarded Helen A. Mies of Urbana with Peter Pan.

In the group competition first place honors were awarded Davenport house, second to Corinna group, and honorable mention to Alpha house. In the sorority division Theta Upsilon won first place, Delta Zeta second, and Sigma Kappa third.

Nearly 300 of the 500 dolls entered in the annual competition will be sent to a Chicago settlement house next week for distribution to needy children at Christmas time.

41 CCC Youths Treated for Ptomaine Poisoning

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 14.—(AP)—Physicians treated 41 youths of the Civilian Conservation corps for ptomaine poisoning today and reported six in a serious condition. The youths were stricken after eating dinner last night at the Tuna CCC camp near Tujunga, Cal.

PEDIGREED CATS AND A STRAY OUT FOR SHOW PRIZES

More than 140 pedigreed cats, one wild cat, and two alley cats made faces at each other in the Hotel La Salle yesterday as the Chicago Persian society opened its tenth annual cat show.

Persians, Manx, and Siamese cats all are included in the pedigreed groups, and together with the "extras" comprise the largest show ever held by the society. A total of 180 awards will be given out and when the entries are all in there will be about 180 cats.

"It's just like a golf tournament," an official explained. "Everybody has to win something, or else some of the cats," and he made a generous gesture toward the women entering the cats, "will be offended."

Insolent? Just English!

"Look over here," he continued. "Now there's a cat that just knows he is going to win a cup," and he pointed to a cage shadowed with blue ribbons in which "Barrie," 20 pounds and eight ounces of sulphur eyed blue Persian, lolled indifferently.

"He looks so insolent!" complained a spectator.

"O, no," Mrs. Olive A. Brundage of Indianapolis, his owner, said quickly. "He's just very reserved like all the English, aren't you, Barrie?" wagging a finger at him. This, too, Barrie ignored.

Two other entries were Mother and Son, entered by Mrs. Charles W. Bidwell of Chicago. Both Aspasia II., the silvery mother, and Sir Phoenix, the silvery son, have been grand champions.

Cross-Eyed and Holy.

"I think," Mrs. Bidwell said thoughtfully, "it's because their faces are so wise."

Mrs. C. C. Strange of El Paso entered a cross-eyed holy Siamese cat. G. W. Bombard, 3940 Janssen avenue, entered Tarzan, said to be the only Manx cat in America with a half length tail. Most Manx cats are tailless, but when one does have a tail it is apt to be extra long. Mrs. John Edward Curtis, 62 East Chestnut street, however, thinks her Lady Tiano is the prize entry of all, for Lady Tiano was a stray cat, and already has won three blue ribbons.

AND TWEET! THE BIRD SHOW

At the Hotel Sherman, a safe distance away from the cat show [and separated from it in this story by a sturdy boxed head], the Greater Chicago Cage Bird show is in progress.

The roller class championship was won by four tiny fellows owned by Joseph Diner, 4943 North Moody avenue. Out of a possible 500 points the team scored 457. "Their schockel," said an official, speaking of one of the 10 tones on which they were judged, "sounds almost as though they were laughing."

Lawyers' Group Files Bar Complaint Against Hodes

A complaint charging Corporation Counsel Barnet Hodes with "unprofessional conduct" because he failed to receive a delegation from the Lawyers' Security League of Illinois on Nov. 23 was filed yesterday with the grievance committee of the Chicago Bar association by H. E. Baker, secretary of the league. Hodes denied that he acted improperly in failing to see the delegation when it sought additional jobs for needy lawyers in the city's law department and the Municipal courts.

DENIES SLAYING WOMAN.

Farmington, Utah, Dec. 14.—(AP)—Paschal L. Boyer, 32 year old former butcher charged with one murder and accused of three other slayings, pleaded not guilty because of insanity today. His trial on a charge of the murder of Mrs. Blanche Nelson was set for Jan. 18.

WOMAN HELPS PROSECUTION OF LANGER AND AIDS

Bismarck, N. D., Dec. 14.—(AP)—Testimony of a woman witness was added today to the government case against former Gov. William Langer and three associates on trial in federal court charged with conspiracy.

Mrs. Edith Scott, federal emergency relief employé, testified she had been asked to contribute five per cent of her salary to the Leader, Langer-sponsored political weekly, but that R. A. Kinzer, then executive relief secretary, had assured her there would be no pressure.

She testified that her salary was cut from $90 to $85 a month after she refused to contribute and Kinzer had assured her her salary would be increased if she did contribute.

Kinzer is among defendants in the present trial. Others are Oscar Erickson, publisher of the Leader, and Frank Vogel, former state highway commissioner. They are charged with conspiracy to interfere with operation of federal relief measures by seeking political contributions from employés paid with federal relief and highway funds.

"Why I have just bought a late model car"

R. W. DAGLEY, D.V.M.,
5943 Roscoe Street,

TELLS HOW HE FOUND A GOOD LATE-MODEL CAR AT THE PRICE HE WANTED TO PAY.

"I have to have a 100% dependable car."—Dr. R. W. Dagley.

"I HONESTLY THINK THAT NOBODY COULD ASK FOR A BETTER CAR."

"I am a doctor of veterinary medicine. When a prize dog is ill and the owner calls me in, I have to keep my appointment with the same promptness as a family physician.

"I rely entirely on a car, and I have to have a 100% dependable car. The car I was driving was three years old, and although it was still a good car I noticed that its action was not as positive as when it was new. It did not start as easily. It didn't have the same pep, and once in a while it would cause me some delay.

DECIDES ON A LATER CAR

"I finally made up my mind to turn it in and get a late-model car, not over a year old.

"Looking in the Tribune want ads seemed to me to be the easiest way of finding the kind of car I wanted, and so I read the Tribune want ads carefully one Sunday. I saw a 1935 Dodge de luxe coupe advertised by the Felz Motor Sales, 907 Diversey Parkway.

INSPECTS CAR

"I stopped in at their showroom the next day and saw the car. It had hardly been driven at all and the price they asked for it made it a good buy. They made me a good offer on my old car. Frank Henry, the salesman, and Mr. Laz, sales manager, made up the papers and I signed them.

"Since buying it, I have taken the car on a 1,000 mile trip, besides my regular daily calls around the city, and I honestly think that nobody could ask for a better car."

If you are in need of a sturdy, late-model car, one which will give you reliable service, day and night, check the automobiles for sale columns in the Tribune want ad section. There you will find the most attractive offers. Practically all makes, models and color combinations are listed there for your selection. Prices are surprisingly low. Check the offers today!

"TRIBUNE WANT ADS HAVE GREATER DRAWING POWER THAN ANY OTHERS"

"Tribune advertising certainly pays. And it's a practical demonstration of the old adage that 'if a little is good, more is better.'

"Because of an exceptional number of fine used car bargains on our floors, we recently increased our Tribune advertising for a period of 60 days. And we increased our results accordingly. Needless to say, we reduced our stocks rapidly and made a lot of new friends.

"Incidentally, you may be glad to know that our experience with Tribune advertising proves it to have a greater drawing power in the securing of used car business than any other medium we have ever used."

EPISCOPALIANS LAUNCH REVIVAL ON HUGE SCALE

Plan Explained Today at Chicago Meeting.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

A religious revival in the Episcopal church in the United States has been launched and, according to its leaders, is rapidly gaining momentum. Dr. Arthur W. Sherman, New York, arrives in Chicago today to explain the movement and formally to launch it at Church of the Redeemer, 56th street and Blackstone avenue, and St. Paul's church, 50th street and Dorchester avenue.

Unlike anything undertaken in the Episcopal church on such a scale previously, the movement describes its sole purpose in terms revitalizing of religion in the life of the individual. To accomplish this, the directors of the movement have chosen an unusual method in the form of a day-to-day system of Bible readings and meditations. More than two million pieces of literature already have been printed and distributed for this purpose.

Rebirth Needed.

"We sense today as men never sensed before how the whole world stands in need of one security plan," declares the foreword to the first of the tracts issued. "It needs more than security. It needs rebirth. Men have plans; they give themselves fiercely to their plans. But the plans of men fail. God has a plan which cannot fail. He has been working at it all the ages. The church is for God's plan—and what a chance there is for it now!—that all men shall be reborn as brothers as they become God's children in his kingdom.

"The church must be the home of all men made one in Christ. To that then, the spirit of Christ sends the church forward. Christ must have all men, all areas of men's lives. Will you give yourself to this adventure—your heart, your person, your shared wealth, your love?"

The "Forward Movement," as it is known, had its beginning in the inspiration of the last general convention of the Episcopal church in Atlantic City last fall. The Rt. Rev. Henry W. Hobson, youthful bishop of Cincinnati, O., sounded the keynote for the movement and later was named chairman of it. Responding to possibilities of such a revival, the church assigned certain undesignated legacies to its promotion, and in this way nearly $100,000 a year will be available for the work.

Chicago the Starting Point.

Writers of note, experts in religious education and psychology, outstanding preachers and teachers of the church were assigned the duty of mapping the course of the movement. This group had its first meeting in Chicago several months ago, so that in a sense Chicago can logically claim to be the starting point of the movement. Headquarters are in Cincinnati and a staf of clergy and lay workers are daily engaged in pushing forward in a quiet, unostentatious way the bounds of the undertaking.

Bishop Hobson believes the hour has struck for a sweeping religious awakening; this religious awakening, he claims, must be a strictly individual one and cannot assume the proportions of a mass movement. The whole base upon which he and his assistants are working is a personal realization of the Christian message and its place in men's lives.

Austin J. Lindstrom, Chicago banker, is a member of the national forward movement commission. The Rev. Smythe Lindsay, formerly on the staf of St. Luke's procathedral, Evanston, is on the clerical staf of the movement. Bishop George Craig Stewart of the diocese of Chicago warmly indorses the movement and recommends it to his clergy and people.

"The Coming of the Light," a booklet for boys and girls to use at Christmas time, is a publication of the movement which will be issued in a few days. The announced purpose of the booklet is to "put Christ back into Christmas." Erection of a simple Christmas altar, a crêche, and the singing of carols for ten minutes after supper each night are among the suggestions for the children.

SON OF TOWN FOUNDER DIES.

WISCONSIN "U" BEAUTIES

Joy Mervis, Kenilworth, Ill. (left), and Sonja Frankowsky, Oak Park, Ill., are among 25 co-ed candidates vying for the beauty title in the traditional annual contest staged by the University of Wisconsin senior annual, the Badger. Six girls will be chosen from the 25 and will receive the title, "Badger Beauties of 1936," also serving as the court of honor for the 1936 prom to be held early in February. George Petty, Chicago magazine artist, and Max Factor, Hollywood cosmetician, will act as judges. A sophomore in the College of Letters and Science, Miss Mervis is representing Alpha Epsilon Phi sorority, of which she is a member. Miss Frankowsky represents Chadbourne hall, a woman's dormitory group.

ALL LIQUOR DRINKERS ORDERED OFF RELIEF; AUTO DEATH IS CAUSE

Denver, Colo., Dec. 14.—(AP)—All persons who drink liquor were ordered removed from relief rolls today by Paul D. Shriver, WPA administrator, after the car of a WPA worker killed a mother and her daughter.

"Any one who has the money to buy liquor does not need federal relief," said Shriver.

"Drinking on or off the job will be grounds for dismissal."

William E. Guthner, manager of safety, started a move to make driving while drunk a felony as a result of the accident in which Mrs. Ruth Irvine, 45 years old, her daughter, Dorothy, 17, were killed last night.

Guthner laid the blame for the accident on Buster Stearns, 19 years old, a WPA employé, and on judges who fail to assess "stiff penalties" for drunken driving.

French Doctor Gives Own Blood; Saves Woman's Life

BOULOGNE, France, Dec. 14.—[U. P.]—Dr. Pruvost, a resourceful country physician accustomed to all sorts of emergencies, provided his own blood for a transfusion today when he was called to attend a young mother in dire need at time of childbirth in a remote village. There being no suitable donor available the doctor transferred the blood from his own veins and saved the patient's life.

SEIZE BROTHER OF WARD LEADER IN A JOB DEAL

Salvatore [Sol] Porcaro, 43 years old, 741 North Trumbull avenue, brother of Joseph Porcaro, Republican committeeman in the 28th ward, called on Oscar Medzed, 28 years old, in his home at 2261 North Narragansett avenue last night to discuss Medzed's chance of getting on the park police force. There has been some preliminary negotiations between the two and Porcaro told Medzed last night that he could get him the appointment for $300. After some haggling Medzed paid $50 on account.

At this moment Detectives David Levin and Samuel Desent of the Cragin station stepped out of a bedroom where Medzed had hidden them and arrested Porcaro. Capt. Albert Mikes said he had complaints from several candidates for the fire and police departments who had paid money for jobs. They will be asked to view Porcaro today.

Recreation Parley to Hear School and Library Chiefs

William J. Bogan, superintendent of schools, and Carl B. Roden, chief librarian of the Chicago Public library, will speak at the first annual dinner conference of the Chicago recreation commission Tuesday evening at the Auditorium hotel. Frederic A. Delano, president of the American Planning and Civic association, vice governor of the federal reserve board, will be a guest speaker. He is an uncle of President Roosevelt.

TWO OF RESERVE BOARD UNLIKELY TO BE RENAMED

Washington, D. C., Dec. 14.—(AP)—Reports circulated in the capital tonight, without official confirmation, that at least two members of the present federal reserve board would not be chosen for the new board of governors for the system, which will take office Feb. 1.

At that time, a seven man board will be named by President Roosevelt, replacing the present eight man board. The existing setup includes two ex-officio members. Both will be dropped.

While the appointments rest solely with President Roosevelt, and he has made no statement so far, there have been reports that George R. James of Memphis, and Charles S. Hamlin of Boston may not be renamed. Hamlin has been with the board since its formation more than 20 years ago, while James was appointed by President Harding.

Names frequently mentioned in connection with possible places on the new board include Joseph A. Broderick, former New York bank superintendent, and Francis Law, of the First National bank of Dallas. Recently the name of A. P. Giannini, San Francisco banker, has been heard.

Bloomington, Ind., Dec. 14.—(AP)—An error which tended to show women students at Indiana university were not as smart as men was set right today by university officials. Yesterday's report was that 1,516 women and 1,187 men had received notices they were headed for failure in one or more courses. The notices actually went to but 516 women.

Mrs. Madoian Will Drop Appeal in Husband Slaying

Mrs. Suzane Madoian, 31 years old, mother of three children, will not appeal her conviction for the murder of her husband, Leo, to the Supreme court, according to an announcement yesterday by Attorney Samuel Hoffman. She is under a sentence of fourteen years in the penitentiary for killing her husband on June 19 in the home of a cousin at 1517 North Rockwell street. Her defense was that the revolver was discharged accidentally while she was trying to scare her husband into a reconciliation. Warden Frank Sain of the county jail said she would be taken to the penitentiary this week.

RACES CANCELED; WOMEN FLYERS CRY "SHAMEFUL"

Miami, Fla., Dec. 14.—(AP)—Air women pleaded today for an opportunity to display their skill at Miami's Air show, but the concluding day's demonstrations of speed and daring aloft were for "men only."

Loudly and vainly Miss Annette Gipson of New York, one of four women entered for a scheduled handicap race for their sex, protested as "shameful" the cancelation of the events.

Joining Miss Gipson were Miss Alberta Barber and Miss Charlotte Frye, both of Atlanta.

"They've advertised and ballyhooed events for women for months," said Miss Gipson, "and now with some flimsy excuse the officials tell us there won't be any races for women.

R. J. Walters, contest chairman, explained:

"The rules provide there must be five entrants for a race. At 5 p. m. Friday, three hours after the race was to have taken place, the third officially entered woman pilot arrived.

"It would have been a physical impossibility to have run the race as scheduled. We took care of the other postponed events in which the entrants were here at the scheduled time."

Hospital Seeks to Learn Paralysis Victim's Name

Officials at the County hospital are seeking to establish the identity of a man 60 years old who was stricken with paralysis on an Ogden avenue car Dec. 5 and has since been under treatment in the institution. Although the man apparently hears and understands what is said to him, he is unable to speak or write.

Church Fire Destroys Holy Paintings Worth $25,000

Holy paintings brought from Greece and valued at $25,000 were destroyed yesterday by fire in the Holy Trinity Greek Orthodox church at 1103 South Peoria street. Firemen who answered a 2-11 alram subdued the blaze after it had caused damage of $2,000 to the brick structure, which was built in 1898. The Rev. A Demakopoulos, pastor of the church, discovered the fire which started from an overheated furnace. He spread canvas over the altar and holy relics, saving them from damage.

MICHAEL HUGHES, EX-POLICE CHIEF, QUITS THE FORCE

Captain's Resignation Ends 39 Year Service.

Capt. Michael Hughes, former police commissioner and former chief of detectives, has ended a career of 39 years in the police department, it became known yesterday. His resignation was submitted a few days ago to Commissioner James P. Allman and becomes effective tomorrow.

Capt. Hughes is 64 years old, two years above the new age limit for policemen and firemen which becomes effective on Jan. 1 under a law passed at the last general session of the legislature.

He will receive a pension of $2,000 a year, which is half his annual $4,000 salary as of 1931, plus the income from certain accumulations which have accrued since he passed his 50th year and his 20th year of service.

Capt. Hughes was born in County Galway, Ireland, and came to Chicago as an immigrant boy of 17. He found work in the stockyards, became a Packingtown policeman, and in 1896 joined the city police department as a probationer.

First Stationed at Stockyards.

His first assignment was at the Stockyards station. Later he did downtown traffic duty, and worked as a sergeant out of the old Harrison street and 22d street stations.

In 1918 Hughes was transferred to the detective bureau as a squad chief. His police work soon won recognition and he became acting lieutenant and later lieutenant. In May of 1920 his squad made an all time record for efficiency.

Chief of Police Charles C. Fitzmorris named Hughes chief of detectives in 1921, and promoted him to the rank of captain. During his régime at the detective bureau Capt. Hughes became known as a skilled thief catcher. He remained there until Nov. 19, 1924, when he was transferred to Irving Park in the shakeup following the gang murder of Dion O'Banion.

Refuses to Accept Demotion.

Capt. Hughes at first refused to accept the demotion and resigned. He was persuaded to reconsider and was given a furlough. Upon returning to duty, Capt. Hughes went first to Irving Park and later to Deering, the station where he has since served when not filling a higher executive position.

On Jan. 1, 1927, he was given a leave of absence to become head of the railway police department, and on May 1, returned once more to duty in the city, as commissioner of police under a former Republican mayor. Capt. Hughes served as commissioner until Aug. 1, 1928.

During his 31 years of police experience before he was made commissioner, Capt. Hughes had received 31 creditable mentions, a high record in the department.

Capt. Hughes tried to resign once before, April 4, 1929, in an interdepartmental dispute, but William F. Russell, then commissioner, refused to accept his resignation. Since then he has been in command at Woodlawn and Deering stations.

Capt. Hughes is a widower. He has three daughters. A son, Sergt. Nicholas Hughes, was killed a few years ago by a bandit. Capt. Hughes lives at 9100 South Longwood drive.

MASARYK QUITS; URGES BENES AS NEW CZECH CHIEF

Ceremony Takes Place in President's Home.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia, Dec. 14.—Thomas Masaryk, 86 years old, presented his resignation as president of Czechoslovakia to the speakers of the lower and upper houses and Premier Mila Hodza at his home, Castle Lana, today.

The "little father" of his country explained he felt his strength insufficient to "cope with the difficult and responsible job of the presidential office."

"I have been elected president four times, which I believe entitles me to ask you to remember always that states can survive only with the help of the ideals that inspired them at birth," he said. "We must deal justly with all citizens regardless of their original nationality."

Urges Benes for His Post.

Masaryk concluded with an appeal to the national assembly to elect Eduard Benes, foreign minister, "who fought by my side at home and in foreign countries, as my successor. I trust I shall be allowed to observe your efforts for some time to come, if God is willing."

The assembly will meet on Wednesday to start electing a new president. The fact that today's meeting was held at his home in Lana instead of Prague was taken as an indication that the health of the first and only president of Czechoslovakia is not so good as was stated in official quarters.

EX-FEUDIST MUST DIE FOR SLAYING FEDERAL AGENT

Penalty Imposed Under 1934 U. S. Law.

Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 14.—(AP)—George W. Barrett, gray haired former Kentucky feudist, was wheeled before the bar of Federal Judge Robert C. Baltzell today and sentenced to be hanged some time before sunrise March 24, 1936.

Barrett was tried under a new law enacted in 1934, which provides that cases involving killings of federal officers be tried in federal courts. He was convicted last Saturday of the murder of Nelson B. Klein, a federal agent, at College Corner, Ind., Aug. 16. Heretofore such cases have been tried under state law in state courts.

Wounded in Both Legs.

Barrett, wounded in both legs in the gun battle which resulted in Klein's death, maintained the same stoical demeanor displayed throughout his trial as he heard Judge Baltzell impose sentence.

When the judge asked if he had anything to say the 50 year old Kentuckian replied in a clear, even voice:

"I killed Nelson Klein in defense of my own life."

The case was the second of its kind since congress passed a law in 1934 making it a federal offense to kill a government officer. John Paul Chase, survivor of the "battle of Barrington," near Chicago, is serving a life sentence at Alcatraz, Cal.

New Trial Motion Denied.

Judge Baltzell overruled a motion for new trial and then pronounced sentence of death.

If the case is not appealed the hanging will take place in the yard of the Marion county jail here.

It was the first time Judge Baltzell ever sentenced a man to death. Barrett's trial was the first murder case ever held in the federal court for the southern district of Indiana.

The last legal hanging in Marion county was forty-nine years ago. The United States criminal code, however, specifies punishment by death shall be by hanging.

'TOBACCO ROAD' LETS TIME FOR APPEAL EXPIRE

Corporation Counsel Barnet Hodes reported yesterday that the litigation over Mayor Kelly's closing of the play "Tobacco Road" apparently was ended. He explained that the time allowed for the producer's attorneys to appeal to the United States Supreme court on the ruling of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals expired Friday and that no notice of appeal was filed.

Mayor Kelly declared the drama obscene and revoked the license of the Selwyn theater, where it was appearing. The federal District court granted the producer an injunction restraining the city from interfering with "Tobacco Road," but the Appeals court reversed this ruling and upheld the city. The play was then taken to another city.

FUNERAL HELD IN A BARROOM; WHISKY TOASTS

Denver, Colo., Dec. 14.—(AP)—After a funeral in a barroom, pallbearers downed glasses of strong whisky today over the casket of George Deibel, eccentric rag picker. Thus they fulfilled his last wish.

The toast was raised in the historic old barroom of the Windsor hotel—once owned by the late H. A. W. Tabor, Colorado silver king.

Deibel, 90 and a bachelor, requested that his funeral be held in the room frequented many years ago by some of Denver's most prominent families.

He instructed Bishop Frank Rice of the Liberal church to serve the pallbearers "liquor of strong alcoholic content."

The toast was drunk to the tune of "When It's Springtime in the Rockies," one of Deibel's favorites.

LOIS, 9, HAS LOT OF EXCITEMENT IN "HUNTING JOB"

Lois Van Tuyl, 9 years old, 4363 Kenmore avenue, left home by bus yesterday morning with ten cents to "look for a job." Instead, when she got to the loop she spent the day at the toy departments of the stores. In the evening she found a dime on the sidewalk and went to a moving picture show.

When a policeman found her at State and Lake streets last night she said she was a "ballet dancer and singer" looking for a job. She was taken to Central station where she demonstrated a few dancing steps and songs. She did them well and was fed by policemen at a nearby restaurant. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Van Tuyl, were notified and took Lois home.

PLAY IS BARRED IN BOSTON; LONG NEW YORK RUN

Boston, Mass., Dec. 14.—(AP)—A New York dramatic success, "The Children's Hour," was added tonight to the long list of plays banned in Boston as indecent.

Praised by the full roster of New York critics and now in the 13th month of its Manhattan run, the three-act tragedy of life in a girls' boarding school was to have been presented here for a month under auspices of the American Theater society, an affiliate of the Theater Guild.

Boston's censorship, which has doomed numerous plays and hundreds of books found acceptable elsewhere, was invoked by Mayor Frederick W. Mansfield.

He declared he was "unalterably opposed" to the play's production here after reading it and a report of the city censor, Herbert L. McNary, who saw it in New York.

"The Children's Hour," explained McNary, "has been identified with a theme that would automatically bring it to the attention of the board of censors.

"The theme centers about homosexuality, and nothing could be done with the play to relieve it of this."

ONE TWIN BORN AT HOME; THEN ONE IN HOSPITAL

Pikeville, Ky., Dec. 14.—(AP)—Twin babies born to Mrs. Ed Williams, 20, seven miles apart with different physicians conducting the delivery were being cared for at a hospital here today.

A daughter born to Mrs. Williams at the family home at Broad Bottom was delivered by Dr. S. L. Prichard of Herold, Ky. Because the mother's condition seemed serious, he had her moved by ambulance to a hospital here. Shortly afterward a boy was delivered by Dr. A. G. Osborn of Pikeville.

Thieves Steal Hog, Butcher It on Farmer's Barn Lot

JEERS OF BRITONS FORCE NOVARRO TO CLOSE PLAY

LONDON, Dec. 14.—(AP)—Ramon Novarro, out $10,000 and with gallery shouts of "Go back to Hollywood!" still ringing in his ears, announced today the closing of the play "Royal Exchange."

Novarro financed the play, starring himself and Doris Kenyon, which had a run of seven days at His Majesty's theater.

The play's opening brought jeers and boos from critics, some of whom said no Hollywood film star should be expected to be able to act in the theater or score a success on the English stage.

4 Die as Russian Plane Crashes in Mountains

MOSCOW, Dec. 14.—(AP)—The pilot and three passengers were found dead today in the wreckage of a soviet airplane which crashed in the mountains near the town of Karkaralinsk.

SEES COLLEGE FOOTBALL DEAD IN SEVEN YEARS

Reforms Urged by N. Y. U. Official.

Sidestep at Dallas

DALLAS, Tex., Dec. 14.—(AP)—Southwest conference faculty representatives, meeting here today, avoided the question of legalizing athletic scholarships and financial aid to athletes. President E. W. McDiarmid of Fort Worth said there was no discussion of "loosening up" conference rules. It had been rumored that the Southwest would take action similar to that of the Southeastern conference and recognize athletic ability in granting scholarships.

Philadelphia, Pa., Dec. 14.—(AP)—Phillip O. Badger, chairman of the board of athletic control of New York university, said today intercollegiate football as it exists at present "will be dead in 1942" unless "those in a position of trust as heads of institutions get down to business."

Badger, speaking at the annual meeting of the Middle Atlantic States Athletic conference, said college football after 1942 "would be professional as against amateur" if officials did not stop "dodging responsibility and rationalize athletics."

"Worse Than in 1932."

Badger said conditions in intercollegiate football "are worse than in 1932 when I told the Sportsmanship Brotherhood Luncheon the game would expire in 10 years."

He referred to commercial radio broadcasts in which "coaches and institutions trade on the good name of colleges" as an aspect of college athletics that should be watched.

Badger also referred to "the growth of gambling in all its forms, which if allowed to go unchecked, may create havoc and disorderly conduct at games."

"Common sense" is all that is needed to solve the problem, Badger said.

RADIO BAN LIFTED

Richmond, Va., Dec. 14.—(AP)—Postponing action on both of the major controversial questions—proposals to outlaw financial inducements to athletes and to increase the size of the league—the Southern conference today lifted its ban on radio broadcasting, cleaned up a few minor odds and ends, and then called it a day.

By its action the conference indicated, however, it would pry the lid off the financial inducements matter at a meeting here Feb. 7 and 8 when both the subsidization question and proposals to take new schools into the league will come up for final consideration.

Nash Urges Action.

Chairman Charles P. Nash of the conference committee on colleges emphasized that at the February meeting some final word should be given to the petitioning colleges which have been hanging around for years.

His committee was prepared to make a recommendation to the executive committee of the conference, Nash told newspapermen, but deferred its report when the necessity for a February meeting to consider the subsidization matter became apparent. He declined to say what this report would have been.

Report O. K. on Six.

From a source close to the committee, however, it was learned that this group was prepared to recommend for membership William and Mary college and the University of Richmond in Virginia, Wake Forest and Davidson in North Carolina, and Furman and The Citadel in South Carolina.

This same source said no mention was made of two other petitioners, Centre in Kentucky and Presbyterian in South Carolina. These colleges made their bids after the other six had placed their petitions before the organization.

By a constitution amendment a year ago, the conference provided that the membership might be increased from ten to sixteen and barring another constitution change no more than a half dozen members could be taken into the group in February.

WIDESPREAD RECRUITING

Charges that colleges are recruiting not only high school athletes but musicians and debaters were made by L. A. Pittinger of Muncie, Ind., yesterday at a meeting of a committee appointed by the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools to consider the ethics, if any, of soliciting prospective students.

Pittinger, president of Ball State Teachers' college and committee chairman, made his statement when the group met with Bland L. Stradley, Ohio State university examiner, at the Stevens hotel. Stradley had said in an address before the association that college recruiting officers were using high pressure business methods in seeking enrollment of promising prep seniors.

The findings and recommendations of the committee will be announced in April, Mr. Pittinger said.

Lions Battle Giants Today; Title at Stake

BY WILFRID SMITH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 14.—The defending champions of the National Football league, New York's Giants, and the challengers, Detroit's Lions, completed preliminary drills this morning for tomorrow's title game at the University of Detroit stadium. The rival players and their coaches were outspokenly confident of victory, but all had a real worry in today's overcast sky and a forecast of rain or snow.

Detroit has become a red hot sports center in the last year. Today the down town followers of the Lions were celebrating another victory of Detroit's Joe Louis; bragging about acquisition of Al Simmons for the world baseball champion Tigers, and already were counting up the value of national professional football title.

May Play for $50,000.

Twenty-six thousand, a capacity crowd, are expected to watch tomorrow's pro final, although this prediction may go astray if the local federal weather expert's forecast of rain is correct. Right now Dick Richards, the No. 1 man in the Lion organization, can riffle a sheaf of bills totaling $36,000. A capacity crowd will bring in $50,000, in which the contending players will share.

Detroit wants to see New York, a team the Lions have not played during the regular league season. This lends real importance to the post season battle between the winners of the eastern and western divisions.

The basis for Detroit confidence may be found in the calibre of teams in these divisions. The Giants had only one real rival, the Brooklyn Dodgers, in the east. Detroit fought to the western title against Green Bay, the Cardinals, and the Bears, and victory was not assured until the Bears whipped the Cards last Sunday at Wrigley field.

Straw Covers Gridiron.

The gridiron is protected from the elements by a foot of straw over which the mammoth canvas covering has been stretched. With fair weather tomorrow, the field will afford firm footing for the Lions' speedy ball carriers.

Detroit's speed versus the Giants passing attack is the offensive measure of the championship game. Defensively the Giants are deemed to have a slight advantage in line play. In defense against passes, the Lions may find that the Giants hold the winning hand, for Coach Steve Owen's eleven has shown aptitude in covering receivers. On offense, New York has displayed phenomenal ability to break into the open when Ed Danowski is tossing the ball. Tod Goodwin, a first year man from West Virginia, has helped build up Danowski's passing mark to more than 50 per cent effectiveness, and you may be certain that Detroit will focus attention on this combination.

Giants Hold Workout.

The Giants worked out this morning at 11 o'clock at the University of Detroit practice field.

The champions had no opportunity to work yesterday, although an advance guard, headed by Harry Newman, former Michigan quarter back, established headquarters at the Belcrest hotel. They waited for the main body of Giants, who came to town this morning escorted by Coach Owen and the owners, Timothy J. Mara and his son, John Mara, president of the organization.

Detroit's challengers drilled under the guidance of George [Potsy] Clark at the Fair Grounds coliseum. Coach Clark announced he expected his veterans to hold the fort against Giant assaults. Only one first year man, Butch Morse, an end, has been nominated in the starting lineup. Clark even placed Ace Gutowsky in the full back position instead of Bill Shepherd, the hard running back from Western Maryland, who starred in the All-American game last August against the Chicago Bears.

Ace Is Ace Plunger.

Heretofore Gutowsky has been a second half player. Against the Bears here on Thanksgiving day Gutowsky did not take the field until after Shepherd and McDonald had seen action in the opening half. Experience, however, is in his favor, and the Bears will be the first to tell you he is a smashing plunger and just the type of player to lend greatest support to the wide runs of Dutch Clark and Glenn Presnell. Ernie Caddell, the leading scorer of the Lions, also is more effective with the threat of Gutowsky's line plunges.

THAT'S COMING CLOSE TO IT, ANYWAY!

Jim Seward (24), veteran Purdue center, tries to slip the ball into the basket from the side as the Boilermakers battle De Paul at Stadium last night. The shot was close, but rolled off the rim. This didn't daunt Seward and his teammates, however, for they took a 16-12 lead at half time and went on to win the hard fought battle, 28-24, before a crowd of 8,252. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

KESSLER LEADS BOILERMAKERS WITH 9 POINTS

8,252 See Stadium Battle.

BY FRENCH LANE.

Every time De Paul university gets the notion that it has the best basketball team in all the universe, along comes a bunch of kids from down at Purdue university in Indiana to knock 'em flat.

Last year, after De Paul had won 22 straight games, along came these lads from Purdue to whip them by a score of 48 to 37.

That was the last beating a De Paul team had taken until it clashed with these hard playing boys from Purdue at the Chicago Stadium last night.

Last night Purdue won, 28 to 24. Before this setback De Paul had won 14 more games in a row. Now the Blue Demons have won 36 games and lost two in 38 starts. Purdue mastered them on both occasions.

Kessler, Phillips, Lead.

Bob Kessler, captain of the Purdue team, scored nine of his team's points and always was leading his men into the charges which produced scores. Phillips was the pacemaker for the game De Paul boys. He also shot three baskets from the floor and connected for another point on a free throw.

A fast breaking attack in the first half sent Purdue into the lead 16 to 12. A fast passing, yet a half stalling defensive game kept them in possession of the lead all through the late stages of the game. Seldom did either team enjoy more than a four point margin.

Snowstorm Cuts Crowd.

What New York calls "big time" basketball because it is played in its Madison Square Garden caught on just fairly well in Chicago's spacious Stadium.

There were a lot of the red seats in the big arena that were not occupied. The official turnstile count was announced as 8,252. Had every seat been occupied, 19,000 would have watched the game.

That was the reason why the 8,252 customers seemed like a lost battalion in the big building. They were a brave lot, too, for a snow storm was raging along Madison street when it was time to start going to the game.

Kessler Stars Scoring.

At nearly every stage of the play during the first half the Boilermakers were in front. Kessler sent them into the lead thirty seconds after the game started with a dazzling basket shot with his left hand from the corner of the court.

Lambert of Purdue soon made another, but the De Paul boys entered into the spirit of the struggle. They profited on Purdue fouls and gradually pulled into a tie with the Boilermakers. Then Phillips shot one right through the center of the basket and De Paul took a 9 to 7 lead.

That was the only time during the entire game De Paul enjoyed the lead.

De Paul Rally Fails.

Going into the last half the Boilermakers were leading, 16 to 12. They clung to that sort of a margin until the score was 25 to 20, with two minutes to play.

Then De Paul rallied, Campion and Wendt shooting baskets from far out in the center of the court. After this happened the score was 25 to 24, with Purdue still in the lead.

The warning went out that but 30 seconds remained to play. The alert Kessler pushed another one up into the air which went spinning through the basket. Then Kessler made a free throw after an overanxious De Paul lad had fouled.

St. Mel High school defeated De Paul academy in a preliminary game, 32 to 27.

WISCONSIN WINS, 35-22

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Madison, Wis., Dec. 14.—[Special.]—With Gordon Fuller and Nick DeMark setting a fast pace, Wisconsin's basketball team tonight fulfilled the predictions of Coach Bud Foster by defeating Marquette, 35 to 22, in the field house here before a capacity crowd of 8,800.

Fuller a junior and DeMark, diminutive senior forward, were responsible for five field goals and eight free throws between them.

Wisconsin moved to the front in the opening minute of the 18th game between the schools, and, with the exception of a few minutes in first half, never was threatened. The Badgers led at one stage, 8 to 0, another time, 14 to 4, and still later, 28 to 15.

Wisconsin Is Accurate.

The Badgers who appeared better drilled, were successful on 13 out of

PITT MARCHES TO VICTORY OVER U. S. C., 12 TO 7

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 14.—The University of Pittsburgh football team defeated Southern California, 12 to 7, today in Memorial stadium before 40,000 spectators.

The Panthers, whose victory evened their intersectional score at 2 victories each showed great stubbornness in three goal line stands. They turned back the Trojans on the 5 yard line early in the second quarter after Full Back Frank Patrick had put over Pitts' first touchdown.

In the third quarter Pitt again staved off a threat which reached its 14 yard line from which Paul Shaw, end, broke through to spill the Trojan ball carrier. In the fourth period Pitt, aided by one penalty for too many time outs and three penalties for offside, two of them inside the five yard line, hurled back five successive bucks by Full Backs Cliff Propst and Glen Thompson to take the ball on their own 3 yard line.

One of Thompson's bucks put the ball within 20 inches of the goal. Another time an offside penalty of half the 2 yard distance to the goal line put it almost as close.

Trojans Score on Pass.

The Trojans finally scored on a long pass from Quarter Back Davis to end Bill Gaisford. The pass was thrown by Davis from the 42 yard line after Pitt had punted from its end zone. The Trojan touchdown was merely a consolation prize, however, as there was time for only 2 or 3 more plays before the game ended.

Pitts' alertness gained it the break that led to its first touchdown in the opening quarter. An 81 yard march to a touchdown in eight plays, accomplished its second score in the third period.

Besides these efforts Pitt missed three more points when Arnold Greene, alternate quarter back, failed on a 19 yard place kick early in the fourth quarter.

Pitt Intercepts Pass.

Badger Board Gets Nowhere in 7-Hour Football Hearing

BY CHARLES NEVADA.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Madison, Wis., Dec. 14.—The University of Wisconsin's faculty athletic board hauled out the muddled affairs of the school's athletic department for another airing today. Then after seven hours devoted to interrogation of sports writers and members of the varsity football squad the board adjourned without reaching a decision. Its probe will be resumed tomorrow morning.

Developments of a sensational character were lacking as the board plunged into its investigation of charges and counter charges that have split the Badger athletic department since John Golemgeske, football captain elect, last week disclosed he had circulated a petition condemning the coaching methods of Dr. Clarence W. Spears. Golemgeske alleged that Dr. Walter Meanwell, the university's athletic director, indirectly was responsible for the paper that demanded the ouster of Dr. Spears.

Asked About Petition.

The five football players questioned did not reveal their testimony, but newspaper men, with three exceptions, did. The sports writers acquainted fellow correspondents with the nature of the queries put to them during their appearances before the board. These were of a general character, such as "Was the petition circulated by Golemgeske the spontaneous action of football men or was it prompted by an individual?" and "Who is responsible for the present situation?"

Henry J. McCormick, sports editor of the Madison State Journal, said he informed the board that in his opinion there never will be harmony in the athletic department until Dr. Meanwell or Dr. Spears or both are dismissed.

McCormick said he told the board he could offer no tangible proof of conspiracy between and among members of the athletic department, but added, "Where there's so much smoke there must be plenty of fire."

He was among the several newspaper men invited to appear. He did not pledge to refrain from printing or telling what he said or learned during such appearance.

Hear Other Writers.

The morning session was confined to hearing the stories of other sports writers. Those called included Henry Casserly of the Madison Capital-Times; Howard Purser and Dave Zenoff, representing the Wisconsin News of Milwaukee; Harry Sheer, a correspondent for a Chicago newspaper, and Robert Shaplan, reporter for the Daily Cardinal, Wisconsin campus publication. Representatives of two other Milwaukee newspapers declined to appear, although invited.

While these hearings were in progress the board of directors of the Wisconsin Alumni association and the board of visitors for the university also were meeting.

The alumni group passed a resolution recommending an immediate and far-reaching investigation into the entire athletic situation. A. J. Berge of Chicago was elected secretary, succeeding Herman Egstadt.

Frank Attends Session.

The faculty athletic board has power to make recommendations to the board of regents. It is composed of four members of the faculty, two alumni, and four who serve in ex-officio capacity. Sitting this morning were: Glenn Frank, president of the university; Profs. Weaver, R. R. Aurner, Asher Hobson, and Gus Bohstedt; J. D. Phillips, business manager of the university; Harold M. Wilkie, president of the board of regents and chairman of that group's committee on physical education; Howard Heun, president of the student athletic board; Walter Alexander of Milwaukee, and Walter Heyman of Chicago, alumni members.

Other developments today included the publication of a letter from John R. Richards, former Wisconsin football coach, which charged Dr. Spears with coaching inefficiency and declared he was "not the type of man suitable to Wisconsin's needs."

Dr. Kelly Has Questions.

Dr. W. W. Kelly, Green Bay member of the board of visitors, said this afternoon that a number of questions pertinent to the present athletic situation would be asked of Athletic Director Meanwell, Basketball Coach Bud Foster, and others.

"And one of the first things we would like to have explained is transferring of the state high school basketball tournament from Madison, where it had been held for more than 15 years, to Wisconsin Rapids," Dr. Kelly said.

San Francisco, Cal., Dec. 14.—(AP)—University of California at Los Angeles ended its greatest football season today with a 13 to 7 victory over a favored St. Mary's college eleven.

Outgained and far behind in first downs, U. C. L. A. combined one pass and a swift ground thrust to triumph. Although unable to make a first down in the first half, it led, 6 to 0, at the half.

Pass Brings Score.

The second period touchdown came from a 26 yard pass, Charles Cheshire, half back, to Schroeder, left end.

St. Mary's opened the third quarter with a touchdown gained from an 80 yard drive and scored the extra point to go into the lead.

The tide turned again in favor of U. C. L. A. as the last period opened. With the ball on St. Mary's 46 yard line, U. C. L. A. drove down in two plays and an offside penalty to score.

Cheshire Breaks Away.

Cheshire got off his only good run of the day during this drive. He broke through the Gaels' right side for a 29 yard gain. It put the ball on the 17 yard line.

A five yard penalty sent the ball to the 12 yard line, from where Williams, sub full back, raced over, after faking a pass. Williams also kicked the extra point.

The only real display of power was provided by St. Mary's in its 80 yard advance that ended with Maxham, full back, going over for the last foot.

St. Mary's narrowly missed scores twice, once on a field goal and once when Maxham fumbled less than a yard from the goal.

DEMPSEY STILL ASKS IF LOUIS CAN TAKE PUNCH

Jack Says Joe Hasn't Been Hit by Hitter Yet.

New York, Dec. 14.—[Special.]—The sensational Joe Louis left this city today for his home in Detroit, unconcerned about his 26th straight professional ring victory, which was his 22d knockout triumph with Paulino Uzcudun the victim, and richer by some $36,878 for one of the easiest fights of his career. But, in addition to the bruised and forlorn Paulino he left behind, Louis also left in his wake some skepticism among boxing followers who hestitate to acclaim him a wonder despite his amazing record.

Jack Dempsey is among those inclined to be cautious, rather than extravagant, in their praise. Max Schmeling, another former tittleholder, who will be Louis' next major foe, and James J. Braddock, present champion, are others. Their basis for withholding unqualified acclaim from the former Golden Gloves champion is ignorance on whether Louis can take a punch—because he never has been hit by a hitter.

Boys Fold Up in Hurry.

"I don't want to take anything from Louis," said Dempsey. "He's the foremost heavyweight title prospect of the day. You can't get away from that on the record. But we won't know if he's a great fighter until somebody gets in there who will do some hitting with Louis.

"Most fighters he's faced have been folding up too quickly. They haven't shown much resistance to his punches. None of them, Carnera, Levinsky, Baer, or Paulino, was counted out. That proves he doesn't finish with a punch, though he's a paralyzing hitter. But he won't get the real test until he's in there with a fighter who can take it, and still come on giving it back. Until such a fighter is found we won't know whether Louis really is as great a fighter as his record would indicate.

Thinks Braddock Will Be Tough.

"I think Braddock will give him a tougher fight than Schmeling because Jim is a difficult target; Max is easy to hit. Another thing, I think Braddock punches much harder with his right than does Schmeling."

Braddock, who may be called upon to defend his crown against the Brown Bomber next year, was impressed with Louis' exhibition of punching, but unaffected. Schmeling unhesitatingly proclaimed Louis a marvelous fighter, but expressed confidence in his ability to whip him. As he sailed for his native Germany tonight on the Europa Schmeling said:

"Louis is a good fighter, but he can be hit, and I think I have satisfied everybody I can hit hard myself."

The consensus among boxing critics was that people never will know whether Louis can take it because there is none to give it to him. He has a style which is air tight as a defense, and destruction itself in execution of attack. And there does not appear on the pugilistic horizon right now a man who can survive the sense numbing shock of Louis' blows.

Louis Heads for Home and Wife.

Louis departed late in the afternoon for a short visit with his wife in Detroit. He will return here Wednesday morning, leaving that night with his wife, Managers Julian Black and John Roxborough, and Trainer Jack Blackburn for Miami, en route to Havana. In Cuba he will undergo a short training period preparatory to his bout against Idadoro Gastanaga there Dec. 29.

FIELD ARTILLERY POLOISTS DEFEAT TROOP, 14½ TO 14

The Black Horse troop's march to its sixth straight polo victory in its home arena was halted by the 122d Field Artillery, 14½ to 14, at the Chicago Riding club last night.

Louis Rates His Victims; Baer Is First, Carnera 2d

New York, Dec. 14.—[U. P.]—Joe Louis made his private estimate today of the men he has conquered in the ring during his unbroken string of 26 straight triumphs.

Louis' rankings and comment follow:

1. Max Baer: "I rank Baer first because I hit him harder than any other opponent. Any of the punches I hit Baer with would have knocked out any of the men I have fought."
2. Primo Carnera. "Primo get second place because of his troublesome left."
3. Lee Ramage. "Ramage is third because of his boxing ability. I learned a lot from him."
4. Patsy Perroni. "I give him fourth place because he tried to fight back harder than any other opponent."

Louis said he couldn't rank any of the rest of his opponents, because in the short time they stayed with him he couldn't find out enough about them. In this class he placed Paulino Uzcudun, his most recent victim; King Levinsky, and Roy Lazer.

Louis left today with his co-manager, John Roxborough, for Detroit, where he will meet his wife and stay for a few days before leaving for Havana to meet Isidoro Gastanaga Dec. 29.

PASS FALLS IN ENEMY HANDS

Lou Ferry of St. Mary's runs with ball after intercepting a pass thrown by Fred Funk of the University of California at Los Angeles in football game at San Francisco yesterday. Ferry is getting away from one tackler, but his advance came to a halt in a few more yards. Dickerson (21) and Schell (20) are cutting over to head him off. U. C. L. A. won the game, 13 to 7. Celebron and Zivic to Head Marigold Card

It will be Celebron's first appearance since Nov. 23 when he scored a ten round triumph over Lou Halper of Newark, N. J., at the 124th Field Artillery armory before 14,000. That accomplishment increased Billy's winning streak to four straight, but it halted his string of three consecutive one round knockouts. Previously Celebron, protégé of Sammy Mandell, former lightweight champion, had flattened Laddie Tonelli, George Engel, and Ernie Kirchner.

Floors Halper in Early Round.

The 24 year old Rockford youth floored Halper in an early round of their battle, after which he made Billy fight at his best to win. The victory was Celebron's thirty-seventh in forty starts as a professional. He won seventeen straight before losing to Billy Miller at Marigold Sept. 24, 1934. Then he won fourteen more battles before suffering his second defeat, at the hands of Babe Marino of San Francisco at Marigold Aug. 26. Thus far this year he has engaged in sixteen matches. He won all except two, seven by knockouts.

Third Marigold Appearance.

Zivic will be making his third appearance at Marigold against Celebron. He whipped Fred Chynoweth April 29 and knocked out Sammy Chivas May 6 in scraps there. Following the Chivas feat Zivic, one of the tallest boxers at his weight, stopped Eddie Adams at Kent, O., May 21. He lost in ten rounds to Lou Ambers at Pittsburgh July 1, but he was given considerable glory because one of his wallops fractured Ambers' jaw.

Bouts on this week's boxing and wrestling schedule include:

MONDAY.

At White City—Johnny Silvy vs. Rudy Kay, one fall or 60 minutes; Ivan Nikaloff vs. Homer Gooding, Ken Fenlon vs. Charley Peterson, Cleve Welch vs. Eddie Slake, and Lee Umbles vs. Ed Van Herrick, all light heavyweights, each one fall or 30 minutes [wrestling].

28 COUNTRIES ENTER WINTER OLYMPIC GAMES

BERLIN, Dec. 14.—(AP)—Twenty-eight nations, represented by 1,000 athletes, filed entries for the winter Olympic games at Garmisch-Partenkirchen, the Olympic committee announced today. Entries closed at midnight last night.

The list is the largest in the history of the winter Olympics. Greece, Australia, Bulgaria, Turkey, Spain, and Lichtenstein will compete for the first time.

Germany, Austria, and Czechoslovakia will compete in all divisions of the winter Olympics. The United States will participate in all except the military ski patrol and curling. Norway has entered all ski competitions in an effort to retain its supremacy, but will not participate in hocky, men's figure skating, or bobsled racing.

Triple play—Hemsley.

Senators Set 2 Double Play Major Marks

The efficient right side of the Washington Senator infield, second baseman Charles [Buddy] Myer and first baseman Joe Kuhel, accounted for two major league fielding records last season.

Both new marks were tied up with the business of turning out double plays official averages released yesterday reveal. The Senators clicked off 186 double plays, of which Kuhel participated in 150. His collection bettered the major league record of 149 set by Jim Bottomley of the St. Louis Cardinals in 1927, and replaced the league standard of 145 made in 1934 by Hal Trosky of Cleveland.

Myer Breaks Cuccinello's Mark.

Myer performed in 138 of the Senator double plays, breaking the major league record of 128 by Tony Cuccinello of Cincinnati in 1931, and the American league's best previous collection of 120. Stanley Harris, now pilot of the Senators, established the latter record back in 1923.

New individual champions showed up at every position, while the world champion Detroit Tigers, who tied with Washington for team honors at .974, in 1934, took over sole possession last year at .978.

Jimmy Foxx, star first baseman of the Philadelphia Athletics, who went to Boston in the biggest deal of the major league winter meetings, topped the field with an average of .997. The husky slugger was charged with only three errors as he replaced Zeke Bonura of the White Sox, winner of the honors in 1934. Bonura was second last season with .994.

Gehringer Tops Second Basemen.

At second base Charley Gehringer of the Tigers, ranked as the greatest in the game at the position, moved to the top of the list. He handled the ball at a .985 clip, making only 13 errors in 851 chances. Myer was second at .980, with Oscar Melillo who divided his time between St. Louis and Boston and who headed his field in 1934, third among the regulars at .973.

West Heads Outfielders.

Sam West of the St. Louis Browns paced the outfielders with a .989 average, replacing the 1934 leader, Sam Byrd, then with the Yankees. Bill Dickey of the Yankees, playing in 118 games, was the top ranking catcher at .995, ousting Rick Ferrell of Boston.

Hank Greenberg, Tiger first baseman, made six unassisted double plays during the season, and West, handling 449 putouts, tied the American league mark set by Johnny Mostil of the White Sox in passing the 400 mark in each of three seasons. Marvin Owen of the Tigers tied the league mark of nine assists at third base,

CANDIDATES FOR TABLE TENNIS TEAM CUT TO 9

Candidates for the table tennis team that will represent Chicago in intercity competition were reduced to nine after yesterday's elimination matches at the Stay and Play club.

Jack Denninger of Glen Ellyn; Dan Kreer, Winnetka; Leslie Lowry, Chicago, and Dan Mabee, Villa Park, were the survivors of a field of thirty who played yesterday. These four will take part in a round robin next Saturday with Billy Condy, Herman Leavitt, Mort Ladin, Herbert Aronson, and Robert McKinley.

This round robin will determine the membership of the team of five which will represent Chicago in the national intercity team matches to be held at the Lake Shore Athletic club, Jan. 4 and 5. Coleman Clark will be the non-playing captain.

Coral Gables, Fla., Dec. 14.—(AP)—Ted Turner, Pine Valley, N. J., came blazing unheralded through the dusk today to post 68, three under par, for the first round of the $10,000 Miami Biltmore open and seize medalist honors.

Racking up four birdies in his brilliant round, which came within one stroke of equaling the course record Willie MacFarlane set in 1933, Turner just managed to beat Horton Smith, Oak Park, Ill., and Frank Moore, young Chicago professional, each of whom posted a 69.

A seven foot putt he ran down at the 18th green, while the gallery scurried to watch, was the 27 year old Turner's margin of victory.

Smith Just Misses Long Putt.

Smith, playing with him, was 30 feet away. He smacked the ball up to the cup, but it failed to drop. His two under par 69 nevertheless served notice on the field of golfing great, gathered for the sport's richest tourney, that he was back in the form that won him nearly $30,000 in 1929 and 1930.

The three leaders' cards:

Out, Par	534	444	434—35
Turner	534	434	434—34
Smith	534	444	434—35
Moore	534	444	433—34
In, Par	443	435	445—36—71
Turner	443	426	434—34—68
Smith	433	335	454—34—69
Moore	443	336	444—35—69

Though the field numbered 216, the second largest in the six year history of golf's richest tournament, all but three golfers managed to finish before darkness. They will complete their rounds tomorrow morning, having but one hole to play.

Dann, McCarthy Lead Amateurs.

Leading the slender list of amateurs at the close of the day's play were Carl Dann, Orlando, state amateur champion, and Morton McCarthy, Norfolk, Va. Each had a 74.

Bunched just behind Smith and Moore, at 70, one under standard figures, were eight of the money players; Orville White, Memphis, Tenn.; Bobby Cruickshank, Richmond, Va.; Jack Forrester, Ora Dell, N. J., who was out in 32 for the day's best round only to slip coming home; Clarence Clark, Bloomfield, N. J.; Byron Nelson, Ridgewood, N. J.; John Milutic, Youngstown, O.; Bruce Coltart, Woodcrest, N. J.; and Frank Walsh, Chicago.

Eight more matched even par, 71. They were Bob McDonald, Chicago; Paul Runyan, White Plains, N. Y.; Victor Ghezzi, Deal, N. J.; Clarence Ehresman, Philadelphia; Al Nelson, Hopewell, N. J.; Jimmie Hines, Garden City, N. Y.; Ralph Kingsrud, Fargo, N. D., and Bert Montressor, Decatur, Ill.

Revolta Comes in With a 72.

Eleven were grouped at 72, among them Johnny Revolta, P. G. A. champion who was the heavy favorite in betting odds; Henry Picard, Hershey, Pa.; Al Watrous, Detroit, Mich., and Zell Eaton, Oklahoma City youngster who turned professional last week.

Bill Mehlhorn, Louisville, Ky.; Harry Cooper, Chicago; Willie MacFarlane, Tuckahoe, N. Y.; Gene Kunes, Philadelphia, Canadian open champion; Sandy Armour, Boca Raton, Fla.; Ed Dudley, Philadelphia, and Roland MacKenzie, Washington, had 73s. Sam Parks Jr., the open champion, finished with 74.

Tomorrow's 18 holes will cut the field to the 60 high pros and ten high amateurs, with ties. Predictions tonight, after the late burst of subpar, par, and near-par scoring, were that 152 or 153 would be needed to qualify.

Mack Sells Foxx to Red Sox
Review of Week's Sports

Baseball's biggest deal of the year, started at the minor league meetings in Dayton a month ago and gossiped about ever since in a hundred different forms, was consummated last week at the major league meeting in Chicago when Connie Mack, manager of the Philadelphia Athletics sold Jimmy Foxx, his star slugger, to the Boston Red Sox. Along with Foxx Mack gave the Red Sox Pitcher John Marcum for Pitcher Gordon [Dusty] Rhodes, Catcher George Savino, and $150,000 in cash.

Right behind the Foxx deal was the sale of Al Simmons, for three years the White Sox's one big star, to the Detroit Tigers for $75,000.

The bartering in the player market overshadowed the regular routine business of the league meetings, as it always does. Besides the Foxx and Simmons deals these made last week were outstanding:

Brooklyn — Traded Pitchers Ray Benge and Bob Reis, Catcher Al Lopez, and Infielder Tony Cuccinello to the Braves for Outfielder Randy Moore and Pitcher Ed [Dutch] Brandt.

Boston Braves—Sold Pitchers Flint Rhem and John Van De Mere to Nashville of the Southern association.

New York Yankees—Sent Pitcher Johnny Allen to Cleveland for Pitchers Monte Pearson and Steve Sundra.

New York Giants—Sent Pitcher Roy Parmelee and Outfielder Phil Weintraub to St. Louis Cardinals for Infielder Burgess Whitehead, Pitcher Allen Stout, Infielder Al Cuccinello, the latter two going to the Cards' farm system.

The National league turned the Braves franchise over to Bob Quinn under a new financial arrangement which is expected to lift the club out of the financial depths to which it has sunk in recent years. The league reëlected Ford Frick to the presidency for two years.

The joint action taken by the two leagues amounted to this:

Turned down request of amateur baseball congress for a $20,000 appropriation to be used for tournaments to pick two baseball teams for an exhibition of baseball in the Olympic games.

Adopted "novelty schedule" whereby each team will play four intersectional series next season instead of the customary three.

Awarded 1936 all-star game to Boston Braves and ordered that each league's charity fund receive $10,000 from the receipts of the game, to be played some time in July.

Abolished all Sunday double-headers until June 15.

Gave advisory council [Commissioner K. M. Landis and two league presidents] full authority to appoint umpires for all interleague games.

Cards Lose; Lions Coast to Western Pro Title.

The two months' battle for national professional football supremacy moved into its final chapter last week as the Detroit Lions rode into the championship of the western division of the National football league. The New York Giants previously had won the eastern division title and will meet the Lions for the league championship today at Detroit.

The Lions, though idle last Sunday, coasted into the championship when their one remaining threat, the Chicago Cardinals, fell before the Chicago Bears, 13 to 0, at Wrigley field. The two Chicago teams finished in a tie for third place in the western division. Green Bay took second place in the west by beating Philadelphia, 13 to 6. Boston lifted itself out of last place in the eastern division by playing a scoreless tie with Brooklyn, passing Philadelphia. The Giants wound up their regular season by trimming Pittsburgh, 13 to 0.

A. A. U. Approves U. S. Olympics Participation.

Only the sum of $300,000 remained to bar the way of United States athletic teams to the Olympic games in Germany next summer when the Amateur Athletic union concluded its annual meeting at New York last Sunday.

After two days of the most bitter debate in the history of the organization, the A. A. U. went on record at its final session as endorsing "unqualified participation" of American teams in the Olympic games. For two days the anti-Olympic forces threw their full weight against the campaign to send a team to Germany. Beaten at every turn they made their final fight on Sunday afternoon in support of a resolution offered by Justice Aaron Steuer of the New York Supreme court and calling for a three man commission to proceed to Germany and ascertain whether conditions there were favorable to American participation in the games. The resolution was voted down by a vote of 58¼ to 55¾.

Thereupon the Olympic forces led by Avery Brundage of Chicago, president of the American Olympic committee, went on to adopt the resolution favoring participation. The resolution stipulated, however, that the action was not to be interpreted as signifying the organization's approval of policies or tenets of the Nazi government.

Jeremiah T. Mahoney, leader of the anti-Olympic forces, immediately announced that he could not stand for reëlection as president. Brundage, who stepped out of the presidency in 1934 after six years in office, was returned to the leadership of the A. A. U. with Maj. Patrick Walsh, president of the Metropolitan A. A. U. and a sturdy supporter of the Olympic movement, elected vice president.

Brundage announced that the Olympic committee would seek to raise $300,000 to send American athletes to Germany. From $100,000 to $150,000, he said, would be raised by the Olympic tryouts. The task, always a tough one, seemed even harder, almost impossible this year with Mahoney and other Olympic foes stating openly that they would do all in their power to thwart the campaign.

Louis Spoils Uzcudun's Record; Stops Him in Fourth.

Joe Louis' path to a battle with James J. Braddock, for the world's heavyweight championship was cleared somewhat last week when he signed with the Twentieth Century club of New York to fight Max Schmeling, former champion, at the Yankee Stadium next June. Schmeling is the one outstanding heavyweight Louis has not fought and whipped.

Louis agreed to fight only three other bouts before meeting Schmeling. One was with Paulino Uzcudun, the Basque woodchopper, one with Izzy Gastanaga, on Dec. 29 at Havana, the last with Charley Retzlaff at the Chicago Stadium on Jan. 17.

Louis disposed of the fight with Uzcudun, whose chief remaining claim to fame was that he had never been knocked down, last Friday night. Louis floored the Spaniard in the fourth round for a count of eight, hit him again as he regained his feet, slapped him into the arms of the referee, who stopped the bout.

Battles Rage Over College Sports Conditions.

On two fronts the battle over athletic conditions in American colleges raged last week. At the University of Wisconsin the athletic council on Monday started its inquiry into charges made by Captain Elect John Golemgeske of the Badger football team that a petition he circulated to have Dr. Clarence W. Spears removed as football coach had been inspired by Athletic Director Walter Meanwell. On Wednesday Meanwell denied Golemgeske's charges in full.

Back came Golemgeske with a charge that Meanwell had given him whisky to drink on the train returning to Madison after the Wisconsin-Northwestern game at Evanston. Bill Fallon, Wisconsin trainer, replied to this charge, declaring he had given Golemgeske the whisky because he thought the boy was contracting a cold and needed a stimulant.

While Wisconsin was worrying over its individual problem Prof. George Owen of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, father of George Owen Jr., famous Harvard athlete of a dozen years ago and later a professional hocky player, delivered an all-inclusive broadside against so-called amateurism in colleges. He termed football a "racket," called Ohio State and Notre Dame the "greatest offenders" in the college ranks, and advocated the outright hiring of athletes "just like ordinary laborers."

Immediately the Rev. John F. O'Hara, president of Notre Dame, demanded an apology. Prof. Owen admitted he did not know everything about college athletics and telegraphed the Notre Dame president: "If my charges did not apply to Notre Dame, I apologize."

Then he told newspaper men: "Keep your eye on that 'if.'"

Father O'Hara demanded another apology; so did L. W. St. John, director of athletics at Ohio State. Prof. Owen made no reply direct, merely saying that he had hundreds of letters praising his attack on recruiting and subsidization and one letter offering him conclusive proof of one boy who will attend Notre Dame with all expenses paid to play football.

Prof. Owen's stand for out and out hiring of football players received some vindication on Friday, when the Southeastern conference, composed of 13 of the largest universities in the south, voted to recognize athletic ability in awarding scholarships and giving financial aid to students.

Johnny Revolta, Milwaukee pro, with a 72 hole score of 274, won the Sarasota open golf tournament. Victor Ghezzi of Deal, N. J., was second with 276.

Peoria, Ill., Dec. 14.—[Special.]—Toppling 3,083 pins, the Budweisers of Chicago rolled into first place of the five man event of the twenty-eighth annual Midwest Bowling tourney here today. Opening with 1,094, the Budweisers came back with 1,018 and 971 to shove the Strops of Detroit into second place with their 3,039 series. J. Roman was the heavy gunner with a 655 series. Four of the five averaged better than 200.

16 attempts from the free throw line. Marquette made only four out of 12.

Marquette employed eleven players in its efforts to uncover a winning combination. Capt. William [Cy] Rubado, still hobbling from a sprained ankle, entered the game midway in the first half and led his mates in a charge that pulled them to within three points of a tie.

MICHIGAN WINS, 35-24

Ann Arbor, Mich., Dec. 14.—[Special.]—Michigan came from behind to overtake and run away from the Michigan State basketball team here tonight, finishing with a 35 to 24 advantage after having been on the short end of a 15 to 14 score at half time.

The Wolverines played without John Gee, their tall center, taken ill shortly before game time. They seemed unable to get their bearings during the opening period. To add to their troubles, Maurice Buysse, Spartan center, sank four baskets. Michigan took command shortly after the second half opened, however, and once out in front won going away.

State played a close defense in the first half and Wolverine passing in the front court was faulty. John Townsend, replacement for Gee, was not at home in the position. Townsend picked up in the second half and with him the whole team. The Spartans spurted once in the second half while Michigan had a seven point lead, but could not maintain their pace and were dropping behind as the final gun sounded.

OHIO STATE WINS, 38-21

Columbus, O., Dec. 14.—[Special.]—Ohio State won its second practice basketball game here tonight by defeating Evansville college of Evansville, Ind., 38 to 21. Capt. Warren Whitlinger, Buckeye forward, was the individual star of the game, making eight baskets and two free throws for 18 points.

The speedy floor work of the winners, despite the absence of their regular center, Earl Thomas, during the first half, enabled the winners to pile up a 16 to 6 advantage. Ohio State drew away steadily during the second half. Seventeen Buckeyes were used, two injured members of the squad being withheld.

The Buckeyes tried 46 shots during the game, and made good on 16. Evansville had 37 shots at the basket and scored on seven.

PITT, 32; IOWA, 22

Iowa City, Ia., Dec. 14.—[Special.]—Pittsburgh's touring basketball team showed too much speed for the inexperienced University of Iowa quintet tonight and defeated the Hawkeyes, 32 to 22, before a crowd of 4,000.

The Panthers, paced by Capt. Roderick, swamped the Hawkeyes in the last half while holding the home team to two baskets.

After the first ten minutes Iowa led, 6 to 5, but a brace of baskets by Capt. Roderick and Radvansky gave the Panthers the lead. Pitt led at the half, 12 to 9.

Roderick made four field goals and a free throw to top the scoring with nine points. Capt. John Barko of Iowa scored only once from the field in the night of shooting. He missed a dozen easy open shots near the baskets.

It was Iowa's second defeat in three starts and the fifth straight Pittsburgh victory over the Hawkeyes since 1927. Score:

INDIANA, 32; LOYOLA, 25

Loyola suffered its first defeat of the season last night, losing to Indiana, 32 to 25, at Loyola. Marv Colen led Loyola with four field goals, but Gunning, Indiana forward, was high scorer with 14 points. Indiana took the lead late in the first half and stayed in the front for the rest of the game. The score at the half was 16 to 11. It was Loyola's first game with a Big Ten team in three years and was witnessed by a sellout crowd of 3,200.

Loyola took an early lead, with Brennan, Winkler, and Colen giving it a 5 to 2 lead after Fechtman had opened the game with a short field goal. Baskets by Gunning, Stout and Platt gave Indiana 12 points before Colen scored Loyola's seventh point. Gunning and Fechtman gave Indiana a 16 to 7 advantage with four minutes to go. Calihan's basket and free throw, and a field goal by Winkler brought the score up at the half.

GOPHERS LOSE, 29-26

Minneapolis, Minn., Dec. 14.—[Special.]—Carleton college's basketball team handed Minnesota its first defeat of the season tonight 29 to 26.

Carleton took an early lead of 6-1. Bill Friemuth, 6 foot 7 inch center, then was sent into the Minnesota lineup, and the Gophers whittled the Carls' lead down to 11-10 at half time. With Friemuth continuing to star, the Gophers swept into a 21 to 18 lead in the second half, but Carleton staged a strong finish to win the game.

MAROONS, 41; WHEATON, 25

The Chicago Maroons scored their first victory of the season last night at the Midway fieldhouse when they routed Wheaton college, 41 to 25.

Capt. Bill Haarlow and his Chicago teammates were impressive in their triumph, displaying a smooth breaking offense and vastly improved passing. The Midway quintet romped up and down the floor almost at will except for a brief interval at the opening of the second half, when Wheaton staged its only sustained scoring spurt. Haarlow had a personal field day with 28 points garnered on 12 field goals and 4 free throws.

Souchak ran it to the losers' 9 yard line, where Davis cornered him and Souchak lateraled to Paul Shaw. The latter fumbled. Randour bucked to the 5 yard line, and three plunges at the center of the line, one by Randour and two by Patrick, brought the latter over the goal. Patrick's kick for the extra point was wide.

In the third quarter Patrick began Pitt's second drive to the goal by bumping through his own 19 yard line to the 31 yard line. Hubert Randour, who has gained 725 yards for Pitt this season, but who today scored his first touchdown of the season, swept behind four blockers around U. S. C.'s left end for a twenty-five yard run to the Trojan 41 yard stripe. Randour added another run of twenty-four yards around the same end, with Patrick and one line player mowing down the Trojan tacklers.

Its' Seventh Defeat.

Pitt made seven first downs to the losers' five, and gained 207 yards to 150. Pitt gained 173 yards rushing, to the losers' 69. The Trojans tried twenty-two passes, completing six for a total of 81 yards. Pitt completed three of twelve for 34 yards. Pitt intercepted four passes and the Trojans two. Pitt recovered two of Southern California's three fumbles. Pitt fumbled once, Southern California recovering. The losers outpunted Pitt 36 4-10 yards to 34 9-10.

In losing their seventh football game of the 1935 season Southern California tackled and blocked harder and generally looked better than in any other home game this year.

124th Artillery Poloists Triumph Over Ramblers

Staving off a threat in the final minute of play, the 124th Field Artillery Polo team of Lieut. Don Rice, Capt. Romeo Mura, and Capt. Bill Everett defeated the Ramblers, 10½ to 9½, last night at the artillery armory.

Their victory, the second in a row, kept the 124th F. A. riders in the lead in the Metropolitan Polo league senior division title race.

Trailing by 4½ points as the second half started, the Ramblers with Bill Fergus and Steve Hammond starring pulled steadily up and got back into the game.

Fergus and Capt. Everett shared the high scoring honors of the evening with 6 goals each.

In the most one-sided game ever seen at the Armory, Olympia Fields Country club beat the Cardinals in the evening's opener, 13 to minus ½, holding their opponents to one earned goal which was more than nullified by three fouls.

Olympia Fields won with superior mounts and a smooth brand of team play, with Charlie Roovart and Eddie Hirsch sharing scoring honors at 5 goals apiece.

HAWKS BATTLE AMERICANS IN EAST TONIGHT

Chicagoans Fight to Keep Division Lead.

Tonight's Games

Montreal Canadiens at Boston.

Chicago Blackhawks at New York Americans.

New York Rangers at Detroit.

Tonight at Madison Square Garden, New York, the Blackhawks battle Red Dutton's Americans. It will be the Blackhawks' first meeting with the Star Spangled sextet this season away from home.

The Americans, who opened the season in Chicago, have made only one change in their lineup since they played at the Stadium Nov. 7. A player trade and some cash brought Pee Wee Wiseman, fleet skating right wing to the New York team. Detroit's farm club, the Olympics, obtained Fred Hergerts in the deal.

Schriner Sets Record.

The feat of the Americans' left wing, Sweeney Schriner, in making four scores against Toronto Nov. 9, constituted a record under the new rules. Others have made four and even five points in a game, but assists were mixed up in the accomplishment. Consequently, Schriner's four goals are the best any player has made since the 1929-'30 season when the present hockey laws went into effect.

With the exception of Lorne Chabot, the Hawks' entire squad of fifteen players will play in tonight's game.

Hawks Fight to Keep Lead.

The game is certain to be a tense affair, particularly on the part of the Blackhawks, who are fighting to keep the lead in the close race which is being waged in their division by the first three teams.

The Blackhawks will remain in New York to take advantage of the Garden ice for a practice session tomorrow. Tuesday morning they will leave for Montreal where they are scheduled to battle the Canadiens Thursday. Next Sunday they will be home to take on the New York Americans at the Stadium. Tonight's lineup:

CHICAGO.		NEW YORK.
Karakas	Goal	Worters
Burke	Defense	Dutton
Coulter	Defense	Murray
Romnes	Center	Chapman
McFadyen	Right Wing	Anderson

Badger Board Gets Nowhere in Seven Hours

Lieb, football coach at Loyola university of Los Angeles, had been in touch with a group representing the University of Wisconsin regarding Lieb's going to Madison next autumn to succeed Dr. Clarence Spear as head coach. Lieb, whose contract at Loyola expires Jan. 31, 1936, denied he had been approached.

"I have received no offer from Wisconsin and, as far as I know, Spears still is employed there," he said. As for me, I have had no communication with Wisconsin at all.

Won't Embarrass Friends.

"It is true I am a good friend of Dr. Meanwell at Madison and have had football coaching schools with him there for the last five years. That seems to have given emphasis to one of the reports published here about my going there to coach. I do not wish to do or say anything that might make it embarrassing for Spears or my other friends at Wisconsin.

"There is one objection to the football coaching job at Madison. Wisconsin has an arrangement there that has no tenure. The coach there is appointed from year to year. I would not be interested in any such arrangement."

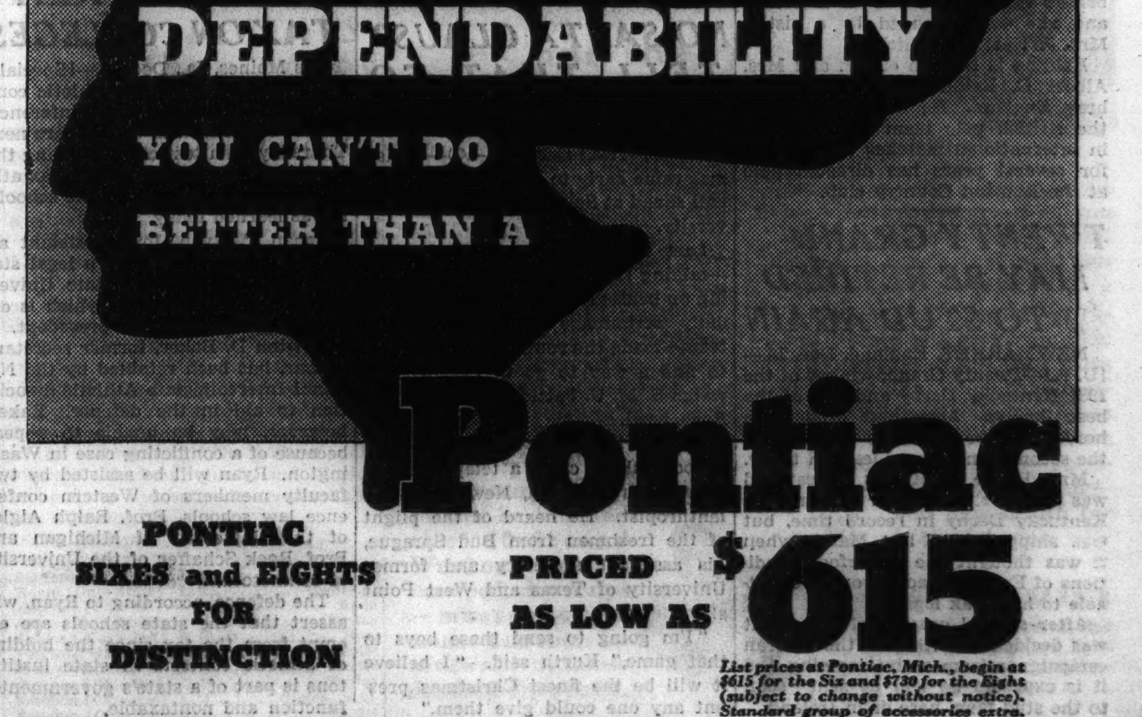
PLATTEVILLE, 40; DUBUQUE, 27.

Dubuque, Ia., Dec. 14.—[Special.]—The Platteville State Teachers swamped the University of Dubuque basketball team tonight, 40 to 27. At the half Platteville led, 26 to 6.



THOMASVILLE WINS 2D IN ROW AT NEW ORLEANS

Beats Fire Advance by a Length and Half.

New Orleans, La., Dec. 14.—The Supremus gelding, Thomasville, carrying the colors of Mrs. J. R. Gregory and trained by J. R. Gregory, made it two in a row at the Fair Grounds today when he won the New Orleans A. C. handicap. Favorite in a field of nine, the 4 year old came from behind in a race for horses of all ages and was drawing away at the finish.

Woodlander, leader in the stretch, was second, a head in front of Fire Advance, a long shot, which took third. In fourth place was Gilbert Elston, heavily backed to beat Thomasville, which carried top weight of 115 pounds. The track was fast. Thomasville's time was 1:39 1-5 for the eight furlongs. He paid $7.60 to win.

Thomasville Is Last Away.

Jocky G. Smith got Thomasville away last. Prospects appeared none too good for Thomasville when Judge Leer dashed along in front with Gilbert Elston second.

It was not until at the half that Thomasville began to gain. As he closed ground there still seemed to be little chance that he would overtake the leaders. Judge Leer meantime had faltered and Woodlander went to the front.

Thomasville was coming fast and outside the furlong pole it was clear he would get some part of the purse. As Smith kept at his mount, which responded gamely, the others shortened stride. This left Thomasville in front by a length and a half and drawing away at the finish.

Oican Wins Again.

Miss Alice Marlman's Oican also made it two in a row, winning by two lengths in the secondary feature. The earlier victory of this son of Busy American evidently was lightly regarded for the gelding returned $19.60 for $2.00. Sun Erin and Candle Fly were the favorites, the former finishing third and Candle Fly seventh. Jesting Queen got the place.

Oican required 1:47 1-5 to go the mile and sixteenth and carried 108 pounds.

Nominate 93 for Hialeah's Florida Derby

Miami, Fla., Dec. 14.—(AP)—The names of 93 leading young thoroughbreds were listed tonight as nominations for the $20,000 Florida Derby, the peak of the state's winter horse racing season.

Accepted as the annual classic for 3 year olds in Florida, the event will be run at Hialeah Park March 7, closing day of the track's 1936 regular meeting.

Value Increased $5,000.

Having its stake increased $5,000 over the $15,000 offered last year, the race now ranks in money value with the major northern purses for juveniles just rounding the year.

Track officials said the horses named showed greater promise than those entered in previous years.

Widener Names Brevity.

Other notable thoroughbreds named are J. W. Widener's Brevity, New York state winner; the King's ranch Split Second, heroine of the Selima stakes, and Calumet farm's Crossbow II., best of the 2 year olds to race in New England this summer.

E. R. Bradley's Bow and Arrow, also regarded as a bright Kentucky Derby prospect; the Brookmeade stable's Indian Broom, which will seek to cap Time Clock's 1934 Florida Derby triumph; J. U. Gratton's Grog, Maemere farm's Maerial, Joseph Pepp's Sunanair, entered in the opening day feature at Tropical Park Monday, and F. S. Page's James City.

BALDING, POLO STAR, MARRIES RUMSON, N. J., GIRL

New York, Dec. 14.—(AP)—Eleanor Hoagland, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph C. Hoagland of Rumson, N. J., and Herald Balding, internationally known polo player, were married today.

John Hay Whitney, polo teammate of Balding, was best man. The bride's father gave her in marriage and she was attended by a sister, Mrs. J. Hartley Mellick.

Balding is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert C. Balding of Melton Mowbray, England. He was a member of the British polo team which played in international matches of 1930 and for several years has directed polo at the Rumson Country club.

TWENTY GRAND MAY BE RETIRED TO STUD AGAIN

NEWMARKET, England, Dec. 14.—[U. P.]—Twenty Grand, winner of the 1931 Kentucky Derby and one of the best known American bred race horses, may be retired to the stud for the second time, it was learned today.

Mrs. Payne Whitney's 7 year old was retired shortly after winning the Kentucky Derby in record time, but was shipped here last March when it was thought the underfoot conditions of English tracks would be suitable to his weak legs.

After several unsuccessful races, it was decided to withdraw the veteran campaigner from active training and it is expected he will be sent soon to the stud farm here or in Ireland.

NO SANTA CLAUS? TELL THAT TO S. M. U. FRESHMEN

Last week members of the squad—talking through split lips and walking on bruised legs received in almost daily scrimmage with the varsity team—made the rounds in an attempt to find a way to go to Pasadena to watch S. M. U. battle Stanford in the Rose bowl.

All efforts failed.

Today there came a telephone call from Wilfred Kurth, New York philanthropist. He heard of the plight of the freshmen from Bud Sprague, his assistant secretary and former University of Texas and West Point star.

"I'm going to send those boys to that game," Kurth said. "I believe it will be the finest Christmas present any one could give them."

CALL GRIFFITH IN CASE TO FIGHT TAX ON COLLEGES

Des Moines, Ia., Dec. 14.—[Special.]—Maj. John L. Griffith, athletic commissioner of the Western conference, will be subpenaed to testify here next Thursday on a test case involving the federal government's right to tax athletic admission tickets at state schools, it was learned today.

Lehan T. Ryan, Iowa assistant attorney general, will head a legal staf which will defend the state University of Iowa in the case which is expected to set a national precedent.

Newton D. Baker, former secretary of war, has been retained by the National Intercollegiate Athletic association to aid in the defense. Baker, however, may be unable to appear because of a conflicting case in Washington. Ryan will be assisted by two faculty members of Western conference law schools, Prof. Ralph Aigler of the University of Michigan and Prof. Rock Schaffer of the University of Minnesota.

The defense, according to Ryan, will assert that the state schools are exempt from the tax since the holding of athletic contests in state institutons is part of a state's governmental function and nontaxable.

DEAR SANTA: IT'S QUITE EASY TO SUIT SPORTSMAN

Just Fill Up His Sock with These Tips.

BY BOB BECKER.

December 14, 1935.

Dear Santa:—

Some of the boys who do a lot of fishing and hunting asked me to write you about the Christmas gift problem because naturally it involves you and your north pole factory. Not that they want to complain. No siree! But possibly a few suggestions . . . a tip or two on what the outdoorsmen like in the way of gifts . . . well, they thought you wouldn't get angry at anybody if a few suggestions were made. So here are a list of some of the things the fishermen, hunters, campers and other outdoor fans have spoken about and we hope than you'll be a real pal and sort of keep them in mind on Christmas eve.

Skeet shooting jacket. . . . You want to remember, Santa, how popular skeet is during the winter, so a lot of the boys would be tickled pink with a nifty number to wear at the traps. There are a lot of models to choose from and they're not expensive.

Sport shirts. . . . You ought to have some swell numbers in your stock, Santa. Warm, colorful and ideal to wear on a winter day at the traps or on a hunting trip. [We like the plaids.] Won't set you back too much, either. . . from $5.50 up.

Don't Forget Upland Game Guns.

Skeet and upland game shotguns . . . either a regular double, an over and under double . . . or a three shot repeater 12 or 20 gauge bored for skeet and also suitable for upland game hunting. We ask you: Can you imagine a nicer gift for a shooter? Because we shoot both a 28 inch double 20 and a 26 inch over and under we know what a pleasure it is to own guns that can be used both for skeet and upland game. [These suggestions get a "double X" from us.] Don't forget 'em, Santa!

How About Gun Case, Santa?

A gun case. . . . A shooter never does get too many gun cases. We suggest the all lether type and also the wool lined case . . . a long one that takes a full length shotgun or rifle. This is an easy one for you, Santa. [The latter only costs about $4.00.]

Shooting mittens. . . . You sure do hand out a lot of gloves to all of us at Christmas, but many a time you overlook real, warm hunting gloves. We suggest something of horsehide with an opening in the palm of the right hand glove so a fellow can get his fingers out.

A tubular steel casting rod. . . . For a fisherman this is an ideal gift. There are some beautiful numbers in the drawn, tubular rod that are light, good to look at and very strong. We have been using them for some time. Not very expensive either.

How About Fly Rod?

A fly rod. . . . You know, Santa, fly fishing is on the up and up, so any fisherman would be glad to get a fly fishing outfit plus a good book on the sport. There's a real combination and don't forget. You'll find it possible to get a rod, reel, line, leaders, flies and everything else needed in one box—a complete outfit. Casting reel. . . . A fisherman never can own too many good reels, so here is a suggestion you ought to remember on Christmas eve. We suggest a level winder. Some dandies out this year and not very expensive either.

Thermos bottles. . . . We'll wager you didn't think of this one! You see a fisherman can always use a thermos bottle on hot days and the duck hunter can hardly get along without one on cold days when the bottle is filled with coffee or hot soup.

You have lots of other things in your pack that any fisherman would like, too, Santa. For instance—line driers, rod cases, leader boxes, fly boxes, creels, tackle boxes, and fish scales.

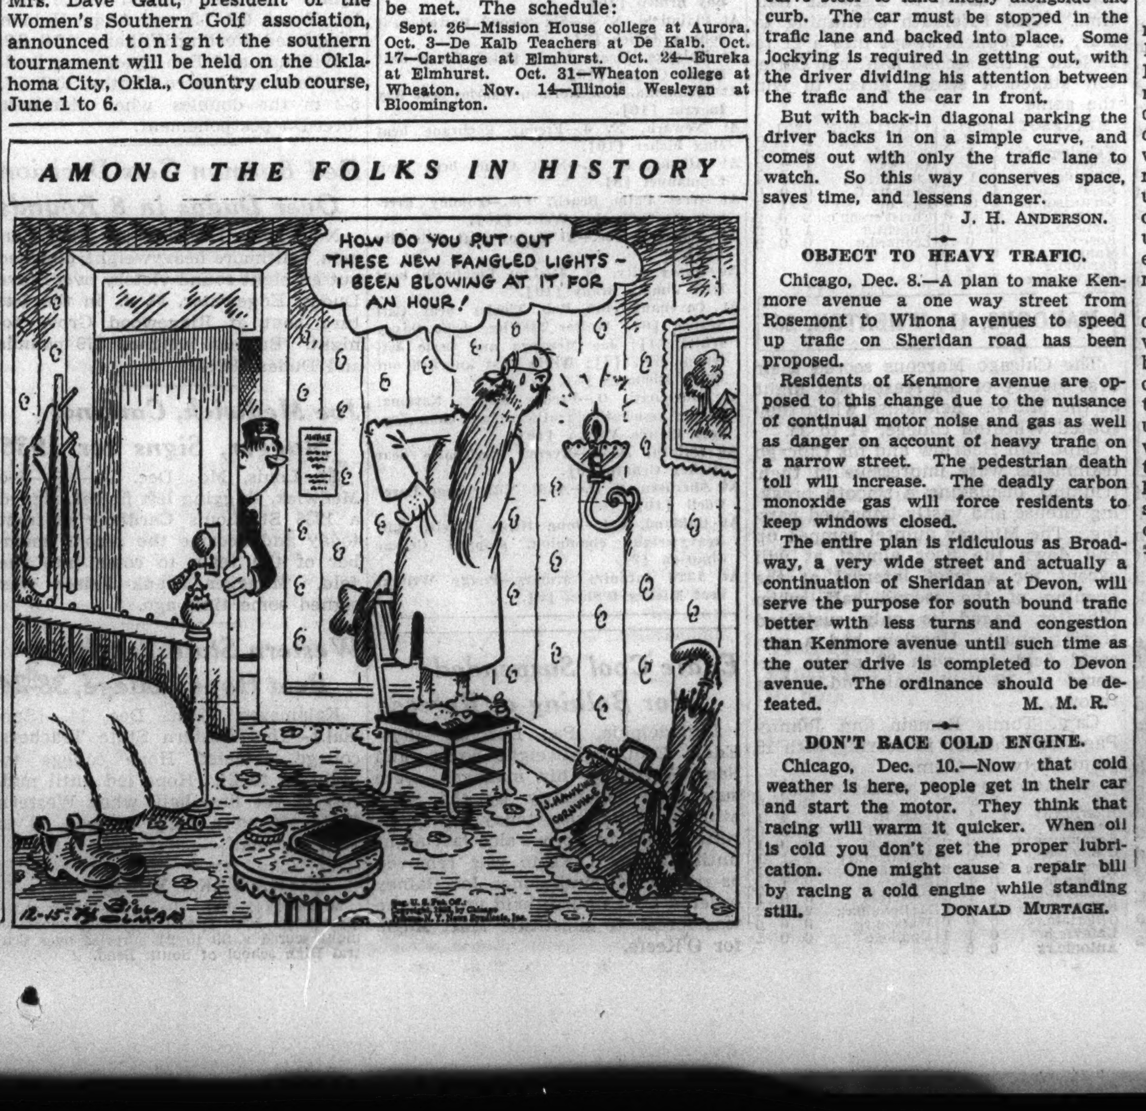
AMONG THE FOLKS IN HISTORY



NEWS AND VIEWS

Plans have been announced by W. K. Edmunds, manager of the Chicago branch of the Ford Motor company, for a "service clinic" to be held in the International Amphitheater at the U. S. Stockyards, here, Dec. 19.

The clinic will be attended by more than 800 dealers and service men from Ford dealerships throughout the Chicago branch of the company, which includes territory in Illinois, Indiana and Iowa. Officials to be present from company headquarters at Dearborn will include W. C. Cowling, general sales manager; F. T. Yaeger of the service department; and other main office officials.

December will go down in the records as marking two important achievements by the Chevrolet Motor company — the production of its 11,000,000th car since the founding of the company, and of the 1,000,000th car to be built in the calendar year of 1935.

Chevrolet's 11,000,000th car rolled off the line at its Flint plant Dec. 4, one of nearly 6,000 cars built that day at the company's ten assembly plants in the United States. The millionth car of 1935 was produced on Dec. 12, and the current year 1935 will thus go down in Chevrolet's records as its fourth million-car year, the others having been 1927, 1928 and 1929.

Announcement was made recently by Don E. Ahrens, general sales manager of the Cadillac Motor Car company, of the appointment of E. F. Upson as assistant general sales manager succeeding H. W. Peters, resigned.

Mr. Upson comes to the Cadillac factory with a long and successful record of twenty years in the retail field of the automobile business. During the last five years he has been manager of the Cadillac Pacific Region with headquarters in San Francisco. Prior to taking this assignment on the Pacific Coast, he was for several years district manager of the New England territory. Mr. Upson is a graduate of the United States Naval Academy Engineering school, and served in the United States Navy during the World war as lieutenant. He joined the Cadillac organization in 1926.

Long renowned as "America's Safety Car," the new Reo Flying Cloud for 1936 incorporates yet another feature designed to protect the driver and passengers. This consists of placing the starter button directly beneath the clutch pedal.

With the starter in this position, it is impossible to start the car while it is in gear. Thus, needless accidents caused by a moment of thoughtlessness or by inexperienced drivers who forget to put the car in neutral when starting, are eliminated forever.

Having added many new customers during 1935, Wenzel Motor Sales, [Plymouth and DeSoto dealers] have found it necessary to again increase their service facilities. They have recently leased a building at 3721-23 Broadway that has been equipped with the most complete and modern service facilities.

According to Vern R. Drum, president of the Hupp Motor Car corporation, the publicity being given to the terrific toll of casualties resulting from unsafe driving practices and hazards is decidedly helpful in itself, but probably possesses even greater value from the fact that words are usually the forerunners of action, and an aroused and concentrated interest on the part of the public, government officials and the automobile industry will eventually and surely result in such an improvement of traffic and car operating conditions, that casualties and fatalities will be greatly reduced. In Mr. Drum's opinion, it is highly desirable that there be greater cooperation and a more definitly connected program of action, as between manufacturers, municipal and state authorities, and the motoring public.

VOICE OF TRAFIC

BACK IN DIAGONALLY.

Argo, Ill., Dec. 12.—Last spring I wrote a letter stating that since parking of the automobile was one of the most annoying features of city driving, I would suggest that this trouble could be considerably alleviated through providing diagonal parking space, even to the extent of going over the curb onto the grass plots, in the neighborhood of stores, factories and institutions.

Since that time a ban has been instituted by the police department against diagonal parking. This seemed rather a stupid move to me, since the head-in diagonal lines could be repainted for back-in parking, and the objectionable feature complained about entirely removed.

It takes an expert to make a double curve steer to land nicely alongside the curb. The car must be stopped in the trafic lane and backed into place. Some jockying is required in getting out, with the driver dividing his attention between the trafic and the car in front.

But with back-in diagonal parking the driver backs in on a simple curve, and comes out with only the trafic lane to watch. So this way conserves space, saves time, and lessens danger.

J. H. ANDERSON.

OBJECT TO HEAVY TRAFIC.

Chicago, Dec. 8.—A plan to make Kenmore avenue a one way street from Rosemont to Winona avenues to speed up trafic on Sheridan road has been proposed.

Residents of Kenmore avenue are opposed to this change due to the nuisance of continual motor noise and gas as well as danger on account of heavy trafic on a narrow street. The pedestrian death toll will increase. The deadly carbon monoxide gas will force residents to keep windows closed.

The entire plan is ridiculous as Broadway, a very wide street and actually a continuation of Sheridan at Devon, will serve the purpose for south bound trafic better with less turns and congestion than Kenmore avenue until such time as the outer drive is completed to Devon avenue. The ordinance should be defeated.

DON'T RACE COLD ENGINE.

Chicago, Dec. 10.—Now that cold weather is here, people get in their car and start the motor. They think that racing will warm it quicker. When oil is cold you don't get the proper lubrication. One might cause a repair bill by racing a cold engine while standing still.

DONALD MURTAGH.

DROWSINESS IS CALLED MAJOR TRAFIC MENACE

Tribune Auto Editor Tells His Experience.

BY HAL FOUST.

Morpheus and Bacchus were honored by the ancient Romans, but neither is a friend of 20th century motorists. Trafic engineers, who have statistics on such things, rate the god of wine as a greater killer than the god of dreams. But in this series of stories written for consideration of good drivers I'd rate sleepiness with alcoholic exuberance as a cause of highway deaths.

As good drivers, we all know the danger of drink. But we don't all know the dangers of drowsiness. Or maybe we also don't appreciate fully what one or two cocktails or highballs do to our driving. So much of this trafic experting is guesswork that I don't like to make any statements resembling omniscience.

Judge John Gutknecht of Chicago's trafic court was asked by legislators at Springfield recently what portion of the metropolitan motor toll was due to drink. He replied that all statistics are unreliable, but that he would guess about 10 per cent, and for week-end tolls 50 per cent.

Judgment Warped a Little.

"Drunks don't cause the accidents," said the judge. "It's the fellow with just a drink or two who doesn't realize his judgment is warped a bit by the ounce or less of alcohol."

If the judge's guess merely approaches accuracy it's something to concern car owners in the approaching days of holiday cheer.

If the judge is right, as he may be for all I know, sleepiness can hardly compare with stimulants in number of trafic victims. But you can avoid taking a drink before driving, and you can't always avoid getting drowsy at the wheel.

In driving the Tribune roadster over a quarter of a million miles in the last six and a half years, I've had at least two close calls due to nodding at the wheel. A friend of mine, Pat Ryan, an insurance man, tells me of the large number of claims that are paid because drivers fall asleep on the road.

Terrorizing Experience.

It's a terrorizing experience to pass out at the wheel. Many don't live to tell about it. As a first warning of the danger you'll find that your car is wandering to the wrong side of the road or onto the shoulder when you blink your eyes. Don't ignore this sympton.

Entering South Bend, Ind., en route from Detroit to Chicago late one night a few years ago, I was debating whether to stop at a hotel there or to push on to Chicago. I must have driven through the town unconscious, a potential killer, because my next recollection was driving about 45 miles an hour down a railroad track approaching a tunnel. The pounding over the ties jarred me to wakefulness.

On another occasion, after a long day exploring the banks of the Ohio and Wabash rivers near their confluence, I refused a room without a bath or outside window in Vincennes, Ind., and then found the hotels in Terra Haute, Ind., and Danville, Ill., filled by conventions.

Car Vaults Stone Pile.

At about 3 or 4 o'clock in the morning the Tribune roadster was hightailing for Kankakee on a long, straight stretch of concrete. I was awakened, aware there had been a crash. All four wheels were off the ground. The headlights played on black clouds with the sway of the car. The automobile landed without mishap in soft mud.

After my knees had stopped trembling enough to get out of the machine I looked back and saw that I had continued straight where the pavement curved. The car had struck and vaulted a pile of crushed rock, three feet high, stored on the shoulder of the road.

I've tried everything to fight sleep except a recommendation made for this article by Dr. Irving S. Cutter, health editor of THE TRIBUNE. Of course, the one sure way to avoid this risk of drowsiness is not to spend too many hours at the wheel. But I'm not always able to do this with no one checking my hours of Tribune service except an exacting conscience.

Dr. Cutter's Recommendation.

I've cat napped beside the road at night and obtained only temporary relief. I've drunk coffee until bilious. I've chewed gum vigorously, slapped my face until it hurt, rubbed the back of my head and neck, stuck my head out of the window winter nights, whistled continually, turned on the radio full blast, and halted the involuntary blinking of the eyes to wink one eye at a time. All of these measures have helped a little, but not enough to keep me wide awake to the next town with a good hotel.

Dr. Cutter advises aromatic spirits of ammonia. These are stimulating when inhaled or they can be imbibed—half a teaspoonful in a glass of water. Carbonate of ammonia is the stimulant that was commonly used as a smelling salt in the days when it was fashionable for ladies in tight corsets to faint. On the market today, I am told, are these same smelling salts for the use of truck drivers in fighting sleep.

STRIKE OFF MORE MEDALS; PLUNGE IS PERFECT AGAIN

BY HOWARD MARTIN.

If every bowler conducted himself like Ad Plunge, who shoots in the Bruck Major league out on South Halsted street, the American Bowling congress would go broke trying to supply 300 shooters with gold medals. Luckily for the A. B. C. few can equal the accuracy of the 29 year old south sider, especially in the matter of perfect games.

On Dec. 1, 1933, Plunge blasted out a 300 game and in so doing helped himself to an 818 series, for which he was awarded a medal for the highest series shot in the state that season. Of course, the A. B. C. awarded him a 300 medal, too.

Takes His Second Medal.

Then on April 13, 1934, Plunge again tossed in 12 strikes in a sanctioned league game and again he exceeded 800, this time by five pins. That meant another A. B. C. gold medal.

Last Feb. 15 Plunge's inside hook ball again gave him a 300 game, but his total on that occasion was only 666. These three perfect games were rolled on the Bruck-Wiesner alleys.

Changing the scene of this perfect game business, Plunge last Wednesday gathered with the boys in the Bruck Major league. Again he banged away for a 300 count and totaled 714. According to Pete Bruck the feat of four perfect games in a span of approximately two years never has been approached in organized Chicago bowling.

He's Maintaining 210 Average.

Plunge is maintaining a 210 average in the Bruck Major league and with his help the Kruse Undertakers are setting the team pace with a 1,012 average and a record of 23 victories and 10 losses.

Among other notable series at the last session of the Bruck Major league were: J. Garvey, 690; W. Harper, 674; W. Giese, 673; W. Narten, 662, and L. Reefe, 662.

North End League.

Led by the veteran, George Geiser, who rolled 254, 233, and 233 to total 720 for a new record in the North End Traveling league, the Birk Brothers took a firmer grip on first place when they won three games from the third place Westers. The Birks totaled 3,219, including a 1,109 game. Roy Achenback of the Michelobs shot a 286 game, his team winning two games from the Idle Hours. Tomorrow night's schedule:

Idle Hours at Gold Coast, 9 p. m.; Fox De Luxe at Lincoln Square, 7 p. m.; Milfords at Samuelson's, 7 p. m.; Schambergers at Bryn Mawr, 7 p. m.; Birks at North Town, 7 p. m.

About the Women.

Edith Kirg is back in the lead in the Crocombe All-Star league with a 194 average, but she shares first place on a won and lost basis with Fritzi Trettin. Each has 28 victories and 8 defeats. Bess Fender is third with 26 won and 10 lost, and Tess Morris is fourth with 23 and 13. Tonight's schedule at the Woodlawn alleys:

Nellie Rynberk vs. May Davison; Edith Kirg vs. Bess Fender; Dorothy Burmeister vs. Fritzi Trettin; Dorothy Morross vs. Tess Morris; Carrie Enders vs. Alberta Burton; Agnes Pitelka vs. Ann Burke; Mae Stone vs. Agnes Crocombe; Mabel Cummings vs. Cecelia Leary.

Kitty Gebler topped the Bruck league with 589, followed by Ethel Kelly, 570; Nettie Kolb, 555; Polly Comeford, 550, and Margaret Torkelson, 541. . . . Clara Geweke came back strong again in the West Ridge league, piling up a 618 total on games of 201, 227, and 190. Other leaders were: Gertrude Dornblasser, 552; Elsie Hall, 544; Ollie Zimmerman, 536; Mae Ebert, 529; Betty Kleine, 528; Harriett Bennett, 523; Lee Liepe, 511; Esther Hess, 509; Marie Wermich, 501.

Look at the 600 series in the Congress league! Betty Kleine, 654; Dorothy Burmeister, 625, and Lee Schulz, 603. Then came Gerda Johnson, 567; Lee Liepe, 562; Celia Grob, 558; Betty Dorn, 556; Teresa Forkin and Harriett Bennett, 550; Nettie Kolb, 548, and Bess Fender, 545. . . . In the Garden Recreation league Betty Ramsey showed the way with 585. Georgette Griffon had 574; Mae Hardenstein, 570; Elsa Heding, 549; Harriett Bennett, 538; Alpha Hogman, 536; Barbara Brown, 535; Catherine Immel, 521, and Ruth Van Praagh, 520.

Here and There.

Perhaps it might be contempt of court, but a quintet of Municipal court judges aren't such good bowlers, at least when a group of lawyers are the opposition. Led by John W. Bennett, who was ably assisted by James B. McKeon, Henry E. Ayers, Harry Hershenson, and William J. Mannion, the attorneys piled up a 2,831 total against the 2,540 turned in by Judges Harold O'Connell, Thomas Green, Edward Scheffler, George Weiss, and Stephen Adamowski at the Medinah club alleys. The scores:

On North Side Alleys.

Fuller Press and the Budweisers broke the four way tie for first place by sweeping their series in the Gold Coast Major league. For the second week in succession the Gold Coast team topped the league with a 3041 series that was good for only one victory against the Black Bears. Hieb of the Black Bears led the individuals with 672. . . . The Alderman Orlikoski team set a new record for the Chicago Junior Traveling league by getting games of 997, 1,047, and 1,089 for 3,133, the first 3,100 series ever shot.

On South Side Alleys.

The Stevenson and Schalk Recreation team leads the S. and S. National league, with Lea's Foamery second and the Wesley Smiths third. In the individual race Arvia has a 190 average, McClintock 188, and Paulson 185. . . . Tony McGlone, veteran of the alleys, topped the Woodlawn league with 653.

Boys' Quintets Open Today in C. Y. O. League

Opening games in the boys' division of the Catholic Youth Organization Basketball league will be played today in 27 gymnasiums throughout the city and suburbs. A total of 110 heavyweight and lightweight games is scheduled.

Altogether, 40 sections compose the C. Y. O. league, 28 for boys and 12 for girls, numbering 410 teams. The C. Y. O. league is claimed to be the largest organized basketball league in the world. Besides Chicago players, boys and girls from Joliet, Kankakee, Elmhurst, Berwyn, Cicero, Oak Park, Evanston, River Forest, and Waukegan take part in its three month long campaign.

The race generally comes to an end in the middle of March when title finals are held in the heavyweight, lightweight, and girls' divisions. Defending champions this year are St. John's of Joliet heavies, Sacred Heart [19th street] lights, and St. Ignatius girls.

Three new sections have been formed for this year's race. They are Weber High, St. Barbara's, and Rosedale Park.

ARRAIGN 16 IN NEW YORK WAR ON FAKE TIPS

Ballston Spa, N. Y., Dec. 14.—(AP)—New York state's war against fake race track tip services moved forward today with arraignment of 14 men and two women among the 86 persons recently indicted by a Saratoga county grand jury.

All pleaded innocent, reserving the right to withdraw the pleas and interpose a demurrer to the indictments. Bail varying from $500 to $10,000 was set.

Ten of the persons arraigned were arrested following the indictments, and six appeared voluntarily with their counsel, Lester W. Bloch of Albany. All are connected with racing publications in New York City.

The charges included publication of misleading advertisements, conspiracy to commit petit larceny, and conspiracy to defraud.

Complete East Squad; 9 Backs, 13 Line Men

The personnel of the All-East team which will play the All-West stars in the Shrine benefit game at San Francisco New Year's day was completed yesterday with the selection of Frank Antonini, veteran end from Indiana university.

Andy Kerr of Colgate and Dick Hanley, former Northwestern coach, collaborated on the selection of the team, which consists of 22 players, eleven from the midwest and eleven from the east and south. The squad, composed of 13 linemen and nine backs, will assemble at Dyche stadium Wednesday for its first workout and will leave that night for the west.

Hanley said yesterday that the team is one of the most powerful ever assembled by the east. Emphasis was placed this year on ruggedness and blocking ability, lack of which led to the east's downfall during the past two years, Hanley added.

The midwestern members of the squad consist of seven line men and four backs. This group averages 200 pounds per man. Wally Cruice, Northwestern half back, who weighs 185 pounds, is the lightest. Six Big Ten schools are represented on the team. They are Northwestern, Indiana, Purdue, Minnesota, Ohio, and Iowa. Several players who were sought from other conference schools were unable to accept because they compete in other sports. This was true in the case of Jay Berwanger of Chicago, who is captain elect of the track team. Millner and Shakespeare of Notre Dame also were invited, but were unable to accept.

Tackles—R. Smith, Minnesota; Lewis, Ohio university; Stydahar, West Virginia; Wasicek, Colgate.
Guards—Oech, Minnesota; Fortman, Colgate; Jontos, Syracuse.
Centers—Jones, Ohio; Francis, Alabama.

generalities. Coach Owen might hope that Dale Burnett, his ace ball carrier, was in condition to start. There is slight chance for Burnett to play because of his infected hand and his name was not included on the list of 24 eligible players for the championship game. However, if Burnett should gain consent of his physician to compete, this matter of eligibility could be settled. The league limits personnel to 24. Burnett, with permission of Joe F. Carr, president of the league, who is holding forth at league headquarters in the Book-Cadillac hotel, has power to alter the first lists.

Club Officials on Hand.

Already reported for the game or accounted for, are Lud Wray, of Philadelphia; George Halas, of the Chicago Bears; George Marshall, owner of the Boston Redskins; Arthur J. Rooney, of Pittsburgh and Dan Topping, of Brooklyn. The Chicago Cardinals and Green Bay Packers are not represented, but members of those teams may arrive before the the kick off at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

There apparently is little wagering on the outcome. Gamblers who backed the Chicago Bears last year only to have the Giants win, 30 to 13, when they used tennis shoes to negotiate the icy surface of the Polo Grounds, have learned that playing conditions may easily disrupt the odds based on personnel.

All Depends on Weather.

Quite likely, with a dry field, Detroit's speed would dominate. Of course, New York's passes will work better under these same conditions. But on a muddy field, the Giants are given the edge. Weather holds the cards and as result what wagering is done probably will be accomplished tomorrow morning. There is practically no betting on points.

PITTSBURGH PRO TEAM DEFEATS COLLEGE STARS

Pittsburgh, Pa., Dec. 14.—(AP)—The Pittsburgh Pirates, National league professional football team, scored a 14 to 0 victory over a college All-Star team today in a game played on a muddy field.

Bray, Pirate half back broke through the collegians' line, picked up the ball and scampered across the goal line. The Pirates' second touchdown was made soon after the start of the second half. The professionals blocked Meglens' punt, and Sortet scooped up the ball. He crossed the line standing up.

The lineups:

CITY'S BUSINESS MEN TO TAKE UP FARMING HOBBY

Will Advance Agriculture; Hope for Profits.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

Gentlemen farmers of the city and others interested in the advancement of agriculture have formed an organization to be known as The Chicago Farmers, which will give business men an opportunity to exchange views, discuss economic and social problems of the farm and to meet others interested in their avocation.

The certificate of incorporation for this city farmers' nonprofit organization was issued in Springfield on Dec. 9, according to an announcement made yesterday by Porter Fox, who was elected president by the board of directors at the first meeting held at the Midday club Friday. Headquarters have been temporarily established in the office of the secretary, J. Rockefeller Prentice, at 11 South La Salle street.

President's Interests Vary.

The members' interests in farming are similar to those of the president, who owns a dairy farm in northern Illinois, a horse farm in Missouri, and a rice plantation in Arkansas. Many of these Chicago farmers, like hundreds of others in the city, have their loop office walls and tables decorated with pictures and statues of favorite animals on their farms.

Practically all phases of agriculture are represented in the membership of the Chicago Farmers. For several months the organizers have attended informal meetings held in downtown clubs where they have discussed agricultural questions of mutual interest. The attendance at the meetings increased, each man bringing along a city farmer friend, until approximately 50 individuals indicated their desire to form an organization of Chicago farmers interested in farming as a hobby or as a business, or both.

To Advance Farming.

Mr. Fox explained that the purpose of The Chicago Farmers, set forth in the certificate of incorporation, is "to advance agriculture and animal husbandry, and the best interests of all persons engaged therein; to promote, foster and encourage the business of producing, handling and marketing agricultural products, including live stock and the products of live stock; to promote, foster and encourage the conduct of such business by scientific, efficient and economically sound methods; to do any and all things which may be necessary or proper for the accomplishment of the purposes herein enumerated, or which shall at any time appear conducive to or expedient for the interest of the corporation or its members."

In addition to electing the president and secretary at Friday's meeting, the board of directors selected W. H. Schendorf as vice president and L. A. Hine Jr. as treasurer. The four officers and J. R. McGlashan, A. R. Johnson, and Charles E. Gambill make up the board of directors.

WITNESSES KNIT STATE'S CASE IN SEXTUPLE KILLING

They were called to corroborate the story of Peggy Peterson Paulos, codefendant and accuser of Hall. She testified she and Hall left Seattle to rob the Frank Flieders at Erland's Point March 28, 1934, and that Hall was injured in a fight which brought death to six persons.

A Bremerton navy yard worker, C. K. Long, testified he saw cuts and bruises on Hall's face the morning after the slayings.

Katherine McPhee, attendant at a Seattle safe deposit vault, identified a withdrawal slip she said Hall signed the afternoon before the killings occurred. The state contends Hall obtained a revolver and blackjack from the vault and used them at Erland's Point.

Luke S. May, criminologist, said handwriting on the withdrawal slip matched that contained in a letter Hall allegedly wrote to Miss Carrie Stickles, Memphis, Tenn., asking for money to escape Seattle. The letter was mailed on March 31, the day the slayings were discovered.

Bartender Admits Slaying; Claims Self-Defense

Joseph Lispie, 35 years old, a bartender in a tavern at 536 North Clark street, was held at the Chicago avenue police station last night after he had admitted the fatal shooting of Valentine Pipp, 25 years old, 748 North Dearborn street. Lispie said he shot Pipp Friday night in self defense after the latter had entered the tavern and threatened him with a lead pipe. The inquest, which was continued yesterday, will be resumed Tuesday, said Deputy Coroner Sol Oliverio.

Alien 24 Years, Jobless 10 and on Relief; Fined $25

Joseph Ostadnicki, 64 years old, 13220 Houston avenue, when arraigned on a disorderly conduct charge before Municipal Judge Thomas A. Green yesterday, said he is still an lien, though he has been in America 24 years. He has been unemployed 10 years, on relief 22 months and on a WPA pay roll for one month. Judge Green fined Ostadnicki $25 and criticized the WPA for giving jobs to aliens when citizens need them.

To Be Honored

Ralph R. Teetor of Hagerstown, Ind., who has been blind since early childhood, will become president of the Society of Automotive Engineers during convention in Detroit Jan. 13 to 17. He is vice president of a large piston ring company.

N. Y. ANTI-HEART BALM LAW WILL GET COURT TEST

Albany, N. Y., Dec. 14.—[Special.]—The interesting question: "What is a heart balm suit?" has been brought up in a suit for $100,000 damages filed by Mrs. George V. Vanderbilt of Greenville, N. Y., against Mrs. Lizzie Vanderbilt Hegeman of New York.

In her petition Mrs. Vanderbilt accused Mrs. Hegeman of having conspired to deprive her of the custody of her child, Catherine Hegeman Vanderbilt, and the support of her estranged husband, a great-grand nephew of the original Commodore Vanderbilt. George Vanderbilt is a half brother of Mrs. Hegeman.

Mrs. Hegeman yesterday appealed to Supreme Court Justice Ellis J. Staley to dismiss the suit on the ground that the real plea of Mrs. Vanderbilt is for an award based on alienation of affections. Alienation suits are prohibited, under heavy penalties, by the McNaboe law passed by the New York legislature at the last session.

Counsel for Mrs. Vanderbilt contended that she was not suing to recover for shattered affections, but for "wrong and injury done" in depriving her of maintenance, a property right. It was indicated that if Justice Staley upholds Mrs. Hegeman's contention, Mrs. Vanderbilt will argue that the McNaboe law is unconstitutiional.

TOPS MILLION DOLLAR MARK FOR NINTH TIME

Homes Continue Major Factor in Increase.

BY AL CHASE. [Real Estate Editor.]

Despite the usual seasonal slow up in construction, the November total of suburban building was 36 per cent more than in the same month last year. According to the survey of new building in the metropolitan area made monthly by the Straus Securities corporation, building permits for $1,089,369 were issued last month in 53 suburbs, compared with $801,453 in November, 1934. The total for October, 1935, was $1,695,000.

WILLIAM O. PAAPE.

The November total is above the million dollar mark for the ninth consecutive month. Suburban building climbed into that bracket last March. In July it soared to $1,916,000, the record month of 1935 and the highest since July, 1931.

Mostly Home Building.

An encouraging feature of the November total is that it is made up principally of home building. The 36 per cent gain over the same month last year is doubly encouraging because the $1,695,002 total of November, 1934, contained a $419,000 permit for a new high school in Lake Forest.

The November suburban list is topped by Lake Forest with its total of $168,962. According to William O. Paape, building commissioner, there were three outstanding jobs, a residence for $68,000, another for $56,000, and a mausoleum for $18,500. The other permits in Lake Forest were a less costly residence and thirteen repair jobs.

The survey shows eleven communities reporting approximately $50,000 or more in November. Elgin is next to Lake Forest with a total of $108,000, of which $100,000 represents new construction at the state hospital, according to A. J. Nichol, building inspector.

Activity in Highland Park.

Highland Park, third on the list, with approximately $98,000, is having the livliest home building campaign it has experienced in several years, according to S. D. Morris, building inspector. His November report includes eight residences costing a total of $61,843. He says 30 residences are under construction. One item in his last month's report is a $33,000 permit for a guest house, servants' quarters and garage for L. L. Cohen at 266 Hazel avenue.

Home building predominates in the permits of other north shore communities. E. M. Goodman, building commissioner of Evanston, reports a total of $56,750 which includes two residences for $26,000, a $5,000 fieldhouse, and house repairs for $12,000.

In Glencoe, L. M. Helke, building inspector, states that $61,704 in local permits represents practically all residences and remodeling. Kenilworth's $43,700 permits are for two residences, according to F. L. Street, village manager.

Five Homes in Wilmette.

W. A. Wolff, building commissioner of Wilmette, reports $48,975, made up of five permits for single family residences estimated at $46,500, residential repairs and private garages.

"Winneka started three fine residences costing $49,125 in November," said Norman E. Schmidt, building inspector. "An interesting feature of these homes is that they are of solid masonry construction, two having concrete first floor slabs, a contrast to the frame and veneer construction of last summer."

P. W. Hazelton of River Forest, reports four new residences at $15,000 each. Charles Lenke, building commissioner of Waukegan, reports a total of $43,502, almost entirely repairs.

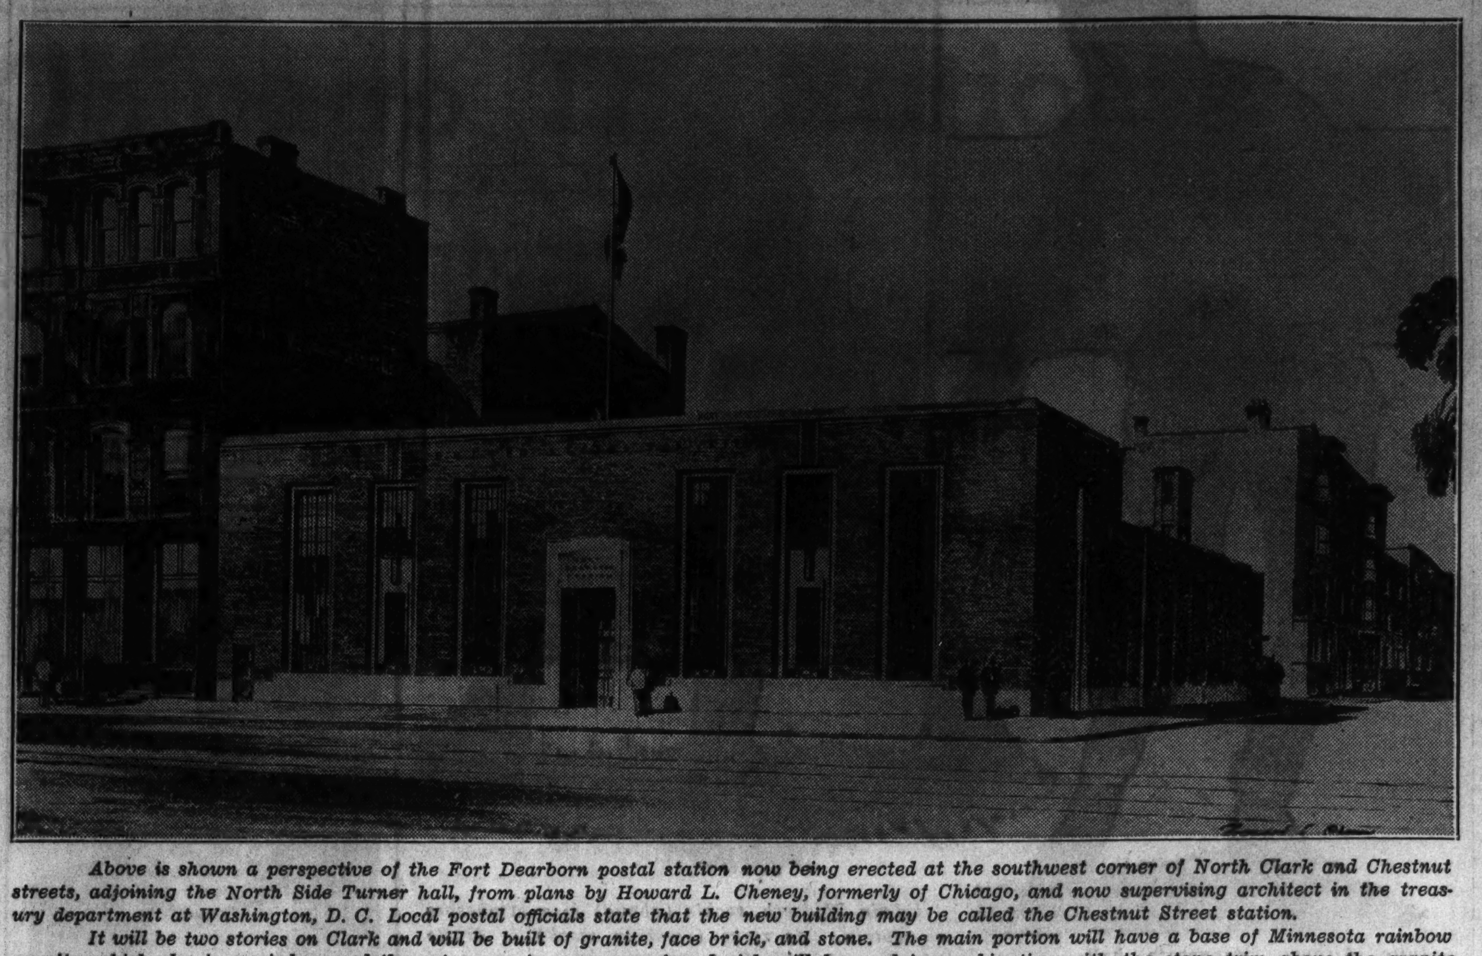
NEW NORTH SIDE POSTAL STATION



Above is shown a perspective of the Fort Dearborn postal station now being erected at the southwest corner of North Clark and Chestnut streets, adjoining the North Side Turner hall, from plans by Howard L. Cheney, formerly of Chicago, and now supervising architect in the treasury department at Washington, D. C. Local postal officials state that the new building may be called the Chestnut Street station.

It will be two stories on Clark and will be built of granite, face brick, and stone. The main portion will have a base of Minnesota rainbow granite, which also is carried around the entrance. A warm gray face brick will be used in combination with the stone trim above the granite base. The main entrance doors and ornamental metal will be of white bronze. The contractor is the Thorp-Rogoff company. The building is carried out in a contemporary style of architecture. The present Fort Dear born postal station, at 668 St. Clair street, is to be transferred to the new location when the building is completed.

CHICAGO'S NEW POLICE AND FIRE STATIONS

REAL ESTATE BOARD APPROVES NEW FORMS OF INDUSTRIAL LEASES

Two new industrial lease forms, announced by Louis B. Beardslee as an innovation over those now in use, which were drafted in 1895, were approved yesterday by the Chicago Real Estate board. Beardslee, who for the last year served as chairman of the board of governors of the industrial division of the board, was assisted in the preparation of this work by Erwin H. List and Charles A. Whetston.

"The new form, which covers leases of industrial lofts, is known as L. B. B. 1200," said Beardslee. "The form for industrial buildings is known as L. B. B. 1201. Both forms are designed to simplify many of the difficulties experienced in adapting the old forms to present day usage.

"The new forms are two pages in length and will fit any standard typewriter. They can be used by both corporations and individuals and will assure the safe attachment of riders. The forms also are printed in larger type than those now in use. They will be available for public sale within a short time."

Chicago to Build 16 Police, Fire Stations; Cost $791,000

Old Pa Dearborn, with the aid of Uncle Sam, is going to spend approximately $800,000 during the next few months in the erection of five new police and eleven new fire stations. According to Paul Gerhardt Jr., city architect, the Public Works administration of the federal government will make a gift of 45 per cent of the $791,000 total estimated cost of the sixteen buildings, or $356,000. The city will supply the remaining $435,000.

Construction will start this week on the five district police stations at a total cost of $305,000. Of this amount $137,612 will be given by the PWA. The balance will be supplied by the city from unexpended portions of bond funds accumulated from various city improvements previously completed.

Will Be Fireproof.

The buildings will be of reinforced concrete, fireproof construction, with Indiana limestone exterior for the two story section and the patrol garage faced with Kittaning brick to match the stone. Each station will contain the desk sergeant's office, a captain's office, captain's secretary's office, lieutenant's office and squadroom, cellroom, with three groups of general cells and one isolated cell.

Adjoining this cellroom will be a quizroom, where a prisoner can be questioned by the police or interviewed by his attorneys. This arrangement is a new feature in Chicago police stations and is designed to permit conversations without danger of passing of contraband or secret information. The garage unit will house a patrol and two squad cars. A revolver range will be built in the basement.

One of the five new buildings will replace the present forty year old Summerdale station at 1940 Foster avenue. Another will be erected at 5430 Gale street, next door to the present old Jefferson Park station, which is in a bungalow. A third will be built at 1830 Monterey avenue, half a block from the present "Thirteenth district" station. A fourth, at 4461 North Pulaski road, will take the place of the Albany Park station now in a store at 4207 North Kedzie avenue.

The fifth of the stations will be built at 3501 Lowe avenue and will supplant the present old Deering station at 2913 South Loomis.

Follow Standard Design.

The general design of the eleven fire stations will follow that of recently built Chicago stations, which have been standardized, according to Gerhardt. They will be of reinforced concrete, with face brick and Indiana limestone exterior. Window frames will be of aluminum.

Three of the units will be double fire stations, with two motor entrances and space for one engine company, one hook and ladder company, and battalion chief's automobile.

The double fire stations will be built at 7101 South Parnell avenue, 4666 Fulton, and 212 West Cermak road. Eight single company stations will be erected at 10458 Hoxie avenue, 4456 North Knox avenue, 2100 Eastwood avenue, 2214 Barry avenue, 1318 Rawson street, 4017 North Tripp avenue, 4005 South Dearborn, and 1642 North Kostner.

The three double fire stations will cost $193,000, of which $87,121 has been given by the PWA. The eight single stations will cost $293,700, with the federal government supplying about $132,000.

According to Gerhardt, work will be under way on all sixteen buildings within two weeks, with completion scheduled for six months later.

Real Estate Bonds

During the last week the principal movement in the real estate bond market was in the low priced issues. There was considerable activity in issues selling for from $3 to $10 per hundred. In the better class of bonds there was little change in prices. The following quotations were provided by a Chicago dealer:

Four thousand persons last Sunday are reported to have inspected the all steel house at 14112 South Edbrooke avenue, Riverdale, designed by Joseph Sylvan and erected by the Dreis & Krump Manufacturing company. It is to be open to the public for the next six months, it was stated.

REALTORS TO INSPECT NORTH SHORE BY AIR AT 200 MILES AN HOUR

Twenty-six members of the Evanston-North Shore Shore Real Estate board are going to give the real estate situation in their territory a 200 mile an hour inspection by airplane today. Newly elected President William A. Sadler of the realty organization, and 25 other realtors intend to make two air trips over the north shore in a TWA Douglas plane.

The first group of 13 realtors will fly from the Chicago municipal air port, this afternoon at 2:30. At 3:15 a second group will take off for their inspection trip of the north shore. Prof. William Bailey of Northwestern university, a specialist in aerial surveys, will accompany each party and point out population trends, developments and other realty factors in relation to community growth.

According to Lawrence Lawver, Evanston and north shore trafic representative for Transcontinental and Western Airlines, the cruising speed will be 200 miles an hour. One hundred miles of territory will be covered, he said.

SURVEY SHOWS REALTY ACTIVE ON NORTH SHORE

Nine Months' Sales Total $7,298,314.

More than seven and a quarter million dollars' worth of real estate was sold on the north shore and in parts of Kane and McHenry counties during the first nine months of 1935 according to a survey of sales just completed by the Evanston-North Shore Real Estate board. This is a reassuring answer to the often repeated query "Is suburban real estate coming back?", William A. Sadler, new president of the realty organization, pointed out yesterday.

H. L. McDANIEL. [C. L. Ray Photo.]

"Coupled with the report just made by the renting committee of the Evanston-North Shore Real Estate board, under W. G. Ruggles, the survey of sales indicates the public's regard of real estate on the north shore," said Sadler. "The rent report showed less than 1 per cent vacancy in north shore homes. Apartment vacancies in Evanston are reduced to 3.86 per cent, in buildings of six apartments or more."

Exceeds Brokers' Estimate.

A significant feature of the sales survey, according to Sadler, is the fact that the total of 427 sales amounting to $7,298,314 is almost twice the amount leading brokers estimated when the survey was first suggested.

The survey shows 269 sales of improved real estate with a total value of $6,042,015. Vacant property sales amounted to 109 with a dollar value of $514,649. Unclassified transactions totaled 34 with a value of $741,650.

Evanston tops the list of north shore communities in both number of sales and dollar value. It had 110 transactions during nine months with a value of $2,514,210. Of this amount 99 deals, totaling $2,465,210 were in improved properties; 11 sales, amounting to $49,000 were of vacant property.

Winnetka stands second on the list with 89 transactions, totaling $1,479,900. This includes 47 sales of improved properties costing $1,048,700; 32 sales of vacant, totaling $167,300 and 10 unclassified deals involving $263,900. Thus Winnetka's transactions in vacant were three times as many as Evanston's both in number and value.

Wilmette is third on the north shore list with total sales of 75, amounting to $958,490. These are divided into 61 transactions in improved realty, totaling $895,790, and 14 sales of vacant, costing $62,700.

Barrington Market Active.

Fourth on the list is Glencoe with 37 transactions totaling $729,100. Highland Park is sixth in value with $327,800, although in number of sales it tops Glencoe, having 43. Kenilworth ranks sixth in number of sales, with 16, but is fifth in value, with $460,842, thus topping Highland Park.

Four sales of improved property involving $251,000 were reported for nine months in Barrington. Brokers reported 37 deals, totaling $371,765, in locations not listed.

The compilation of the sales information was made by Paul P. Pullen, division of land economics of the Chicago Title and Trust company. Brokers made their reports of sales to him.

The survey group, consisting of members of the brokerage and publicity committees, together with Past President H. L. McDaniel of the Evanston-North Shore Real Estate board, and a group of north shore brokers, was: Stewart B. Matthews, W. A. Sadler, Milton E. Reid, Arthur Gedge, E. Sawyer Smith, Ann Moreland, Howard Brown, Alder Tighe, O. H. Armstrong, W. G. Ruggles, and E. A. Kayser.

Contracts Awarded

Contracts awarded in Chicago the week of Dec. 6 to 12, according to the F. W. Dodge corporation, totaled 30, with a combined cost of $1,931,245. For the corresponding week of last year there were 22 contracts totaling $290,827.

Uproar.

A small voice was heard from Dessye, Ethiopia. It was that of Emperor Haile Selassie, Lion of Judah, crying: "I do not agree." Selassie's voice found an echo in Europe. People of European nations joined the emperor in denouncing a plan worked out by the British and French governments for settlement of the Italian-Ethiopian war. The uproar spread to the league of nations.

The protests grew louder yesterday after an official statement issued in London disclosed that Sir Samuel Hoare, foreign secretary, had put secret pressure on Ethiopia to accept the peace plan. [See main news section.]

The Franco-British plan for peace would give Italy possession or control of some two-thirds of Ethiopia. [See map on next page for territorial concessions in Ethiopia granted to Italy in the plan.] After Mussolini and Selassie received the details of the plan the French and British turned it over to the league of nations council. The council will not consider it until next week, but it was made public Friday.

The events during the week which led to the uproar were these:

Last Sunday Sir Samuel and Premier Pierre Laval of France agreed on the peace plan in Paris. Maurice Peterson, British expert on Ethiopia, left Paris for London with a copy of the plan.

The next day a minor revolt of the British cabinet against the plan was reported. After the cabinet had amended the plan slightly, Premier Stanley Baldwin got the consent of the British house of commons Tuesday for his government to go ahead with peace negotiations.

The government refused to tell the house what was in the plan. Anthony Eden, British minister for league affairs, told the house: "If it is contrary to the covenant of the league, the league should say so." Laval accepted the British amendments on condition that the application of an oil embargo to Italy should be postponed. The plan was forwarded to Mussolini and Selassie without being made public.

Though the plan was not divulged, rumors of its contents leaked out. The beginnings of a revolt among the smaller nations against its acceptance by the league were seen Wednesday.

The plan was shoved onto the league council Thursday by the French and British. Eden, before the league sanctions committee of eighteen, said again that the plan "must be acceptable to the league," and that there would be "no complaint if the league does not accept it." This was seen as a move by the British to resign their leadership of league actions against Italy. The subject of an oil embargo against Italy was laid aside until the meeting of the league council next Wednesday.

Selassie did not formally reject the plan. Instead he called for a meeting of the league assembly to consider the proposal. This was seen as a move to have the league, rather than Ethiopia, reject it.

Smaller nations were reported to have accused Great Britain of trying to wreck the league so the old system of a European balance of power can be reëstablished. Indications were that the small nations would fight the plan in the league.

Members of the French parliament attacked Premier Laval for his part in the plan. In England the demand was growing for the resignation of Sir Samuel. [See main news section for latest developments.]

British Empire.

Nationalist riots against British control of Egypt bore fruit Thursday. King Fuad signed a royal decree restoring the constitution of 1923. The constitution was suspended Dec. 1, 1934. Since that time Premier Tewfik Nessim Pasha, who is pro-British, has ruled without the support of the Wafd [Egyptian Nationalist] party, which claims a membership of 90 per cent of all Egyptians. The king's decree restores control of internal Egyptian affairs to Egyptian voters. Britain will continue to handle Egypt's foreign affairs and protect it from invasion.

Rioting which had preceded the decree turned into celebrating Thursday. The king's action was taken after Sir Miles Lampson, British high commissioner, had told the premier that the British had withdrawn objection to restoration of the constitution.

Friday a united front of all parties presented further demands to Sir Miles. Included were demands that Britain stop policing the Suez canal, agree to withdraw all troops in Egypt by the end of a 20 year period, permit an Egyptian army, and permit Egypt to become a member of the league of nations. [See main news section.]

In Jaffa, Palestine, Tuesday, Arab leaders adopted a resolution declaring that an organized Arab offensive must be directed against Great Britain.

African Conflict.

The Italian-Ethiopian war was at a virtual standstill during the last week. Reports told of Ethiopian attacks on Italian outposts, but there were no big battles nor advances. In Dessye Emperor Haile Selassie said Italy was telling "audacious lies" when the Italians said hospitals in Dessye had not been bombed by Italian flyers.

Asiatics.

Japanese control in North China was broadened during the week. Last Sunday the Chinese provinces of Chahar and Hopei combined to set up an independent government which Japanese army leaders had fostered. It was declared that the Chinese Nationalist government at Nanking would still control foreign and military affairs, finances, and the courts in the separated territory. Yesterday Japanese troops occupied Kalgan, the capital of Chahar. Japanese military leaders decided to move a large army into North China.

Chinese students mobilized to protest the "independence" movement in North China. They called upon the Nanking government to adopt "a firm policy regarding Japanese activities in North China."

Naval Conference.

The naval disarmament conference opened in London last Monday. Delegates from the United States, Great Britain, France, Italy, Japan, and the British dominions were present. Norman H. Davis, chief American representative, immediately proposed a 20 per cent reduction for all navies. The Japanese turned this down. They want to get rid of the ratio system which gives the United States and Britain each five tons of warships to three for Japan. Japan demanded equal navies. On Thursday this demand was refused by the other nations. On Friday the British startled the Americans, who had scattered for the week-end to rest, by engaging the Japanese in a private conversation. The Japanese said they planned to talk with the Americans on Monday or Tuesday.

Jews.

Riots against Jews in central Germany were climaxed Friday by the arrest of several Jewish leaders at Madgeburg. A large Jewish store was also raided and closed.

Heinrich Sahm, lord mayor of Berlin, has been under fire for several weeks because he bought goods in a Jewish store. Last Monday he was forced to resign.

Orthodox Jews in Germany were forced to go meatless. No kosher meat may be imported and the orthodox ritual of slaughtering has been abolished.

Foreign nations are expected to enter heavy damage claims against the German government on behalf of their Jewish citizens in Germany. Jews are being treated alike in Germany and those who are citizens of foreign countries are protesting to their governments. Anti-Jewish activity in Germany is ruining them.

While the Nazis ordered large numbers of Polish Jews to get out of Germany, rioting against Jews in Poland continued. The Polish cabinet tried to find some way to stop anti-Jewish disorders.

Anti-Jewish rioting in Bucharest broke up the elections of the Rumanian bar association. Fifty persons were injured. The name of Mme. Magda Lupescu, red haired Jewish mistress of King Carol, was booed.

Junkyard.

London shipping circles heard rumors last week that the liner Majestic is headed for the junkyard. If so, it will experience the fate of the Mauretania and the Olympic. The Majestic, formerly the Bismarck, was built by Germany in 1921, but given to Great Britain in postwar adjustments. It made its maiden voyage to New York in May, 1922. For years the Majestic was the largest ship afloat. Three times it was damaged by mountainous waves. Nine hundred and fifteen feet long, and with a tonnage of 56,621, the Majestic today is second in size only to the French liner Normandie, which is 68,000 tons and 1,020 feet long. •• In New York on Sunday it was announced that the vibration will be taken out of the Normandie before it resumes crossings in March.

PALS.

Homer Lee, 14 years old, of Sacramento, Cal., loved his black and white bulldog. The pet died of old age Tuesday. Homer wrote a note: "My best pal will never come back. Neither will I. The world can go on without us." Then he shot and killed himself beside his dog.

Washington

No. 1 Defendant.

Lawyers are calling the New Deal the world's greatest defendant. In every district court, in appeals courts, and in the United States Supreme court are pending thousands of cases attacking the legality of New Deal laws. In lower courts alone 1,955 cases against the AAA processing taxes are awaiting disposition.

The situation admittedly has overwhelmed the government's legal departments. They haven't enough lawyers. Last week Solicitor General Stanley Reed had to appear personally before the Supreme court to defend the Bankhead cotton control act. Attorney General Homer Cummings had to appear personally in District of Columbia Supreme court to defend the utility act.

Mr. Cummings asked that duplicate suits—filed separately by different complainants on the same issues—be thrown out. To defend each, he said, would cost the government millions of dollars.

Both Mr. Cummings and Mr. Reed have small stafs who must oppose the nation's ablest lawyers, among them John W. Davis, Newton D. Baker, and James A. Reed, anti-New Deal Democrats.

Solicitor General Reed experienced a trying time defending the cotton act. The justices bombarded him with questions. Once Justice James C. McReynolds remarked curtly: "I shouldn't listen to that kind of argument with much patience." Again Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes cut in: "The court does not care to hear you further on that point."

A few minutes later Mr. Reed faltered and sank into a chair. Court adjourned. Mr. Reed was confined to bed next day, and the government waived further oral defense. The court will rule on the case on legal papers already filed.

During the week the Supreme court unanimously whacked another New Deal law—the Home Owners' Loan Corporation act. The court said that it invaded state rights by requiring state building and loan associations to change to federal associations. Observers believe that the court eventually will wreck or seriously damage the AAA. [See AAA.]

President.

President Roosevelt held the political spotlight last week. He made a quick visit to Chicago, spoke to a meeting of farmers in the stockyards, then hurried to Notre Dame university at South Bend, Ind., where he received an honorary degree.

His Chicago visit was regarded as a bid for agricultural support. His South Bend visit was seen by some observers as a move to appease those groups who were disappointed over his recent refusal to do something about religious persecution in Mexico.

In Chicago the President defended his farm program. He said it had raised agricultural prices, aiding the farmer. This improvement was possible, he added, because of the coöperation of the farmer. He also defended his recent trade agreement with Canada. Occasionally he whacked his critics as trouble makers.

The President's address was assailed in Evanston, Ill., Monday night by Harrison E. Spangler, Republican leader. He said the New Deal is taking too much credit in assuming it alone had boosted farm prices. As to the coöperation of the farmer, added Spangler, it was obtained with a club.

Following his Chicago talk, the President hurried to South Bend, accompanied by his staf, among them his aid, Lieut. Col. Edwin Watson. Cardinal Mundelein, the Rev. John F. O'Hara, and other high church dignitaries as well as other leaders welcomed the President. He spoke briefly on religious tolerance in America.

Back in Washington the President on Wednesday continued his political run by conferring with Mayor Edward J. Kelly. On Thursday he reached out for support of the followers of the late Huey Long by praising Long as an educator.

Meanwhile the President kept his eye on the African war situation. On Friday he revealed he would ask for new neutrality legislation at the next session of congress. [See Foreign.] The present neutrality act expires in February. The President also revealed his hope of building the naval reserve to a strength of 150,000 men. The present strength is 30,000.

AAA.

Agricultural Adjustment administration leaders admitted last week they would not be surprised if the Supreme court were to rule against them on the AAA and the cotton control act. "We're prepared," commented Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace on Wednesday. He said that a committee is now working on a substitute farm aid plan to be submitted to congress if the court wrecks the AAA. [See No. 1 Defendant.]

Chester A. Davis, chief of the AAA, speaking before the American Farm Bureau federation in Chicago on Tuesday, uttered a similar thought. If the Supreme court opinion is unfavorable to the New Deal the government, he said, can have enacted new legislation to help the farmer. The federation on Wednesday voted to defend and protect the AAA.

The Potato Protest Planters [PPP] on Friday offered a prize for the largest potato grown in a PPP patch. The society is pledged against the AAA, particularly against the potato control act. •• At Lansing, Mich., Friday James F. Thomson, state commissioner of agriculture, forecast a strike of growers and buyers if the government tries to enforce Michigan's potato crop quota.

Works.

Gov. Henry Horner announced Wednesday that in spite of the federal works program to relieve unemployment, Illinois would have to support 130,000 families after Jan. 1. The state will have only $2,000,000 to do this, $3,000,000 short of needs. He admitted he was mistaken in assuming the Works Progress administration would take all employables off relief roll. On Thursday, R. J. Dunham, WPA head in Illinois, suggested that the state use some of its general fund of $17,000,000 to make up the $3,000,000 monthly deficiency.

NRA.

The opening session of the industrial conference in Washington ended in a near riot and shouts of "liar" Monday. Some 3,000 business men, industrialists, and labor leaders were present. George L. Berry, the President's industrial coördinator, presided. A. B. Haake of Chicago, opposing action by the conference, asked permission for J. W. O'Leary of the Machine Founders' association to talk. Boos and applause greeted Haake's demand. Mr. Berry rejected his request. Haake persisted. Mr. Berry accused him of trying to break up the meeting. "That's a lie," shouted Haake. "You're another liar," retorted Mr. Berry. Police stopped the fuss.

Defaulters

Great Britain on Wednesday and Lithuania on Friday notified Washington they would default on the war debts due today. France, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Italy, Hungary, and Rumania sent default notices yesterday. Notices from Belgium, Esthonia, and Latvia are expected today. Only Finland is expected to pay. Altogether, 965 million dollars are due or past due. [See main news section.]

The City

Gill's Week.

Since the Cook county board ousted Robert M. Sweitzer as county treasurer last June and appointed Joseph L. Gill to replace him, Gill has had his hands full. He was chief clerk of the Municipal court. He wanted to resign, but Sweitzer sued to regain his five months' treasurership. Gill intended to remain as treasurer only until the election next November, when he would run again for court clerk. But if Sweitzer got his job back Gill then would have nothing. In October Sweitzer lost his suit to regain office. He is appealing.

Whatever his status, Gill decided last week to unload. He resigned as court clerk, pleading that treasury problems were enough for any man. Municipal judges elected Richard Frohlich, Gill's chief assistant for five years, to finish his six year term.

The next thing Gill did was to report that his office's undistributed tax funds had been reduced to $5,652,596. This was the lowest in 20 years.

Gill's week had one sour note. Harry Daugirda, 32 years old, confessed to him that he had taken $5,900 from the county clerk's funds to bet on horse races. Daugirda had tapped the tax redemption fund, the same in which Sweitzer was short.

Pin Game.

Sportland, Inc., sued to prevent police interference with its 29 pin games. Circuit Judge Stanley Klarkowski heard the case all last week. Policeman James Hackett, who played 4,000 pin games in five years' investigation of gambling devices, testified there was no skill to "pushing the marbles" and therefore it was gambling. The attorney for Sportland, Edward C. Higgins, produced witnesses to testify skill was possible. Assistant Corporation Counsel Joseph Grossman said skill was no point, because the operators offered prizes for high scores which are bets, and a bet is illegal even in chess. Higgins said city definitions of the law were too stringent and that the police were illegally authorized to define gambling. Judge Klarkowski ruled pin games were gambling and denied the injunction.

Milk.

The Associated Milk Dealers last Monday raised the price of milk from 10 to 11 cents a quart. The next day the organization published a four year chart. It showed a price line fluctuating between 12 and 8 cents from 1932 to 1935. It also showed a consumption line zigzagging down every time the price went up, and roughly in the same proportion. For this reason and the necessity of meeting cut rate competition it appeared that the dealers should keep the price down. But the dealers said that the increased price to farmers and the wage raise of their union employés necessitated an increase. This time they felt that an increase would not help independent dairies' sales. There is a shortage of milk. This shortage is the first since 1929. Farmers are receiving their highest price since 1931. This month farmers received $2.06 a hundred on their allotted bases and had no surplus.

This new price scale was a result of the 18 day strike in October. The strike ostensibly was against the Pure Milk association's action reducing the top price to its farmer members from $2.20 to $1.75. Surpluses dragged the price much lower. Actually the strike was an attempt by a new marketing agency, the Union Producers, to overthrow Don N. Geyer, nine year leader of the PMA. His farmers would be renewing contracts the last half of November. Union Producers' spokesmen asserted they would win 65 per cent of the PMA farmers.

Last week the PMA counted its losses at 1,782 and announced a renewed membership of 14,761. Of the members lost, said the PMA, 1,294 withdrew and 488 were put out. Geyer could claim a victory.

City Notes.

The Rosehill Cemetery company can continue using a 25 acre annex under the permanent injunction issued by Superior Judge Charles A. Williams. The injunction is against enforcement of a 1931 city ordinance which would force the cemetery to abandon the expansion. Judge Williams said it was specific discrimination. The city will appeal. Neighboring residents object to the cemetery's growth. Litigation against it began many years ago.

The Illinois Automobile club proposed to convert Jackson boulevard and Monroe street into one way thoroughfares west of Clinton street. The park district's similar proposal is in a council trafic committee pigeonhole.

Trafic Engineer Otto K. Jelinek of the park district announced that 5,068 automobile accidents and 50 fatalities occurred on park boulevards and drives during the last 11 months.

School Board President James B. McCahey announced sale of $2,000,000 in 1935 tax anticipation warants to meet teachers' pay rolls for December. The other $2,000,000 necessary will be borrowed from other school funds. Pay checks were issued Friday.

The first public hearing on the plan to simplify Chicago's street name system revealed one thing: Residents are willing to have duplications eliminated or the conflicting names of one thoroughfare [as many as six] simplified to one if the name of the section on which they live or do business is not changed.

Sergt. Thomas O'Donnell wanted to prove how easy it was to steal an automobile which parking lots and garages were putting in streets and alleys. He found one in the alley behind the Lake-Wells lot, discovered the keys in the car, and ordered his men to drive it to the central station. That's where the owner, Abe H. Pollock, found it parked after he reported his car stolen.

Assessor John Clark last week began revaluation of all Cook county real estate for the four year period beginning with 1935. He first ordered a 30 per cent reduction below the appraised building values of 1931 because reproduction costs are that much lower.

Art

The Chicago Art institute had to thank the loud howls of censure for the 107,000 attendance it announced at the close of the annual exhibit of contemporary American paintings. The gallery has purchased the "crude," "trashy" prize winner, "Thanksgiving," and will keep it.

Henry Clay Frick began as a store clerk. Small investments in coal field and coke ovens were the seeds of a fortune which was many millions at the financier's death 16 years ago. When Frick died he bequeathed his $5,000,000 mansion in New York as a public museum for his art collection. But it was not until after the death of his widow in 1931 that his wishes could be executed. Last week the Frick mansion was opened as a museum and common man could gaze on a collection valued in "tens of millions" by reverent critics. Possibly the most notable of the predominant sixteenth and seventeenth century masterpieces is Rembrandt's self portrait, 1658. Others represented are Titian, Duccio, Berma, Bellini, Bronzino, Guardi, Franz Hals, Velazquez, Gainsborough, Whistler, Van Dyck, Gilbert Stuart, Goya, El Greco, Romney, and Reynolds. Frick left $15,000,000 to maintain and increase his preëminent collection.

Six paintings of the Mexican artist, C. Ruano Llopis, will be exhibited at the Texas Centennial exposition opening in Dallas June 6. The first, a bull fighter in the arena, was received by exposition officials last week.

Crime

Friday the 13th was a major unlucky day for Bruno Richard Hauptmann, convicted kidnap-slayer of the Lindbergh baby. On that day Justice Thomas Trenchard of the New Jersey Supreme court, sentenced him to death in the electric chair the week of Jan. 13. Hauptmann was not present, remaining in his death cell in the state prison at Trenton. It was his second setback. On Monday the United States Supreme court denied him a review. The Supreme court's order was given to Justice Trenchard, who thereupon set the execution week. Meanwhile, Ellis Parker, noted rural detective of Mount Holly, N. J., continued his secret inquiry in the Hauptmann case. He said recently that some one else beside Hauptmann was involved in the crime. On Thursday he hinted that Isador Fisch, now dead, had circulated Lindbergh ransom money in Europe. Hauptmann had blamed Fisch for the crime.

A jury in Washington, D. C., on Thursday convicted Representative John H. Hoeppel of California and his son, Charles, of conspiracy to sell a West Point appointment for $1,000. They face a maximum penalty of two years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

The attempt of George W. Norris, an Oklahoma grocer, to oppose Senator George W. Norris of Nebraska in the 1930 primary election may cost "Grocer" Norris five years in prison. He was convicted of perjury by a jury at Lincoln, Neb., Thursday. Officials in 1930 questioned the grocer's candidacy. They charged he was running to confuse voters over the sameness of names. A senate committee asked him if he had received money or assurance of financial aid for running against the senator. He said no. The committee charged him with perjury.

Charles T. Davis, alias Harry Ross, a Tennessee farmer, went on trial in Denver last week on a charge of murdering Erwin C. Thompson, an Iowa engineer. The state tried to show his real name was Ross. Davis denied this. Finally the state called Stella Ross Williams as a witness. She looked at the defendant. "That's the man," she said, pointing. She testified she was once his wife; that he had forced her to marry him.

Canadian justice: Allan Cowan, 17 years old, was in love with Mrs. Mary Cowan, wife of his brother, Albert, 27. Last July 21 Allan shot and killed his brother. The boy was tried Wednesday at Pembroke, Ont., and said he did it because his sister-in-law wanted him to. The jury sentenced him to death. Mrs. Cowan was tried on Thursday. The jury sentenced her to death. They will be hanged Feb. 27.

Miss Edith Maxwell, 21 years old, a mountain school teacher, must serve 25 years in prison for killing her father, Trigg Maxwell. She was denied a new trial Thursday by the court at Wise, Va. She was convicted by a jury recently. The trial showed she struck her father with a shoe—supposedly in self-defense—when he tried to whip her for staying out late.

Victor Koussow, 52 years old, a stoop shouldered wild eyed employé in the dental school of Columbia university, New York, became insane on Thursday. He shot and killed Prof. Arthur Taylor Rowe, associate dean, and Prof. Paul B. Wiberg, wounded Dr. William H. Crawford, and then killed himself. Beforehand, he had written a note telling of his plan to kill Dr. Rowe and others. He hated the professor because the latter had warned him about his work several times.

Mrs. Frances Mabel Willys, 38 years old and plump, of Los Angeles, called police to her apartment Monday. They found Dr. Walter Hammond, 50, dead. She had crushed his head with a hammer. Mrs. Willys said she was his common law wife. She determined to kill him, she said, after she found out he wanted younger girls. "I saw a hammer and then remembered the Clara Phillips case," she said. "Then I decided to kill him with the hammer. That makes me the 'Tiger woman No. 2.'" [Clara Phillips was known as "the 'Tiger woman'" for slaying her love rival with a hammer some years ago.]

Politics

The lead on the Republican front was taken by Senator William E. Borah of Idaho and Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas.

Landon on Tuesday entertained W. R. Hearst, publisher, at a luncheon in Topeka. Later Mr. Hearst described Landon as "a doer and not a promiser," and said that Roosevelt could be beaten by a man like Landon. In Chicago Tuesday Landon for President offices were opened.

Senator Borah, always a foe of the league of nations, made Europe as well as America listen Wednesday. He denounced the proposed cutting up of Ethiopia. He cautioned the administration to maintain strict neutrality. [See Foreign.] A few days earlier he had lashed the New Deal, warning of political dictatorship. On Wednesday Borah talked politics with former Vice President Charles Curtis. Next day he conferred with Senator Arthur Vandenberg of Michigan, like himself, a possible candidate. Curtis' visit was considered important since it is known he is for Landon. It is not thought improbable that Borah may support Landon.

Former Senator James A. Reed, of Missouri, Democratic leader, deserted the Roosevelt camp yesterday. He said he was prepared to vote for a good Republican.

The New Deal has lost in popularity, according to returns in the Literary Digest's nation-wide straw vote. It was announced Friday that 642,711 ballots have been cast, showing 57.24 per cent against the New Deal. The report covered 26 states.

In Washington Friday, Dr. F. E. Townsend, co-sponsor of the plan to pay $200 a month to everybody over 60 years of age, announced his decision to form a third party and enter candidates for the presidency and congress. He said he would not run for President.

Former Senator Otis Glenn of Illinois, in Chicago Tuesday, charged the New Deal with violating or attempting to violate the constitution. On Thursday John H. Kirby, Houston, Tex., announced that the Southern Committee to Uphold the Constitution has nearly 300,000 members. He launched the organization.

Albert B. [Happy] Chandler was sworn in Tuesday at Frankfort as governor of Kentucky. The retiring governor, Ruby Laffoon, wished him success. In taking the oath, Chandler had to swear he had never fought a duel.

Illinois Democrats are sure of a fight in the race for governor. Gov. Henry Horner, talking to reporters in Springfield Tuesday, repeated he will fight to be renominated. The regular democracy is against him, reports say.

Religion

Enas C. Stanbrough, 101 years old, a Quaker of Kansas City, Mo., never looked at a Bible until he was 70 years old. In the last 31 years he has read the Bible for four hours each day. Five times he has read the whole book. In addition he has read the New Testament 47 times. Last Thursday he was surprised when he was awarded the title of national Bible reading champion. "I wasn't working for any prizes," he said.

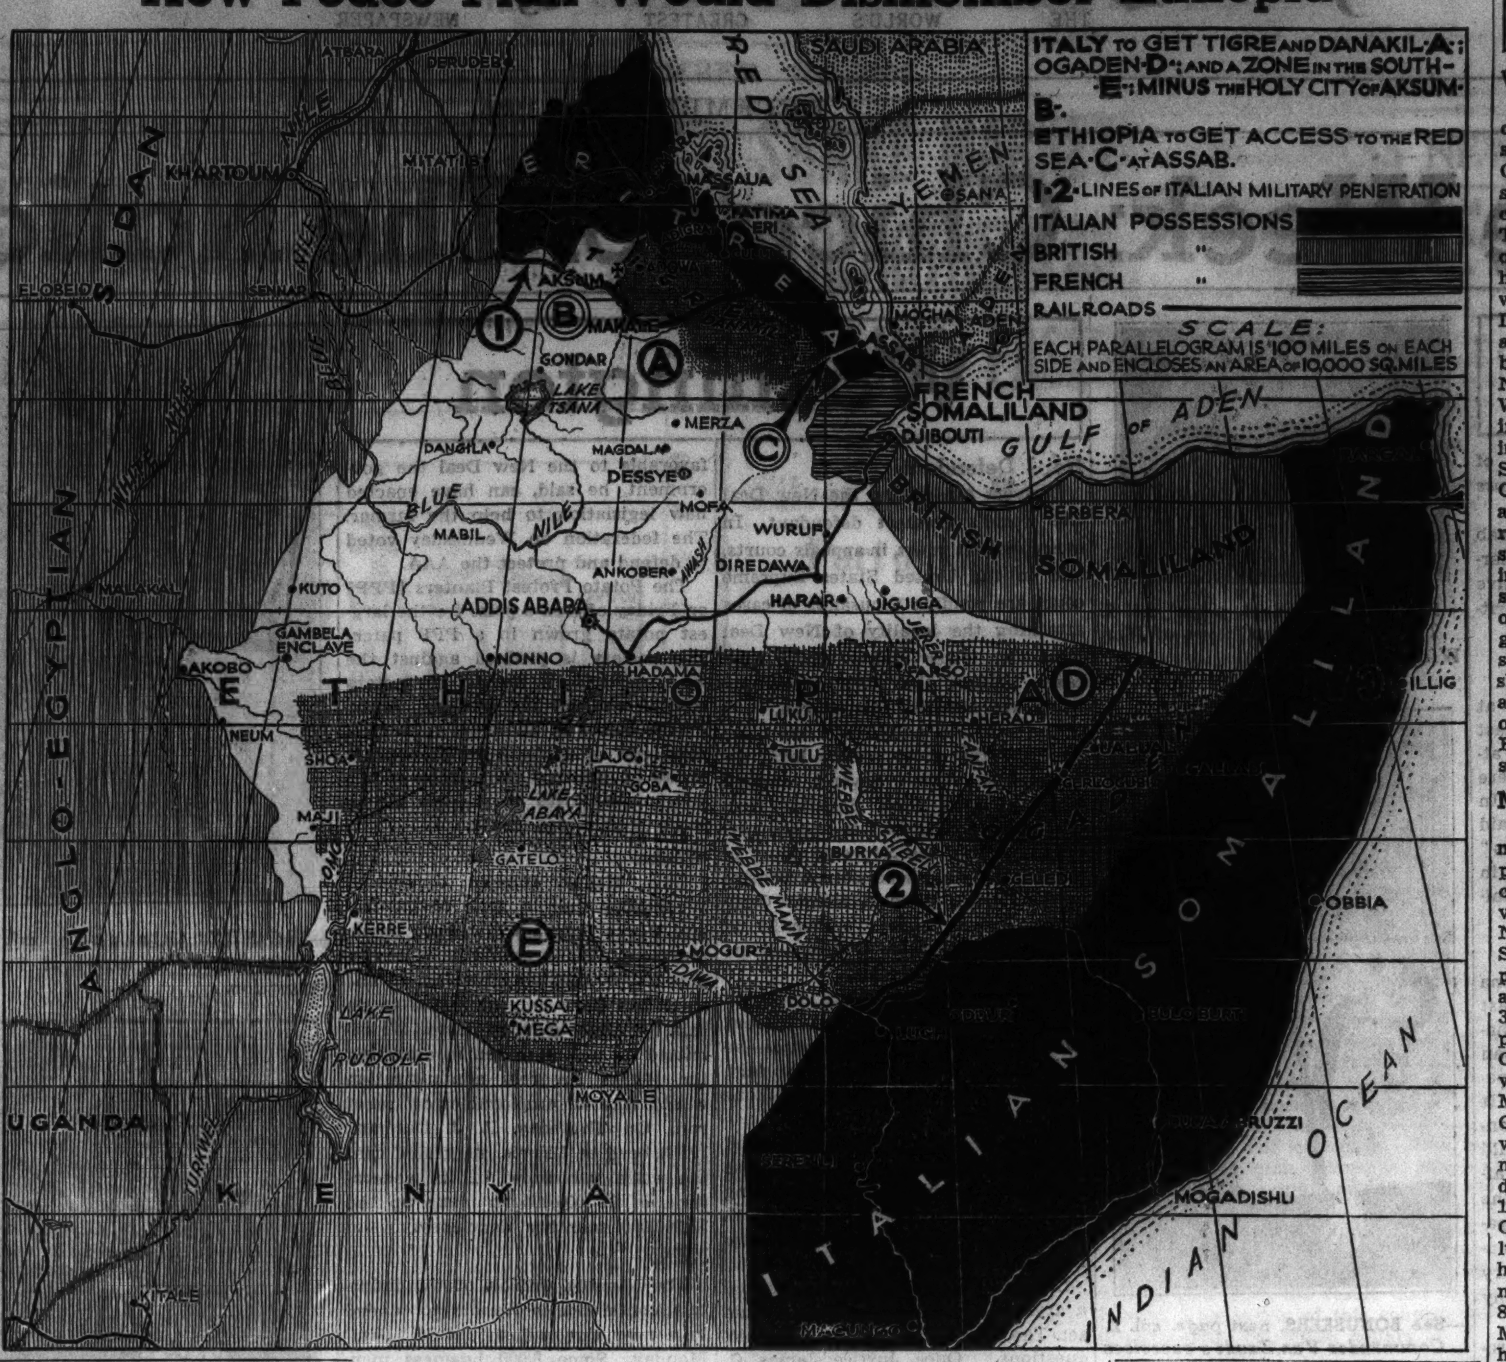
The three major branches of the Methodist church are one step nearer a united church, it was announced Thursday. A 4,000 word plan of union was made public after it had been accepted by commissioners of the Methodist Episcopal church, the Methodist Episcopal church, south, and the Methodist Protestant church. The original Methodist Episcopal church broke up in 1845 over the question of slavery.

Bonuseers

Two of the leading fighters for quick payment of the soldiers' bonus are James E. Van Zandt, commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and Ray Murphy, commander of the American Legion. Last week Van Zandt, who safely piloted 13 troop ships across the Atlantic during the war, spoke at Seattle. He kept an official delegation waiting while he finished his customary 10 minutes of setting up exercises, then predicted quick payment of the bonus. Commander Murphy visited Kansas City, Kas. The mayor there gave him the key to the city, and Murphy took the key with him. The mayor now wants it back. "I'll keep the key," says Murphy. "I'll teach that mayor not to be so sincere in his presentations."

How Peace Plan Would Dismember Ethiopia



The Franco-British peace plan allots huge territorial concessions in Ethiopia to Italy. Italy would be given outright possession of eastern Tigre, Danakil, and Aussa (A). She would also be given the southern portion of Ethiopia marked (D). The southern zone in Ethiopia marked (E) would become a zone of expansion and colonization reserved for Italy. The area would remain under the administration of the Ethiopian government, with the assistance of an Italian adviser, but it would be developed by a company, presumably Italian, with exclusive rights in the area. It would, in effect, become part of the Italian possessions though technically a part of Ethiopia. Ethiopia would be given a corridor to the sea and the port of Assab (C). Note: Italy retains control on both sides of the corridor. Kenya is a British colony.

Science

Frankenstein.

The National Association of Insecticide and Disinfectant Manufacturers met last week in New York and learned from a member, Jacob L. Brenn of Huntington, Ind., of an amazing new insect, "three inches long; almost as big as a sparrow." Brenn wouldn't reveal more, but reputedly the bug is the creation of Dr. Alfred Weed, insect scientist. Ten generations of interbreeding the American cockroach and the praying mantis—both members of the order Orthoptera [grasshoppers and crickets are others], produced it. The praying mantis [prophet] resembles a common grasshopper but is two or three times its size. Its upraised forelimbs distinguish it. They are held like hands clasped in prayer but the scissorlike pincers are for another purpose: To grasp and shred other insects. The mantis [20 species are found in the United States] eats great quantities of bedbugs, roaches, flies, moths and ants. A South American variety devours frogs, lizards and birds. Ancient Greeks attributed divine power to the mantis and Turks and Arabs believed it constantly prayed facing Mecca, like a good Mohammedan. Dr. Weed purportedly was afraid to free his "Frankenstein" because it might prove more dangerous than its prey.

Astronomy's Eye.

Corning, N. Y., Glass works physicists sighed with relief last week. Their part in the making of the world's largest telescope mirror was over. After a year and five days of gradual cooling from 2,800 degrees, Fahrenheit, the 200-inch, 20 ton mirror was taken from the oven. Astronomers from Mount Wilson observatory at Pasadena, Cal., examined the unexpected pits in the 26-inch depth of the glass and decided they could be ground out. Shipping in a 20 foot double wall steel box will be the next step. Cork under compression will protect the glass. It will hang on edge in a floorless gondola freight car. At Pasadena, five years of grinding and polishing to a millionth inch perfection will precede the mounting of the telescope at a new observatory on Palomar mountain. Then astronomers expect to see what a trebled universe was doing a billion or so light years ago. Until then, however, they can't be sure the Rockefeller Foundation's $6,000,000 grant to the California Institute of Technology was well spent.

BURIAL ALIVE.

Gloria Graves had to convince a Los Angeles court that being buried alive isn't so harmful. In court she produced her specially constructed casket and many little gadgets that enable her to remain underground for weeks. She was buried alive in Los Angeles for seven days before police interfered. They charged her with violating the laws against endurance contests. She has been buried alive five days in Hawaii, 24 days in Manila, and 92 days in Ocean Park, Cal.

Gerardo Machado resigned as the president of Cuba on Aug. 13, 1933. Though there have been no national elections since then, President Carlos Mendieta was the sixth man to hold the office since Machado left office. Mendieta opened the way for the seventh when he resigned last Wednesday. José Barnet, 71 years old, the secretary of state, became the acting president. The next day the cabinet and the council of state elected Barnet to the office which he will hold until national elections are held Jan. 10 and a constitutional president is inaugurated next May 20. Parties headed by former Presidents Carlos Manuel de Cespedes and Mario G. Menocal had refused to take part in the elections as long as Mendieta remained in office. They said the elections would be partial to Mendieta's party. Barnet was accepted as president by both objectors to Mendieta.

The Irish Free State will join the new Philippine commonwealth in government by a single chambered legislature. Under a measure passed by the Dail Eireann [lower house] of the Irish parliament last Thursday the upper chamber of parliament is to be abolished in 60 days. The senate refused to pass the bill last year. Under the Free State constitution, however, the upper chamber can only hold up a measure for 18 months. As that length of time has now passed, the senate can do nothing to stop itself from being dissolved.

In an effort to stop radical uprisings like those that took place three weeks ago, the Brazilian chamber of deputies approved reforms in the national security law Tuesday. The dissolution of the National Liberating alliance, a radical organization, was ordered. Quintino de Barros, who might have been president of Brazil if the recent revolts had succeeded, was in jail at Natal awaiting trial.

In a medieval setting, the house of lords in London on Thursday acquitted their peer, Edward Southwell Russell, Lord de Clifford, of a charge of manslaughter. Lord de Clifford some time ago ran down and killed Douglas G. Hopkins, a commoner, with his automobile. Taking advantage of privilege dating from 700 years ago, the nobleman insisted on a trial by his peers, or equals, instead of in the ordinary courts. The house trial was colorful, with dazzling pageantry. The lords wore medieval costumes. As part of the ritual, the defendant was asked how he wished to be tried. He replied: "By God and my peers." The trial proceeded. The evidence was introduced fully. Then followed the acquittal.

Because he feels that his sudden death would throw the country into chaos, Thomas Masaryk, 86 years old, resigned as president of Czechoslovakia yesterday. He said that he felt the country should be allowed time to use judgment in the selection of his successor. Masaryk, chief founder of the new Czechoslovakia, has been able to keep the many minority groups in the country under control.

Liggett

By nature Walter Liggett was a crusader. During his long newspaper career he had always searched beneath surfaces for evil. He found it. He exposed it. Many cities, men, and institutions felt his sting.

In 1933, in his native Minnesota, Liggett started a weekly paper, the Midwest American. This followed the tone of a little magazine, Plain Talk, he had helped publish in the east a few years back. Through it he hit at things he believed to be corrupt. He assailed Gov. Floyd Olson, whom he had once supported, and demanded his impeachment. Particularly did he hammer the Minneapolis underworld.

Threats against him were made frequently. Liggett scorned them. Last November he was acquitted in St. Paul of a serious morals charge. He asserted the charge was trumped up to remove him.

"Exposing political corruption in this country has become a dangerous job," he remarked.

Last Monday night, in the presence of his wife and his little daughter, he was machine gunned to death. [See main news section for latest developments.]

Medicine

Hunger.

Dr. W. A. Bousfield, Tufts college psychologist, experimented with rats and cats in a Harvard university laboratory and found a vicious circle. When the rats got less to eat their stomachs shrunk. This caused their appetites to fail. They ate still less and their stomach shrunk still more. Dr. Bousfield experimented on colleagues with the same result. Rats on a starvation diet for several months never regained their previous appetites or stomach sizes. This, said Dr. Bousfield last week, is the harmful result of weight reducing or deprivation. He found normal hunger increases mental and physical activity in quantity but not in quality. He learned that cats getting two meals a day ate more and were healthier than those that had food before them all the time.

Suspension.

Last August "Dr." Ralph S. Willard, young Russian chemist of Los Angeles, asserted he had frozen a monkey solid and restored its life three days later. Medical authorities called him a fraud. Last week Dr. Alexis Carrel told the New York Academy of Medicine that postponing death for 100 years or more is a remote possibility. Dr. Carrel is a Nobel prize winner in surgery, Rockefeller institute researcher, and co-inventor with Col. Charles A. Lindbergh of a machine which vitalizes dissected organs. Dr. Carrel based his vision on the fact that small jointed shell animals can be dried up and later revived by moisture. Dr. Anton Julius Carlson of the University of Chicago, a former colleague, said human resurrection is insupportable in science. Closer to earth was Dr. Carrel's assertion that survival of the soul was possible because it had not been proved impossible. He said spiritualists are negligent of facts, since "we know positively that clairvoyants are capable of perceiving past and future events." Dr. Carrel's other remarks on rejuvenation further signalized his recent departure from hard to romantic science.

Mercy.

The Voluntary Euthanasia [painless death] society met for the first time in London. It adopted, 250 to 40, a resolution demanding the right to die for victims of incurable diseases. Lord Moynihan, surgeon and leading advocate of legal mercy killing, has drafted legislation providing that the death candidate sign a doubly attested application and obtain medical certification of his incurable disease from two doctors. A euthanasia referee would then grant or deny the permit. It would be effective only after seven days to permit the appeals of friends and relatives in court. The forty who voted against the resolution were Catholic Youth association members. Dr. C. O. Hawthorne, British Medical association councilman, feared that legalization might eventually make the voluntary death for incurables compulsory.

Flying

Two air mail planes were placed in service Sunday between Anchorage, Alaska, and the lonely east shore of Cook inlet. The new service replaces dog teams.

Agnes Hurt, who last year was named the nation's outstanding air stewardess, became the bride recently of Harry Bitterman, a pilot on the United Air Lines. Until her marriage she was employed on the Chicago-New York run of the same company. The newlyweds are living in Western Springs, Ill.

The state department on Thursday announced an agreement with England, Canada, and the Irish Free State which is expected to open the way for regular air service across the Atlantic by the summer of 1937. Pan-American Air Lines and British Imperial Airways, Ltd., probably will work the service together. American flying boats of the China Clipper type probably will be used. Ivor McClure, director of civil aviation for the British air ministry, conferred with air officials in Chicago Wednesday.

Ben King of Washington, D. C., set a new record at Miami for light, single seated seaplanes by flying 80.931 miles per hour. The old record of 76.293 was set by a Frenchman in 1930.

Eleven persons were killed Tuesday when a Belgian air liner crashed in a valley near Tatsfield, Kent, England. Ice on the wings had weighted down the ship. ●● Dewey L. Noyes, pilot, and Elwood M. Walter, a passenger, were killed Wednesday when the test plane they were flying fell on a field near Nunda, N. Y.

It took Clyde Pangborn, round the world flyer, two days to rise in a tiny 350 pound plane, called the "Flying Flea." Both attempts were made at Roosevelt field, Mineola, N. Y. He crowded into the midget ship Tuesday. "This is the little ship we've been waiting for," he said. It raced 200 yards. But he couldn't lift it. He tried again Wednesday. The "Flea" obeyed this time. After 10 minutes in the air Pangborn landed. "It flies," was all he would say. The "Flea" is 11½ feet long and described by its makers as foolproof.

Education

President James Bryant Conant of Harvard university announced last Tuesday that the university had been given a fund of two million dollars. The money is to be used for a school to teach "the science and art of government administration," and the improvement of "public administration—national, state, and local—for the welfare of our people." Donor of the fund was Lucius N. Littauer, 76 years old, a graduate of Harvard in 1878, a former Republican congressman, and a wealthy glove manufacturer of New York City. Mr. Littauer specified that three-fourths of the money shall be reserved for teaching purposes.

The New York city board of examiners will not grant teachers' licenses to those whom they consider overweight. They refused Miss Rose Freistater a license because she weighed 180 pounds. When she could not get her weight down to 150 pounds in the time they allowed her they again refused her a license. Last Wednesday she appeared before Dr. Frank P. Graves, state commissioner of education, in Albany, N. Y. Weighing 154 pounds, she was there to appeal the decision of the New York board.

WHEAT RECEDES WHEN RUSH TO BUY FADES OUT

Effect of Argentine Action Wears Off.

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

The feverish rush to buy wheat, released Friday by the establishment of a 90 cent minimum price in Argentina, exhausted itself yesterday and prices on the Chicago Board of Trade and other leading world markets experienced a moderate reaction. Wheat closed with losses up to 2⅛ cents a bushel in Chicago. Smaller declines occurred in the foreign markets.

The market in Chicago and other trading centers was the target of heavy profit taking sales. The advance of 5 cents a bushel on Friday was an invitation to holders to realize their profits. The failure of the Winnipeg market to stage a further advance served to put the brakes on prices in other countries.

Canada Protects Advantage.

Canada is the principal beneficiary of Argentina's price fixing and the dominion wheat board is apparently intent on preventing an upturn in prices that would wipe out its new competitive advantage in the world export market. Closing prices yesterday in Winnipeg were slightly below quotations in the Buenos Aires market, whereas normally Canadian wheat commands a premium of 6 to 8 cents a bushel because of its superior quality.

In Buenos Aires the December wheat future closed at 90½ cents a bushel, a decline of a half cent from Friday's level. The closing figure was about equal to the new minimum price which the government has guaranteed to farmers.

The Canadian government has a virtual corner on the wheat market in Winnipeg, and its deliberate control of prices is expected to stimulate export sales to Europe.

Chicago Market Confused.

Wheat opened slightly lower in Chicago. There was a considerable confusion as trading got under way. May wheat, the principal future, was quoted in opening transactions at 98⅛ cents to $1 a bushel. So uncertain were traders of the probable trend of the market that they were trading at widely varying prices in different parts of the pit.

After a few minutes the trading became more orderly and prices declined moderately. The December wheat future, under which deliveries are now being made, was quoted 1⅛ cents a bushel above Friday's price early in the day, but later declined to close a half cent a bushel lower. The sharpest decline occurred in the July future, a new crop contract, which lost 2⅛ cents a bushel.

	Yesterday.	Friday.	Week ago.
Wheat	$.98⅞	$1.00½	$.98⅞
Corn	.60⅛	.61⅛	.59¼
Oats	.27⅝	.28½	.26⅞
Rye	.52⅞	.54	.50½

European importers made heavy purchases in Canada again yesterday. Sales were estimated between two and three million bushels.

OUTPUT OF AUTOS RISES TO 99,435 UNITS LAST WEEK

Automobile production in the United States and Canada again moved higher last week as manufacturers turned out 99,435 units, according to Ward's Reports, Inc. This was an increase of 2,245 cars over the preceding week's total of 97,190.

Increases were recorded by Dodge, Hudson-Terraplane, Packard and Studebaker. General Motors companies reported no change. The Chrysler group produced 22,000 units, a gain of 1,500 for the week. Ford reported a slight decrease due to manufacturing delays in minor parts.

"An estimate of 400,000 units for December appears reasonable and conservative," Ward's comments. "Since final figures for November will approximate 393,000 and October output amounted to 283,334, a total of 1,076,000 cars and trucks is forecast for the final quarter this year. This would mark the highest total since 1925, when 1,165,420 units rolled from assembly lines."

ILLINOIS BUILDING PERMITS HIGHER THAN YEAR AGO

November building permits were higher in both number and amount throughout the state than for the same month last year, according to the Illinois department of labor. Permits were issued last month for 1,183 projects with a dollar value of $2,850,433, compared with 814 in November, 1934, totaling $2,022,986. This is a gain of 45.3 per cent in number and 40.9 per cent in value.

Comparison of November figures with October shows a decrease of 3.2 per cent in number of projects and 32.7 per cent in estimated cost for all classes of building. In residential construction the loss was even greater in number of building permits, being 35.2 per cent less than the preceding month.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 14.—(AP)—The Association of American Railroads reported today that net operating revenues of class one steam railways were $108,502,263 in October, an increase of $27,555,260, or 34 per cent, above the same month last year. For the 10 month period, however, net operating revenues stood at $703,752,326, a decrease of $6,282,089 under last year.

Bankers Split in Fight Over Branch Plan

BY HOWARD WOOD.

Small bankers throughout the country, alarmed by what they regard as a carefully designed plot to railroad American banks into unified systems patterned after British and Canadian branch banking, are rapidly widening the schism created by the sudden insurrection at the recent convention of the American Bankers association in New Orleans.

When eighteen delegates of little banks from New York to California and Florida to Wisconsin rose to second the nomination of Orval W. Adams of Salt Lake City for the key position in the American Bankers association at the convention they were moved by resentment against the conniving of the advocates of branch banking as much as they were by what they regarded as an attempt by Washington New Dealers to horn in on the management of their association.

The two issues were somewhat confused by the fact that E. G. Bennett, whom the inner circle in the management of the bankers association had built up as a candidate for the key job for 1936, not only had powerful New Deal connections, but was a branch banker as well. This was too much for the little bankers who saw in Bennett's candidacy a further move to push the American banks in the direction of a unified system.

In the December issue of the "Hoosier Banker," official publication of the Indiana Bankers association, Don E. Warrick, secretary of the Indiana group, carries on the war against branch banking which he and others started at the New Orleans convention last month.

Warrick's blasts are aimed at a motley group of bankers and their camp followers. These include such widely selected individuals as J. H. Perkins, chairman of the board of the National City bank of New York; A. P. Giannini, big California branch banker; Chairman Marriner S. Eccles of the federal reserve board, Harry Wilkerson, editor of the Chicago Banker, and Dr. Luther A. Harr, Pennsylvania state banking superintendent and possible candidate for appointment to the new federal reserve board to be named by President Roosevelt Feb. 1.

Bennett's candidacy for office in the bankers association, says Warrick, was the result of a series of conferences between bankers interested in promoting branch banking, and Eccles and other New Deal leaders who favor such a system. Without mentioning either Perkins or Giannini by name he points out that the Perkins bank, the National City, has a close tie in with Giannini and that the latter is a director of the National City. He accuses Wilkerson, ardent New Deal supporter, of carrying water for the branch bankers by "persistent perversion" of facts in his trade paper.

"The battle crystallized as a result of unit bankers, both state and national, decrying the attempts of those who would extend branch banking," says Warrick. "The only way in which the New Deal national picture was injected was that some of those identified with the federal reserve system, the Federal Deposit Insurance corporation, and the Reconstruction Finance corporation were actively supporting Bennett. The vast majority of bankers—it would be safe to say 90 or 95 per cent—vehemently resented the intrusion of government officials into the political life of the American Bankers' association."

The battle between the branch bankers and the unit bankers is expected to become more furious next year when the American Bankers' association holds its annual convention in San Francisco, the home state of Giannini's big branch banking system.

To the question, "What are you unit bankers going to do next year when Giannini will have his boys come in from his 458 branches, all with delegate votes?" Warrick replies in his article, "As they asketh, just so shall they receiveth."

U. S. TREASURY FAILS TO MAKE SILVER BID; MARKET LACKS PRICE

New York, Dec. 14.—[Special.]—The United States treasury failed today to bid for silver in either New York or London. As a result no business was done in the British market and a purely nominal quotation of 26 7-16d an ounce, unchanged from the previous day, was posted.

In view of the nominal character of the London market Handy & Harman, leading bullion brokers here, announced that there was no official New York quotation for foreign silver. Records of the brokers running back twenty-five years disclosed no previous occasion in which a New York price for silver had been lacking.

Chinese Deny Sales.

Nanking, Dec. 14.—(AP)—Reports circulating here that the United States had cut down on its silver purchases as the result of the heavy sale of silver abroad by the Chinese government was branded as groundless today by a government spokesman. He said it was the aim of the Chinese government to conserve its currency reserve and that it would be contradictory to sell large amounts abroad.

O'CONNOR FINDS BANKS HOLDING MORE U. S. BONDS

Washington, D. C., Dec. 14.—[Special.]—Heavily increased holdings of government obligations, enormous deposit increases, great resources but substantially decreased loans and discounts, were shown by national banks at the date of the last "call" of condition on Nov. 1, Controler of the Currency J. F. T. O'Connor announced today.

The report showed that on the call date there were 5,409 active national banks in continental United States, Alsaka, Hawaii, and the Virgin islands with assets of $27,430,730,000, an increase of $1,369,665,000 over the amount reported by 5,431 banks June 29, and a gain of $2,619,340,000 over resources of 5,466 active banks on Oct. 17, 1934, the corresponding call last year.

Indicating the extent to which the national banks are financing governmental activities, these institutions held $7,493,596,000 direct and fully guaranteed federal securities Nov. 1, an increase of $320,589,000 since June 29, and of $1,145,364,000 since Oct. 17, 1934.

Deposits of the active national banks Nov. 1 were $24,033,236,000, a gain of $1,514,990,000, or 6.73 per cent since June, and an increase of $3,211,844,000, or 15.43 per cent since October, 1934.

Despite the great increase in deposits, the report showed continued shrinkage in loans and discounts which on Nov. 1 amounted to $7,301,371,000, against $7,365,226,000 June 29, and $7,633,924,000 Oct. 17, 1934.

GOLD CONTINUES FLOW INTO U. S.; EXCHANGE FIRM

New York, Dec. 14.—[Special.]—Imports of gold aggregating $9,457,500 were reported today by the federal reserve bank of New York. The shipments included $3,827,200 from India and $874,000 from England which arrived late on Friday and $4,411,800 from France and $344,500 from England received today.

The foreign exchange market was irregular with sterling and the gold-bloc currencies steady to higher. The pound remained at $4.92⅞ at which level it was down ⅛ cent on the week. Guilders gained 1 point to 67.73 cents, but were down 12 points net on the week and Swiss francs remained at 32.45 cents, both for the day and week. French franc gained ⅛ point to 6.61¼ cents, reducing the value of the dollar to $1.0031 from $1.0033 yesterday.

The belga fell 1 point today to 16.86 cents, while the mark remained at 40.23 cents. Japanese yen were steady at 28.78 cents and the Canadian dollar gained ⅛ cent to 99¼ cents.

See Argentina Taking Step in Devaluation

The world-wide sensation caused by the Argentine government's action in setting a price of 90 cents a bushel for wheat has given rise to the belief that the South American country soon may take steps to devalue its currency.

If the government is planning to debase the peso its action in setting such a high minimum price for wheat would be more readily explainable. Devaluation would mean the reduction of the 90 cent price in terms of foreign money but the farmers would in some measure, be protected by the relatively high price guaranteed by the government.

Action Explained by Officials.

Cables from Buenos Aires quote government officials as saying the new price is based entirely on the supply situation existing in that country. A severe drouth last summer, rivaling in length and intensity that experienced in this country in 1934, played havoc with the wheat crop. The acreage is the smallest in a decade and according to present estimates there will be an exportable surplus of only 50 million bushels, compared with 150 million bushels sold during the last season.

Siebel C. Harris, one of the leading brokers on the Chicago Board of Trade, said yesterday there are intimations in private cables from London that the Argentine price action is a prelude to peso devaluation.

Explains Devaluation Effect.

"Should the peso be devalued sharply," he said, "the Argentine price converted into American money would be considerably less than 90 cents, depending on the extent of devaluation. It seems reasonable that if the government does contemplate devaluation it would be waranted in protecting its wheat growers from such action.

"This might upset sentiment if it occurred unexpectedly. On the other hand it seems the government's action definitly precipitated a tremendous change in psychology on the part of foreign wheat buyers and has placed Canada in a much better position to sell its large surplus. It has probably effectually removed the threat of Canadian distress selling as a major market factor for the rest of the season."

WEEK'S INDICES REVEAL RAPID INDUSTRY GAINS

[Copyright: 1935: By the Associated Press.]

New York, Dec. 14. — Business jammed a heavy foot on the recovery accelerator this week and raced ahead at the speediest clip since June, 1930. In reaching the highest level in five years the Associated Press adjusted index of industrial activity topped its peak of 86.0 last week to finish at 86.7 compared with 65.0 in the like 1934 week.

Records were crowded off the board to make place for new ones—by the automobile production index, which soared to the pinnacle last reached in November, 1929, and by the car loadings index, which jumped to the highest mark in November since 1931.

The Associated Press index of industrial activity, based on 1929-'30 as 100 and adjusted for seasonal variation, follows:

	Latest week.	Previous week.	Year ago.
Composite Index	86.7*	86.0	65.0
Automobile	103.0*	98.6	56.9
Steel Mill	74.8	75.7	38.7
Cotton Mfg.	101.9	101.9	94.0
Electric Power	104.6	104.2	96.2
Residential Building	42.3	42.3	18.8
Car loadings	71.1*	70.9	60.6

SHARE MARKET STRENGTHENS AS SELLING EASES

Silver Issues Regain Part of Losses.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Dec. 14.—Speculative hesitancy due to uncertainty over the silver and European political situations continued to hold the share market in low gear today. The selling which has been bearing values down for the better part of the last week dried up, however, and most groups were able to make a little progress on the up side.

Silver shares rebounded as much as 2 points and gains of a point or so were set to the account of a fairly large number of victims of the liquidation movement. Industrial shares were favored. The rails had a brief spell of buoyancy, but the final returns on the group as a whole were somewhat mixed. Utilities were rather neglected.

Position Believed Improved.

Evening up of commitments over the week-end was a factor of some weight in the market's improved showing. Many observers seemed to believe that the drastic shake-out of the last few days had improved the technical position of the list to a marked extent, and the disposition among boardroom groups seems to be to look for a recovery movement of some scope now, or at least for nothing worse than a resting period.

Can shares recovered from their sinking spell yesterday, Continental rebounding 2⅝ points and American Can about a third as much.

Chrysler rose nearly a point when the auto group came to the front, and a number of other issues of the section improved fractionally.

A. O. Smith, an outstanding selling target of the last week, sagged nearly a point farther, bringing it about 11 points under the high established a while back. The selling of this stock was attributed mainly to the SEC investigation.

Union Pacific Weak.

Union Pacific was a weak spot of the rail department, dropping a point. New York Central rose a major fraction, and Atchison, Lackawanna, and Delaware and Hudson just about held their own.

Mail orders were quiet and without definite trend in spite of reports of large buying orders in their behalf from the west. Food machinery, a conspicuous specialty in yesterday's dealings, again claimed the spotlight, adding more than 3 points to its listed valuation. Houdaille Hershey, was another individual performer to attract attention, rising impressively to its year's best price in response to estimates that the company's net for the year would approximate $3 a share.

ARRANGE 35 HOUR AIR EXPRESS TO HAWAII ISLANDS

Through air express service from Chicago to Honolulu in 35 hours was announced yesterday by United Air Lines, which is to have connecting plane services at San Francisco with the Pan-American Clipper beginning Dec. 20, when trans-Pacific air express shipments will be inaugurated.

The through service will be effective from points on United's system and conecting lines. Tarif charges were announced for the initial service from Atlantic coast, middle west, inter-mountain, and Pacific coast cities. The charge from Chicago will be $4.15 on a one pound package and $3.32 a pound on larger packages. This includes valuation fee, insurance and all handling charges.

Pan American and United Airlines are affiliated with the air express division of the Railway Express agency, which acts as a pickup and delivery system for both.

New York, Dec. 14.—[Special.]—Prospects for completing a reorganization of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railway company in 1936 are "slim," E. M. Durham, newly elected president of the system, said today. He said the road may have to bear a substantial increase in operating expenses.

BUSINESS NEWS IN REVIEW

Silver Bubble Bursts—World Markets Confused by Treasury Policy—Business Gains Again—Retail Trade Near 1929 Level—New Deal Gets More Blows from Courts.

The New Deal's sop—the silver remonetization program—given to seven sparsely settled western states in return for political support, blew up last week with such force that its effect was felt throughout the world. Silver fell more than 4 cents an ounce in both London and New York as the treasury, ordered by law to buy vast quantities of the metal, refused to continue holding the bag for foreign governments and speculators. At the end of the week bar silver in London was quoted at 26 7/16 pence, equivalent to 58⅝ cents. In New York the price closed at 60⅜ cents.

Metal dealers and foreign exchange circles were bewildered by events. Treasury officials in Washington offered no explanation, except to reassert that they are pursuing the silver purchase policy in good faith, but throughout the world rather than in London only.

Gold Gains.

When the silver purchase act was signed last year by the President it was estimated that if one-fourth of the nation's combined monetary stock is to be in the form of silver the treasury would have to purchase 1,325,000,000 ounces of the metal. Silver then was selling between 25 and 35 cents an ounce. Since then the United States government has bought three-quarter billion ounces so that if there had been no change in gold stocks of the country it would have passed the half way mark. However, the Washington economy planners failed to take into consideration the vast increase in gold stocks. It is estimated that 1 billion 900 million dollars in gold has fled European countries to the United States in the last year with the result that monetary gold stocks of this country are now above ten billion dollars.

Treasury Balks.

For many months the treasury has placed its bid in the London market at the opening of trading and taken a considerable amount of the metal offered to it at prices artificially above levels which would have prevailed except for this country's purchasing policy. Last August speculators dumped more than 25,000,000 ounces into the market in one day, which the treasury absorbed, a total higher than United States production for all 1934. Early last week an attempt was made to dump another 20,000,000 ounces and the treasury balked. The bottom immediately dropped out of world markets.

Interpretations.

The abrupt reversal in policy was interpreted by many as a direct blow at Japanese and British silver speculators. Japanese speculators have been smuggling silver out of northern China, according to reports. This silver they sell through London agents to the United States. The transactions are profitable to the Japanese and British, but costly to China and America.

In other quarters it was believed the treasury is buying large quantities of silver through private negotiations in various parts of the world and simultaneously withholding big bids from the London market to bring the price down sufficiently to stimulate a release of larger stocks. Others thought the change was governed by recent efforts of China to abandon the silver standard and hitch Chinese currency to the British pound. Financial circles wondered whether the treasury might be negotiating to take substantial amounts of Chinese metal at lower prices than those quoted in the open market, or whether the treasury sought to discourage China from abandoning the silver standard.

Stocks.

The sudden break in silver prices found immediate reflection in stock prices which moved lower with silver mining shares leading the way. United States Smelting suffered most, but American Smelting, Howe Sound and Cerro de Pasco lost heavily. Coppers followed the silver group.

Wheat.

Traders watched the silver situation until it was eclipsed Friday by wheat. The Argentine government raised the price at which it will buy wheat from farmers from 53 to 90 cents a bushel. The Buenos Aires futures market promptly jumped 19 cents. Chicago, Liverpool, Kansas City, Minneapolis, Rotterdam and Winnipeg markets rose 3 to 5 cents a bushel. A part of the gain was lost later.

Bonds.

The dislocation of silver prices, coupled with a balky stock market and gloomy prospects for peace in Europe, adversely affected bond prices, which moved lower. Industrials offered the greatest resistance to liquidation.

Exchange.

Foreign exchange dealings were sluggish, although here also the silver situation had its effect. Gold bloc currencies moved slightly higher and then eased, but Saturday found each of the group above the point where it is profitable to export gold to the United States. Sterling and silver currencies declined.

Business.

Business moved into the final stretch of the year at the fastest pace since 1930. Production in steel, motors, machinery, and textiles was unusually well sustained. Christmas trade was estimated to be a half billion dollars above last year.

Steel output eased 2½ points to 54½ per cent of plant capacity, but no cause for alarm was exhibited because demand is proving abnormally resistant to final quarter influences. Electric power production again moved to an all time high record of 1,969,662,000 kilowatt hours during the week. Railroad freight trafic rose to the highest level for the period since 1930 at 637,133 cars. Bank clearings dipped below the preceding week, but remained above the corresponding period of 1934.

Retailers rushed into wholesale markets to build up depleted inventories as demand spread to nearly all departments in the retail division. Both wholesale and retail activity in Chicago climbed close to 1929 levels. Construction awards increased 68 per cent over last year. Automobile production rose to 99,500 units. Newspaper advertising lineage continued to rise.

Sears, Roebuck & Co. announced that November sales were the best in six years. General Motors sales in the same month broke all records for November. Chrysler corporation shipments in the first 11 months of 1935 were reported 37 per cent above last year. U. S. Steel corporation's shipments were the largest since July, 1934.

New Deal.

New Dealers continued to suffer court setbacks as business men hurled new verbal brickbats. [See Washington: Review Section.] On Wednesday a Virginia federal court, in granting injunctions to 14 coal producers restraining the government from collecting a penalty tax for refusing to accept the coal code, expressed serious doubt as to the constitutionality of the act.

Success of the government's efforts to avoid a multiplicity of suits aimed at testing the legality of the utility holding company act was assured Tuesday when a number of leading companies agreed to coöperate in the move. Approximately 50 suits have been filed by utility concerns seeking to block enforcement of provisions of

SOUTH RAISING CATTLE ON IDLE COTTON LANDS

Get Bonus, Vie with Live Stock States.

Southern cotton growers who are being paid by the government not to raise their product are looking to Chicago and other northern consumers for marketing the cattle they are now raising. During the last four months the movement of cattle from eight "cotton states" into the Chicago market rose more than 700 per cent over 1934.

The states represented in the movement, some of which are selling cattle in Chicago for the first time, include Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Arkansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Tennessee and Oklahoma, normally the leading cotton producing states in the south. During the last few weeks these states marketed more than $3,000,000 worth of cattle here and are making a strong bid against the corn belt cattle producers for the beef trade on the Chicago market.

Seek to Improve Cattle.

Two large delegations of southern cattle raisers recently visited the Chicago market to arrange for selling regularly through this point. One group arrived during the International Live Stock exposition to look at prize breeding stock, intending to advocate production of better quality beef in the south which will compete more readily with the top grades of steers coming out of the feedlots of Iowa, Illinois, Indiana and the other cattle feeding states.

So remunerative has been the cotton growers' venture in the cattle raising business that its permanency in the south is assured. The bid for the northern trade in the future will be even stronger than at present, live stock men who have canvassed the southern states report.

Southern Cattle Inferior.

While the vast majority of the southern cattle still are of inferior type that sells considerably under steers from the corn belt, more of the kinds that command the premiums paid for "native" steers, are appearing in shipments from the south. Some Virginia corn feds this summer brought $11.75 in Chicago, which was well above the bulk of the short feds from middle western states. Alabama cattle sold up to $9.75.

These new fields from which Chicago can drain supplies are being solicited for business by Chicago live stock commission men, who realize the southern cattle industry needs a market with a world-wide outlet. Federal statistics show the southern states this year have reaped far greater

AN INFLATION MARKET AHEAD
After Roosevelt became President, he announced that he would put up prices—if we could not do it one way, we would do it another way, "but do it we will." The net effect of the many inflationary efforts since March, 1933, has been to put an upward pressure on all prices. A rising price level is more favorable to some companies than to others. A non-political analysis covering this whole subject of the increasing price level and its effect on various stock groups is being sent to every new subscriber for THE FINANCIAL WORLD.

STOCKS ATTRACTIVE NOW
The December 18th FINANCIAL WORLD is a noteworthy issue. Shrewd long term investors will particularly appreciate the analysis pointing out about 20 stocks that now represent "better than average" values. Some are income producers, some speculative investments and some outright speculations. This same issue covers these additional valuable studies: "A New Market Factor," "A Low Priced Speculative Group" (under $10 per share), "Building Boom Ahead?—What Stocks Will Benefit?," "Profits in Rail Preferreds!," "8 Most Attractive Convertible Bonds" and "An Outstanding Rail Stock." Return this "ad" and $1 for December 18th and three following issues. You will also receive:
"A Roosevelt Bull Market Ahead?," "How to Invest $3,000, $5,000 and $12,000," "How Long This Bull Market?," the December issue of our stock ratings and data book covering 1300 stocks, reprints of analyses appraising the value of 13 Public Utility Holding Companies, "35 Previous Recommendations Still Attractive," "Inflation Looms Nearer," "What About Utilities Now?," "Rail Shares in Best Position," 64 "Stocks Factographs" and "An Analytical Basis for Selecting Stocks."

LEARN TO INVEST INTELLIGENTLY
With leading authorities agreed that we have today the basis of a greater credit inflation than in 1929, you can improve your investment position by having a substantial part of your funds in carefully selected common stocks whose outlook is fairly well defined. Purchases should be considered from the long term standpoint only. The matter of wise selection is all-important. Selections should be made only after a careful study of the basic facts. You probably haven't time to do much reading of investment literature. Therefore, the most effective plan is to have dependable and unbiased experts assemble the vast amount of financial information and boil it down into a form that will give you all the essential data in a short time. THE FINANCIAL WORLD is doing that very thing for many of America's most successful investors. The cost—$10 per year—is nominal, when you consider the amount of capital you jeopardize through ignorance.
Thousands of investors are finding THE FINANCIAL WORLD indispensable. Join this select and rapidly growing circle who depend upon us for impartial advice and for basic investment facts. 32 OF NEW YORK COMMON STOCKS ABOVE '29 PEAKS

Increased Earning Power Is Responsible.

New York, Dec. 14.—(AP)—Thirty-two common stocks are selling today on the New York Stock exchange above their 1929 highs. Increased earning power, actual or potential, is responsible in most instances.

Fortuitous circumstances favored some of the stocks. Gold mines were boomed by a 69 per cent jump in the value of gold, incidental to the revaluing of the dollar. Glassmakers were helped by the repeal of prohibition and the expanding use of "safety glass" in automobiles.

The potent force of habit on the purchase of "inexpensive luxuries" is clearly evidenced by the number of snuff, sigaret, and chewing gum manufacturers on the list. There was little change in the retail prices of most of these products, but lower raw material costs boosted net income.

Food Products in List.

Food products contributed substantially to the total. The improved competitive position in its particular phase of the industry, is traced largely to more aggressive merchandising and a more effective use of advertising.

Producers' goods manufacturers—the so-called heavy industry group, including steelmakers, crude oil producers, and auto accessory makers—contribute largely to the list. The makers of goods used by other manufacturers are among the first to be hit by a falling tide of business activity and the last to benefit by the recovery wave. The reasons for this surprising showing by a supposedly laggard group is attributed to improved competitive positions of individual companies as a result of more favorable plant location, greater efficiency, and extensive advertising.

The remainder, a miscellaneous group, combined fortunate demand with better merchandising to attain their position.

List by Classification.

The individual companies, roughly classified, follow:

Miscellaneous—McKeesport Tin Plate, National Steel, Amerada, Columbia Pictures, American Safety Razor, Union Bag and Paper, Congoleum-Nairn, Minneapolis-Honeywell Regulator, Hercules Motor, Greyhound, Omnibus corporation, Briggs & Stratton, and Atlas Tack.

SILVER BUBBLE BURSTS; WORLD TRADE CONFUSED

Dealers Still in Doubt on Treasury Plan.

the act which includes the "death sentence" clause.

Attacks.

In Chicago, Ernest T. Weir, president of the National Steel corporation, called on 1,600 captains of Illinois industry for a finish fight on the New Deal and assailed the "autocratic system of government run by incompetent advocates of planned economy." Winthrop W. Aldrich, head of the nation's largest bank, Chase National of New York, told a Houston, Tex., group that public resistance to government extravagance will appear eventually. A balanced budget, he said, is the first problem to be solved.

Investment.

Idle funds seeking profitable employment continued to gobble up security offerings. An issue of $45,000,000 Southwestern Bell Telephone bonds was absorbed soon after it was placed on the market. Port of New York Authority sold $16,500,000 of 3¾ per cent bonds. Offering of $100,000,000 Federal Land bank bonds found all of the issue available for public subscription sold. A portion was reserved for refunding outstanding bonds. Wheeling Steel corporation announced it will market $35,000,000 ing bonds.

Building.

Two major construction projects for Chicago were disclosed when it was learned Wieboldt Stores, Inc., planned to erect a million dollar store in the heart of the Oak Park-River Forest business district, and that Sherwin-Williams company will spend nearly that much in additions and betterments to its Kensington plant. The projects are the largest since rebuildings of the stockyards after the disastrous fire last year.

Rails.

Steady progress of railroads in speeding up service was reflected in the announcement of the world's fastest long distance train service—which will cover the 1,048 miles between Chicago and Denver at an average speed of 65½ miles an hour—by the Union Pacific and Chicago and North Western railroads. The trains will be Diesel powered, contain ten cars and will be built by the Pullman-Standard Car Manufacturing company. They will go into service early in June, making the Chicago-Denver runs in 9¼ to 11¾ less hours than at present.

Pennsylvania railroad ordered 10,000 new freight cars to cost $25,000,000, marking one of the most extensive equipment programs ever undertaken by the company. In contrast, the St. Louis Southwestern—the Cotton Belt—found its financial difficulties growing and sought reorganization in a plea filed with a St. Louis federal court.

Banks.

Directors of the First National Bank of Chicago, ignoring the recent admonishment of the Jesse H. Jones, head of the Reconstruction Finance corporation that banks should be in no hurry about retiring preferred stocks held by the RFC, voted to retire $10,000,000 of its outstanding $25,000,000 preferred, and declared dividends on common stock at the rate of $1 quarterly, the first payments since 1932. Harris Trust and Savings bank lifted its dividend basis from $6 to $8 yearly, but directors of the Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust company deferred action on dividends to the January meeting. It was expected Continental would vote a $2 annual dividend.

FURTHER GAINS PREDICTED FOR 1936 BUSINESS

Mansfield, O., Dec. 14.—(AP)—Chairman A. W. Robertson of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company predicted today that business throughout the nation in 1936 will surpass that of 1935. Robertson said the apparent tendency of the national administration to relax regulation of business would aid.

"Westinghouse business will gross $100,000,000 this year, an increase of about 18 per cent over 1934," Robertson said. "It is safe to say a similar increase over 1935 is in prospect next year."

BELMONT BANK'S DEPOSITS TO BE REPAID IN FULL

Stockholders' Group Buys Remaining Assets.

Payment in full to depositors of the Belmont-Sheffield Trust and Savings bank will be made next week as a result of a plan, believed to be the first of its kind ever completed, whereby stockholders and depositors have purchased remaining assets of the old bank for a sum sufficient to wipe out deposit liability and the balance due on a loan from the Reconstruction Finance corporation.

State Auditor Edward J. Barrett yesterday authorized payment of $111,281, or 52½ per cent. To date the bank has returned 47½ per cent since closing at the time of the bank moratorium, this being made possible through aid of an RFC loan of $83,497. A balance of $28,311 was due on the loan on Sept. 30.

Receivership to Be Ended.

Approximately $141,000 was involved, including expenses of winding up the receivership, which has been under William L. O'Connell since Aug. 7, 1933. Only $59,000 was needed, however, in cash and assignment of deposits to pay for stock in the liquidating corporation in order to close the deal. The bank had cash of $49,300 on Sept. 30 and has sold most of its marketable securities since that date.

The liquidating corporation will take over assets carried on the books of the old bank at about $200,000, which is far in excess of actual value. The liquidating group expects in time to net enough from these to pay off deposits waived by its members and confine the maximum loss to the value of the old stock.

Westerlin Heads Corporation.

J. M. Westerlin, former chairman of the board of the bank, is president of the liquidating corporation. The secretary is Albert H. Olson, who, with Attorney Rudolph Johnson, has been handling most of the details of the program.

None of the stockholder-depositors was asked to waive more than 15 per cent of his deposits in forming the liquidating corporation, but a few larger ones did so in order to make up the difference when some declined to participate in the plan.

State Auditor Barrett also announced authorization of payment of $30,019, or another 15 per cent, to Congress Trust and Savings bank stockholders who contributed $200,000 so that depositors could be paid in full when the bank closed. Ten per cent had been paid previously by O'Connell, who is remaining as receiver at the request of the stockholders.

ITALIAN BUYING LIFTS AMERICAN COTTON EXPORTS

Washington, D. C., Dec. 14.—(AP)—A steady increase in Italian purchases of American cotton was shown today by commerce department figures. During November 58,058 bales were shipped to Italy, compared with 51,000 bales in October and 31,000 bales in September. In November, 1934, however, purchases were 79,015 bales.

Both Germany and the United Kingdom also boosted purchases. Germany took 136,563 bales in November, compared with 76,000 bales in October and 70,000 in September. The United Kingdom purchased 259,831 bales in November compared with 215,000 bales in October and 121,000 bales in September.

Total exports during November were 1,134,874, compared to 572,359 for the same month last year. Exports for the four months ended Nov. 30 were 2,574,786 bales, compared to 1,894,142 for the same period a year ago. Largest increases over last year were shown in exports to the United Kingdom, France, Germany, and Japan.

INVESTMENT RETURNS RUN BELOW YEAR AGO

American investors will receive approximately $535,000,000 in dividend and interest payments during December, according to a compilation made by the New York Journal of Commerce. The total compares with $558,000,000 in December of last year.

Dividend payments for the month are placed at $235,000,000, compared with $224,000,000 a year ago, and interest payments will amount to approximately $300,000,000 as compared with $334,000,000. The interest decline was largely due to the refunding of many issues at lower rates.

Crude Oil Stocks Decline 90,000 Barrels in Week

Washington, D. C., Dec. 14.—(AP)—The bureau of mines reported today that stocks of domestic and foreign crude oil at the close of the week of Dec. 7 totaled 299,162,000 barrels, a decrease of 90,000 barrels from the previous week. There was a drop of 154,000 barrels in stocks of foreign crude and an increase of 64,000 barrels in domestic stocks.

Insurance Firm Pays Less; Investment Yields Shrink

Due to the continued trend toward lower investment earnings, the Fidelity Mutual Life Insurance company of Philadelphia yesterday reduced the distributive interest rate on the proceeds of policies left with the company and on dividend accumulations from 4 to 3¾ per cent, effective Jan. 1.

Daily Average Sales of Grocery Chains Rise

Daily average sales of grocery chain stores for November showed an increase of about 3½ per cent in dollar volume as compared with November, 1934, and were about 7 per cent above the same month of 1933, the commerce department reports.

WARNS WORKERS MUST BEAR COST OF IDLE SUBSIDY

Shoe Concern Shows Toll of New Legislation.

The Endicott Johnson corporation, one of the large manufacturers and distributors of shoes in the United States, has posted notices to its workers in all plants, telling them how they are the ones who will pay the bill for unemployment insurance and old age annuities.

Laws of the federal government and New York, where the company's principal properties are located, impose payroll taxes beginning Jan. 1 and continuing to increase until they will take 9 per cent of the company's payroll when fully operative in 1949, the notice said.

Shows Where Earnings Go.

"As the workers now receive in wages, medical services for themselves and dependent members of their families, vacations with pay when possible, and in other ways all the money that the company earns after meeting obligations for taxes, dividends and retirement of preferred stock," it continued, "this tax will either have to be paid by the workers out of wages or by customers through increased prices for shoes.

"It would not be safe to figure that much, if any, of this money could be secured from customers. It must also be remembered that a payroll tax on a percentage basis is entirely unfair to Endicott Johnson workers, as it penalizes them by reason of high wages by comparison with your competitors who pay lower wages."

Workers' Wages Affected.

As an illustration, the notice pointed out that a man now earning $30 a week would receive $27.30, and the balance of $2.70 would be paid in taxes to state and federal funds under conditions to prevail in 1949.

Based on the 1934 payroll of $25,000,000, a tax of $250,000 would be paid in 1936, $980,000 in 1937, and on up to $2,190,000 in 1949—with a 14 year total of $21,270,000.

Endicott Johnson has in operation a plan whereby employés receive half of all profits after preferred dividends, retirements and the $5 a share dividend on common stock. Under it $13,000,000 has been distributed to employés, though nothing has been available since 1928.

USE OF CHECKS DECLINES AFTER FIRST OF MONTH

Withdrawals against individual bank accounts fell sharply in the week ended Dec. 11, although a substantial margin of gain was maintained over the corresponding 1934 period. The decline was attributed to heavy demands for funds usually occurring around the first of each month, which period fell in the preceding week.

Debits in the 12 federal reserve districts totaled $7,640,198,000 in the week ended Dec. 11, compared with $8,648,669,000 a weak earlier and $6,583,834,000 in 1934. In the Chicago district debits to individual account by 162 banks in 41 clearing house cities amounted to $992,455,000, a decrease of 20.8 per cent from the previous week's total of $1,252,913,000. Excluding Elgin, Ill., for which comparisons were not reported, volume of the 40 cities totaled $991,026,000, against $821,025,000 for the corresponding week of 1934, a gain of 20.7 per cent. Chicago reported debits of $59,346,000, compared with $484,270,000 in 1934.

Chicago bank clearings totaled $277,000,000 for the week ended yesterday, against $314,000,000 a week previous and $233,000,000 last year.

COURT ORDERS PROCESSING TAX BONDS BOOSTED

Springfield, Ill., Dec. 14.—(AP)—United States District Judge Charles G. Briggle today ordered 37 companies which have been granted temporary injunctions restraining the government from collecting processing taxes to post new bonds.

Each company, when granted the temporary restraining order, was ordered to pay processing taxes each month to the clerk of the court, as depository for the government, pending decision of the United States Supreme court as to the constitutionality of the Agricultural Adjustment act. Also each firm originally was ordered to give bond of 10 per cent of the amount paid into the depository, the bond to cover possible damages and interest which may accrue.

District attorneys today presented motions for an increase in the bonds, contending the tax payments have piled up to the extent that the original bond now amounts to less than 2 per cent of the total paid into the depository. Judge Briggle ordered bonds of 5 per cent of the total taxes paid be posted, effective as of Dec. 1.

An increase in the amount of electricity used in Illinois during November, over previous years, was shown yesterday in figures released by the Illinois commerce commission. The figures, which show a total of 509,000,000 kilowatt hours sold, are based on the reports of the 12 largest electric utility companies, which furnish 93 per cent of all power used in the state. In November, 1934, 459,000,000 kilowatt hours were sold by the same companies. Similar increases were reported in October and September, this year.

New York, Dec. 14.—[Special.]—The feature of today's trading in the bond market was the activity in liens of several companies which are undergoing reorganization. Spectacular price movements occurred in several issues that have been in demand throughout the week.

One of the conspicuous performers was American Type Founders 6 per cent certificates which rose 8 points to 106½ after which it reacted to close at 104¾. Today's advance brought the week's appreciation in the price of this issue to 34¾ points. American Writing Paper 6s advanced 8¼ points to 43¾ and the 6 per cent certificates rose 5 points to 40.

Corporate Issues Quiet.

Trading was quiet in most corporate bonds. Prices moved within a narrow range and developed no decisive trend.

United States government bonds were slightly higher, but transactions amounted to less than $100,000. Total transactions in the market were $6,681,000, par value, as compared with $7,634,000 last Saturday. The Associated Press averages showed a decline of three-tenths of a point in the railroad issues and an advance of two-tenths of a point in foreign obligations.

Six U. S. Issues Unchanged.

Only six of the thirteen government issues showed any change in price. Treasury 2¾s were 5-32ds higher at 100.2, and the 2⅞s of 1955 were 3-32ds higher at 99.30.

Italian bonds declined an average of 1 to 2 points on fairly heavy sales, but other foreign issues held up well. Small gains predominated in this group.

Tax Sales of Securities.

Just thirteen more trading days on the New York Stock exchange remain until the close of the year. It therefore behooves security holders to analyze their holdings from the viewpoint of income tax. A careful study may enable them to avoid unusually large tax payments.

In computing profits and losses on security transactions, it should be remembered that "paper," or unrealized, profits or losses are not allowable for tax purposes. A loss or profit must be realized, the security must be sold, before the differences may be included in the return.

There are three other primary rules in computation of taxes on these transactions. They are:

[1] Capital gains in excess of capital losses are taxed at the regular rate. [A "capital" gain or loss is the difference between purchase price and sale price].

[2] Excess of capital losses over capital gains is deductible from ordinary income only to the extent of $2,000.

[3] Capital gains and losses as applied to individuals are figured on the basis of a formula based on length of time the security has been held. The gain or loss will be computed at 100 per cent if the security has been held for not more than one year; 80 per cent, if held from one to two years; 60 per cent, two to five years; 40 per cent, five to ten years, and 30 per cent if more than ten years.

On this basis, if an individual has a security profit already realized and losses which he will eventually have to take, he should take those losses before the year closes. Likewise, if he has losses already realized and paper profits on stocks held, it might be advantageous to sell the stock in order to realize the profit from it without paying any tax on that profit for the calendar year 1935.

In order to establish a capital loss or gain on sale of a certain stock that same stock must not be repurchased within 30 days.

From this discussion it is readily apparent that ordinarily it is advisable from a tax standpoint to take losses quickly and to let profits run.

It is also apparent that it is advisable for security holders to keep accurate and complete records of their transactions.

For detailed analyses of complicated problems the service of a tax specialist is recommended. Where the amount involved is large a good specialist will be well worth his hire because of the allowable reductions which he can find and elimination of annoyances that ensue when mistakes are made in income tax computations.

COURT UPHOLDS CLOSED BANKS IN UNPAID NOTE CASE

Indiana Judge Orders Makers to Pay.

Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 14.—[Special.—An important decision affecting liability of closed banks was made today by Judge Herbert E. Wilson of County Superior court who ruled that where banks or trust companies closed their doors before paying noteholders sums of money deposited with them for payment of such notes under a so-called trust arrangement, the original maker of the note, and not the closed bank, is liable for payment.

The point of law is so new that Supreme courts of only four states have ruled on the question. Explaining that it has come up in practically every closed bank case throughout the country, Judge Wilson said his decision was contrary to rulings in Michigan, Florida, and Kansas.

Support for Ruling Is Cited.

His view is supported, however, by the Iowa Supreme court and by extensive reviews of the question made by the Harvard university and University of Michigan law schools, he said.

The Seymour National bank, administrator of the estate of James M. Shields, brought suit against the Commercial Credit company. Shields had bought one of the notes issued by the defendant company and backed by pledged paper held by the City Trust company as trustee.

When the note became due the finance company paid to the bank a sufficient sum of money to meet payment, but before the note was presented for payment the City Trust company became insolvent and closed.

Holds Maker Until Note Is Paid.

The principal question involved was whether payment to the trustee under such arrangement discharged the maker of the note from liability.

"It certainly is true that a maker of a promissory note is not relieved of responsibility by failure on the part of the holder to present the note at the due date," the court held. "That is true even though the instrument is payable at a particular place, and even though the maker has the requisite funds available at the designated place at the right time."

The court also found against the contention that the bank, as trustee, was agent of the holder of the note for purpose of payment and that payment to the trustee discharged payment of the note.

Marshall Field Names Two Division Sales Managers

Marshall Field & Co. manufacturing division has appointed Joseph P. Boland and E. A. Raventos as division sales managers of the new knit underwear and hosiery, and floor coverings, curtains and drapery divisions, respectively, Grant S. Meers, general sales manager, announced yesterday. This is in line with the company's new policy of organizing its manufacturing sales under five divisions.

SILVER AND COTTON PRICE BREAKS LEAD DIP IN COMMODITIES

Sharp declines in silver and cotton were the outstanding changes in the commodity field last week. The crisis in silver, precipitated by the withdrawal of buying support by the United States treasury, brought severe declines in all markets. In Montreal the May future dropped 15½ cents an ounce to 49.50 cents, the lowest level this year. Low quotations for the season were also reached in eggs, coffee, and oats. Late in the week an abrupt advance occurred in grain prices as a result of the setting of a 90 cent minimum price for wheat by the Argentine government.

The following table shows yesterday's closing prices on a representative list of commodities as compared with the closing quotations of the preceding week and the high and low figures for the season:

STEER AVERAGE FALLS 55 CENTS IN LAST WEEK

Sweeping declines in the cattle market, resulting from the stagnant condition of the wholesale beef trade, carried the average price of steers for the last week down to $9.85, within 10 cents of the lowest point since July, and 55 cents under the preceding week's price.

With the exception of some of the cheapest grades of steers under $7.50, which held about steady late in the week after selling higher in face of declines in other cattle, practically all classes were slashed in prices.

A sharp break also was recorded in the lamb market, the close standing 25 to 50 cents under a week ago, although there was a stronger undertone in the lamb trade than in other live stock on the final session. Old sheep were knocked down 50 cents, the sharpest break of the season in aged mutton stock.

A severe break in fresh pork and in lard knocked the props from under the hog market, final quotations showing losses of 25 to 30 cents compared with the best levels of last week, with sows off 50 to 65 cents in ten days.

While the corn belt has been reducing live stock, the south has turned from unprofitable cotton growing to grain and live stock production and is now reaping the benefits of considerably higher markets for all sorts of live stock. Alabama cattlemen looking over the Chicago market recently said some large strings of steers are being fed corn in their locality and that the movement of these cattle to market will begin soon.

Southern Help Cheap.

These southern cattle feeders are in a better position to compete for trade than cattlemen of the north, because of the cheap southern farm help. For $15 a month southern cattle raisers can get a married farm hand. Such help in most parts of Iowa, Illinois, and other northern cattle states is paid $30 and more per month.

One of the handicaps of selling in Chicago is the railroad charges, which are much higher from the south than from the well established live stock country of the middle west, southern cattle raisers point out.

The government reports that the south central states, including most of the cotton territory that has been selling cattle on the Chicago market, obtained $38,175,000 from the sale of live stock and live stock products during September, the latest month for which official figures are available, as compared with $27,051,000 in the same month last year and $20,739,000 two years ago. This is an increase of 41 per cent over the 1934 returns.

Northern States Gain Less.

The south Atlantic states showed a gain of 22 per cent in live stock returns, while the west north central section of the country, such cattle states as Iowa, Minnesota, Missouri, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, and Kansas, were paid only 13 per cent more for live stock and live stock products than in the same period of 1934.

The east north central states [Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Michigan, and Wisconsin] obtained 19 per cent more live stock money this year than last.

FAMED CENTRAL CHURCH PASSES 60TH MILESTONE

Lowden Will Review History Today.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

Central church, Orchestra hall, is 60 years old today. While this church, famous for its pulpit, looks forward to effective leadership in the city's religious life under the pastorship of Dr. Frederick F. Shannon, yet it looks back upon some of the most luminous names and fascinating figures during Chicago's years of dynamic expansion.

DR. FREDERICK F. SHANNON.

There was Prof. David Swing, pioneer liberal who was tried for heresy by a Presbyterian church court and acquitted. But it was this trial which made Prof. Swing the figure around whom Central church spontaneously sprang. Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis and Dr. Frank W. Gunsaulus, founder and first president of the Armour Institute of Technology, also had prominent parts in the early expansion of the church's influence.

Lowden to Review History.

In the anniversary service this morning the addresses will be given by Dr. Shannon and Frank O. Lowden, who has been associated with Central church almost since it came into being and will review its history for the past sixty years.

Dr. David Swing, a great orator, thinker and leader of men, beloved for his simplicity and charm, in November, 1875, was on the point of leaving Chicago. There was city-wide protest and fifty of the prominent citizens entered into an agreement with Dr. Swing which was executed as follows:

"We, the undersigned, believing it to be desirable that David Swing shall remain in the city of Chicago and continue his public teachings in some central and commodious place, and having been informed that the annual expense of such arrangement can be brought within the sum of $15,000, including an acceptable salary to Dr. Swing, do hereby severally agree to pay the deficit, if any there shall be, arising from the conduct of such services, to the amount above named, for the term of two years."

50 Pledge $1,000 Each.

To this agreement the following names were appended each subscribing one thousand dollars:

Joseph Medill	Alfred Cowles
Eugene S. Pike	John S. Hunter
Clarence I. Peck	A. M. Pence
Franklin MacVeagh	Walter L. Peck
William Bross	Ferd. W. Peck
J. D. Webster	W. R. Page
Leonard Swett	Henry Potwin
Edmund Burke	George B. Carpenter
A. T. Hall	C. B. Holmes
Wirt Dexter	J. H. McVicker
N. K. Fairbank	H. A. Johnson
A. L. Chetlain	Perry H. Smith
A. T. Andrews	J. G. Shortall
Frank M. Blair	John B. Drake
C. W. Potter	Enos Johnson
F. M. Corby	A. N. Kellogg
J. V. LeMoyne	W. W. Kimball
Murry Nelson	O. F. Fuller
W. E. Doggett	Dr. Ralph N. Isham
Charles H. Lane	Samuel Bliss
H. W. Wilmarth	C. A. Spring Jr.
George Sturges	William S. Henderson
Henry I. Sheldon	P. C. Maynard
Robert Harris	E. L. Sheldon
John C. Dunlevy	V. C. Turner

The guarantors of this fund, however, were never called upon, as seats were rented for a sum amounting annually to about $15,000. The creed adopted by the church was short, simple, and evangelical. Without raising metaphysical distinctions, it dealt mainly with the practical side of the Christian life.

Dr. Hillis Second Pastor.

Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis, second pastor, was a Presbyterian minister in Evanston when he accepted the call to the Central church. He served for four years and then was called to the pulpit made famous by Henry Ward Beecher at Plymouth church in Brooklyn, N. Y.

Next to come was Dr. Frank W. Gunsaulus, one of the most brilliant men of his time, during whose pastorate the Central church widely extende its influence and became what many regarded as the most flourishing non-denominational church in America.

Dr. Gunsaulus was noted for his power to attract men to church, not alone for his oratory but for his personality, intellectual attainment, and deep interest in things not necessarily pertaining to religion.

"While nature has done much for Dr. Gunsaulus," said an Englishman who once attended a service, "it is easy to be seen that these natural gifts have been trained and disciplined by the best educational forces of your country, and together they have produced not alone a scholar and an orator, but a great religious leader whose message finds a ready response in the hearts of men."

How Institute Was Started.

It was in an eloquent sermon on the obligation of the rich to the masses that Armour Institute originated. When the service was over, Philip D. Armour, a member of the congregation, followed Dr. Gunsaulus to his study and asked:

"Doctor, do you believe in the CHURCH TO HOLD HYMN SERVICES IN HOLLYWOOD

For some time the church has needed new hymn books, but has lacked cash for making a purchase of them. At the suggestion of W. M. Hyler, one of the trustees, each family in the community was asked to buy one book and present it to the organization.

Bear Names of Donors.

Trustees L. H. Bishop and William E. Stubbe assisted Mr. Hyler in the successful "buy your own hymnal" campaign. The name of the donor of each book was printed in gold letters on the fly leaf.

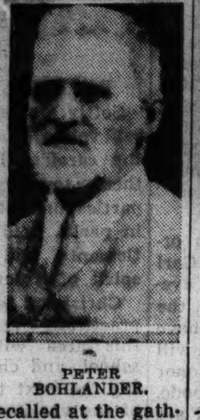
PIONEER FAMILY OF BOHLANDERS HOLDS REUNION

Triple Anniversary Leads to Celebration.

A recent family reunion at the home of Roy Bohlander, of Hillside, not only celebrated the golden wedding anniversary of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Bohlander, but the 72d birthday of his father and the 100th anniversary of the settling of the original Bohlander family in Proviso township. Mr. and Mrs. Peter Bohlander reside at 400 19th avenue, Maywood..

MRS. BOHLANDER.



PETER BOHLANDER.

Family history recalled at the gathering of 53 relatives of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Bohlander, revealed that Mr. Bohlander's great uncle settled in Proviso township after a long and perilous journey from Germany in 1835.

The home of Roy Bohlander, at which the triple celebration was held, has been the Bohlander homestead since civil war days.

Travel by Canal Boat.

Peter Bohlander's grandparents and their family landed in New York from Rhinefalz, Germany, after 56 days on the water, and proceeded by canal boat and ox cart through the wilderness to Proviso township.

There were few trails to follow, Indians were numerous, and the fact that the newcomers spoke a foreign tongue made the experience the more difficult. After a trip that lasted from spring to fall, the pioneer Bohlanders reached what is now Berkeley and purchased land for $1.25 an acre.

Move Homestead in 1863.

The elder Peter Bollanders farmed with the help of their son, Phillip, and gradually increased their acreage. Phillip later married Margaret Languath, and to them were born five children, John, Jacob, Kate, Helen and Peter.

In 1863, the family bought 195 acres of land on Harrison street near Wolf road where the present Bohlander homestead is located.

Members of the Phillip Bohlander family worked as a unit, some in the fields and others attending to household tasks. In due time, John became a merchant in Oak Park; Jacob, a president of Maywood, and finally a resident of Santa Ana, Cal.

Rise to Prominence.

Peter, the second, moved to Maywood. Gustave became a merchant in Melrose Park and president of the village. Amelia, Mrs. William Fraagenheim, became a resident of Maywood. Margaret, Mrs. Michael Young, moved to Melrose Park. Mrs. Elizabeth Castleman and Mrs. Caroline Coleman became residents of Maywood.

Following the death of his wife, Phillip Bohlander remarried and to this union were born four children, Phillip, George, Barbara [Mrs. John Dunbar], and Agnes [Mrs. Thomas McQueen].

Peter Bohlander, at 15, began work in a general store in River Forest, and later attended business college at what is now the site of the Boston store. His diploma was considered a prized possession in early days. He started a general store in Melrose Park when the community had only 30 houses and a population of less than 200. At 20, he was made village treasurer of Maywood.

PLANNING "SENIOR SNOW FLAKE SWIRL"

Transforming the school gymnasium into a winter wonderland, obtaining a rhythm-minded band, placing posters about the building, and, last but not least, selling tickets are all problems occupying seniors of Siena High school these days. The dance will be held Friday evening in the gym at 5600 Washington boulevard under the toe-tempting title of the "Senior Snow Flake Swirl." Class officers, deep in plans, are shown above. FAMED CENTRAL CHURCH IS SIXTY YEARS OLD TODAY

Illustrious Names Linked to Its History.

ideas you have just expresssed?"

"Most assuredly I do," was the answer.

"Would you carry them out if you had the means?"

"I would," replied Dr. Gunsaulus.

"Very well," rejoined Mr. Armour. "if you will give me five years of your time I will give you the money."

Dr. Gunsaulus has lasting memorials in the Art institute where his collections of pottery and textiles form notable and permanent exhibits. He was regarded among foremost connoisseurs in these fields. He also had intimate interests in farming.

But, due to his many interests and the preoccupation they imposed upon him, Dr. Gunsaulus soon became noted for "absent mindedness." He even, at times, forgot important speaking engagements, and on one occasion was "lost" for four hours in Minneapolis, with civic and commercial association officials on frantic hunts for their speaker.

Sense of Humor Vital.

The average church anthem, Dr. Gunsaulus once said, should be laughed out of existence. To prove his point he had a quartet sing the story of Jack and Jill before a ministers' association after the manner of the church anthem.

"There are some things that have to be laughed to death, and the anthem is one of them," Dr. Gunsaulus told the pastors after the uproarious laughter had subsided. "The sense of humor saved Lincoln and saved the Union. I pity men whose faces are made so of parchment that they cannot bear the smile of God."

When Dr. Gunsaulus resigned he recommended to the committee as his only possible successor Dr. Frederick F. Shannon.

Dr. Shannon was originally a Methodist, but early embraced Presbyterianism, which he forsook for the Dutch Reformed faith, returning later to the Presbyterian church with which he still holds personal affiliation. He fell into step with the illustrious succession of pulpit leaders, which consistently stressed the nondenominational character of the Central church, so that Dr. Shannon is today regarded as one of the outstanding preachers in America.

MISSIONARY IS GUEST SPEAKER AT CHURCH TODAY

Dr. Paul R. Reynolds, who for the last 14 years has been the representative of Winnetka Congregational church at Fenchow, North China, will speak this morning at the Grand Avenue Congregational church and this evening at Park Ridge. Dr. Reynolds, who is chairman of the committee on religious education for the whole North China mission, was born in Illinois. He is a graduate of Ellsworth college with a doctorate from the Chicago seminary. In 1921 he married Miss Charlotte Belknap of Oak Park, who at that time was director of Barbour house, New York City. They have three children, Robert, Paul, and Barbara.

TWO SUBURBAN COUPLES FETED ON GOLDEN YEAR

Linns and Triers Observe 50th Wedding Day.

The golden year rolled round last week for two west suburban couples who observed their 50th wedding anniversaries Monday. They are Mr. and Mrs. John P. Linn, 508 South Lincoln street, Hinsdale, and Mr. and Mrs. P. G. Trier, 814 Euclid avenue, Oak Park.

Old friends gathered for reminiscence and to enjoy music of other days during the Linns' celebration, which was held in the Mission Covenant church, Hinsdale. The program was arranged by fellow members of the congregation.

Included in the party were Mr. and Mrs. Linn's son, Alex Linn of Hinsdale, and their daughter, Mrs. C. A. Carlson of Downers Grove. The couple have four grandchildren, Genevieve L. Carlson, Olive M. Carlson, John Robert Linn, and Gwendolyn Linn.

Met in Hinsdale.

Mr. Linn came to America from Denmark in 1882 and settled in Hinsdale in the spring of 1883. His wife, the former Olivia Hemming, came from Sweden directly to Hinsdale in 1883, where they met and later married.

Although engaged in the livery business Mr. Linn was employed also by the village to serve in a double capacity, that of police officer and lamp lighter. From 1888 until 1899 he was the first and only law officer in Hinsdale. When electric lights were installed he resigned to enter the employ of a florist concern, where he remained for 27 years. Mrs. Linn, known locally for her proficiency in homemaking, was active in church circles.

Sons, daughters, and grandchildren of Mr. and Mrs. Trier all contributed entertainment at the reception held for the couple in their home. Mrs. Clara T. Cartar and Paul W. Trier sang, and piano solos were played by Josephine and Adolph Trier, grandchildren.

Married in Iowa.

Virginia and Marcella Druley, grandchildren, assisted in serving refreshments, and presiding at the coffee urns were Mrs. F. M. Rice, Mrs. Hugo Arnold, Mrs. Bessie Smith, and Mrs. William Allen.

Mr. Trier was born in Gardenville, N. Y., in 1860, and Mrs. Trier in Watford, Canada, in 1864. The couple were married in Des Moines, Ia. Other children living in Chicago and its suburbs are Mrs. Edna T. Junkins, Mrs. Marie Ruth, and Mrs. Lulu Druley. Mr. and Mrs. Trier have lived in Oak Park since 1908.

C. W. Kingstrand, president of the Forest Park Chamber of Commerce, recently appointed Walter C. Yunker, Walter W. Henson, Charles Heidelback, Joe Unger, and Edward Lane as members of a nominating committee for the election of directors to be held Dec. 27.

Five directors are to be chosen. Expiring this year are the terms of Frank S. Zimmerman, Ernest H. Witt, Erwin Thoendel, George Platt, and Leslie Hurwitz.

The committee will make five nominations and the members will be notified of their findings two weeks before the election. Any ten members can then make any other nominations they see fit.

ST. MEL SCHOOL FATHERS' CLUB TO HOLD SMOKER

$10,000 Scholarship Plan to Be Discussed.

A stag and smoker for the welcoming and enrolling of new members will be held by the Fathers and Friends' club of St. Mel High school tomorrow evening in the school gymnasium, Madison street and Kildare avenue.

According to John F. Tyrrell, president, a program of talking pictures and vocal and musical entertainment has been arranged. Members of the house committee aiding Mr. Tyrrell with plans for the evening are Burrell Williams, Thomas Kennedy, and James Oaky.

Probably one of the most important discussions to be held at the smoker will be on the establishment of a $10,000 scholarship fund. The idea was suggested by the Rev. Msgr. Francis A. Purcell, pastor of St. Mel church, at a recent meeting.

"We hope to raise money for this fund yearly until the goal has been reached," said Mr. Tyrrell. "Tentative plans to present a minstrel show early in 1936 have been discussed, and it has been suggested that the first scholarship be designated as the Msgr. P. J. McDonnell scholarship as a memorial to the late founder of St. Mel High school."

Other subjects to receive a "talking over" tomorrow evening will include obtaining the coöperation of local Legionnaires and veterans of other wars in presenting military programs and competition among the R. O. T. C., and student band and orchestra. Also the club is planning to aid the faculty and Mothers' auxiliary in presenting awards to the football team.

The Providence High school Mothers' club will meet at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon in the school auditorium, 115 South Central Park avenue. Following a brief business meeting, cards will be played. Mrs. Frank Curda, chairman, is being assisted by a group of junior and senior mothers. Mrs. Arthur J. Moore is president.

Dr. Paul Sahlins will speak on "Guiding the Adolescent" before the Crane Technical High school Parent-Teacher association at 1:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. Crane students will appear in a musical program under the direction of Lewys Thomas. A social hour will follow, during which refreshments will be served by Mrs. James Laurence, hospitality chairman, and her committee.

The Harrison High school P. T. A. will meet at 1:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in the social room of the school. A motion picture on safety will be shown under the auspices of the Keep Chicago Safe commission. Members will contribute gifts for Christmas baskets to the poor.

WEST END CLUB SHOWS SUBURBAN ARTISTS' WORK

Impressionism Lacking in Annual Exhibit.

Tradition and beauty met recently to walk arm in arm through the halls of the West End Woman's club house at 37 South Ashland boulevard, where west suburban artists have exhibited some of their finest products.

The current exhibition, which opened Dec. 6 and will continue until Jan. 9, contains work by 27 men and women affiliated with the Austin, Oak Park, and River Forest Art league and eight guest artists.

Predominating are oils and water colors, both dealing with still life. Some pieces of sculpture are to be seen as well as subjects in terra cotta, bronze, plaster, and composition by Mabel Landrum Torrey, who studied with Lorado Taft.

The absence of modernistic and impressionistic pictures is noticed in the exhibit. Mrs. William F. Conlon, art chairman of the club, supervised the display and arrangement.

West Side Project Would Be World's Finest.

A long visioned dream of a great medical center to be created on the near west side, complete with landscaped park, students' and nurses' homes, specialized hospitals, a hotel, and community health center, was brought one step nearer realization last week when the plans were reconstructed during an open forum held by the Metropolitan Housing council.

DR. BERNARD FANTUS.

Dr. Bernard Fantus, for 30 years a physician of the west side and professor in the University of Illinois medical school, outlined the project, which he has been studying for five years, before council members.

Representing a group of west side business and professional men, who have banded into an organization known as the Medical Park at Chicago, Dr. Fantus characterized the present group of hospitals, medical schools, and allied institutions on the near west side as "the greatest medical center in the world, with more patients, physicians, nurses, and students than in any similar area anywhere."

Calls Neighborhood Blighted.

"If an earthquake had struck the heart of Chicago no one wound question the need and value of rebuilding the area surrounding these outstanding medical facilities," he said. "Yet the fact is that general dilapidation of buildings has proceeded to a point where the neighborhood is as fatally blighted as if an earthquake actually had occurred. Reclamation of the community would, of course, have a vitally stimulating effect upon the surrounding blighted areas of the west side.

"Our organization has formulated a bill, now before the legislature, to create a medical park authority, with tustees to be appointed by the governor, the mayor, county commissioners, and the University of Illinois. The authority should have the power to plan for the entire area the proper space and location for institutions, residence facilities for stafs and students, and the all important parks and recreation areas."

Dr. Fantus stated that details were properly a matter for the medical park authority, but added that his organization has worked out a number of ideas for the district. In 1933 the group sought federal money to carry out the project and proposed a $15,000,000 condemnation fund for property in the area bounded by Oakley boulevard on the west, Jackson boulevard on the north, Ashland boulevard on the east, and Roosevelt road on the south.

It was suggested then that $8,350,000 be spent for the erection of necessary buildings, including institutions and commercial houses, which were expected to be self-liquidating projects. With these initial steps taken, the area would grow into a $100,000,000 medical center within fifty years, Dr. Fantus said.

Present plans call for a nurses' home, a hotel, ten student homes, an observation hospital, a therapeutics hospital, a contagious diseases hospital, a convalescent sanitarium, and a community health center.

"The nurses' home would accommodate 1,000 independent nurses now in the district, who would pay for their rooms and board," Dr. Fantus pointed out. "The hotel would provide quarters for physicians, professors, hospital officials and others. These would support the hotel, together with shops to be located on the first floors.

Fees Would Repay Costs.

"Students likewise would pay for their buildings and the hospital structures would be paid for by patients. A contagious diseases hospital has been included, inasmuch as the city has no such facilities for paying patients." Other buildings which have been considered for the future are a hotel for visitors, a building for civilian employés, a cancer research unit, botanical gardens, vitamin research laboratory, club building, hospital for mental patients, a medical museum, and establishments for various medical activities.

Active members of the Medical Park at Chicago are Dr. Frank J. Jirka, state department of health; Peter M. Kelly of the board of commissioners of Cook county, Walter C. Loague of the Goodwill Industries, John E. Millizen, University of Illinois; Dr. H. E. Quinn, Chicago Medical school; the Rev. R. G. Schell, representing Protestant churches; Nick Forte, representing a real estate group; Otto Berz of the West Town Chamber of Commerce, Frank Bilek, South Central Lions club; Dr. Charles Davison of the University hospital, and M. WPA FUNDS AID WESTERN SUBURB TO IMPROVE PARK

Soil Moving and Shelter House in Project.

Plans for improvements in Spring Rock park, Western Springs, whereby the government will contribute $29,000 for the project, recently were approved by the board of commissioners of the Western Springs park district, of which Herbert Cattell is president.

The WPA project, expected to start immediately, will provide work for 35 men, including laborers, carpenters, masons, and supervisory foremen.

The project will include a comfort station, a large shelter, and the removal of black top soil from peat bogs in the area to provide a rich top soil for the park, and will follow the original plan of Chance Hill, architect for the development since its inception.

The new shelter, 32 by 17 feet, will be built southwest of the automobile parking ground, and will be open on all sides with overhanging eaves so as to provide protection against sudden storms.

Members of the Western Springs park board are Herbert Cattell, president, Franklin Burns, Herbert A. Brand, Mrs. Frank Somers, and A. K. Leupold.

'MAIL YOUR GIFTS EARLY,' IS PLEA OF POSTMASTERS

"Mail early for delivery before Christmas day," is again the slogan of west suburban postmasters to their patrons. Information from Washington to the local offices warns that during the holiday season the volume of mail increases approximately 200 per cent, and that it would be a physical impossibility to handle the great mass of mail matter efficiently and promptly within a few days.

Patrons are urged to do their Christmas shopping so as to enable them to mail gifts, greetings, and letters at least a week or ten days before Christmas,

Announcement has been made that there will be no mail delivery on Christmas day.

CICERO STUDIES PLAN TO PROVIDE PARKING AREAS

Would Use Waste Space Near Intersections.

A plan for town-wide parking areas to provide space for 4,000 cars at the intersections of business streets is now pending before the Cicero board of trustees, according to an announcement made last week by the Cicero Association of Commerce, which originated and is sponsoring the project.

The association is urging the widening of pavement of all streets crossing carlines or business thoroughfares to within seven feet of the lot lines for a distance back from the business street of about 125 feet.

In the plan the newly paved and widened portion of the side streets would be set aside for diagonal parking at all four sides, thus affording parking space for 60 automobiles at each intersection.

Now Used for Parking.

"Parkways on the side street at business corners are in disuse with few exceptions, even as grass plots," said Thomas M. Filas, executive secretary of the association. "They are often unpaved and become available for no better purpose than to park automobiles outside of trafic lines on the business and side resident streets. These parkways are public property, owned and controled by the municipality and subject to town legislation as to their use and disposition.

"A state highway should properly remain open for through trafic. An open highway through a business center is a greater inducement to the passing motorist to stop and shop, when an attractive window display or advertisment may catch the eye. Arranging parking space at each street intersection, without delay or exception, will provide parking space for 4,000 cars additional to the present single lane parking permitted.

Aid to Safer Driving.

"Provision for additional parking space is an improvement in town planning and a safety measure as well as a business producer," continued Mr. Filas. "The widened intersections will afford a clearer view for both the motorist and pedestrian. They will reduce short runs of cars from block to block, clear the business street and afford storekeepers the possibility of added sales."

Louis Mongrieg, town engineer, was recently directed by the Cicero committee on streets and alleys to prepare a survey of parking space available under the plan proposed and to estimate the cost of such work for consideration and recommendation by the committee.

The Cicero Association of Commerce is urging immediate consideration of the engineer's estimates and completion of the project not later than early spring.

OAK PK. CAMERA CLUB OBSERVES FIRST BIRTHDAY

The Oak Park Camera club of 75 members recently celebrated its first birthday in the club's new permanent quarters in the Forsythe building, and on Tuesday and Wednesday nights of this week will be host to the public. Visitors will be given an opportunity to visit the new clubrooms and view some of the work by club members.

In planning weekly programs, the club has heard a group of speakers including H. K. Shigeta, on "Composition"; Richard Stafford, on "Color Registration"; W. A. Karmen, on "Portrait Lighting"; S. A. Campbell, on "Life in the North Woods," and E. W. Lowe, on "Fine Grain Developers."

The salon committee, headed by Gilbert Jones, is making plans for a show to be held early in February. Tomorrow night a print criticism program will be conducted by a committee from the Fort Dearborn Camera club.

Officers of the club are E. L. Shackley, president; Gilman Lane, vice president; C. H. Auten, recording secretary; Miss Lillian Bondurant, corresponding secretary; Arthur Jacobs, treasurer, and C. L. Neumeister, chairman of the membership committee.

MORTON JUNIOR COLLEGE ALUMNI TO DANCE DEC. 27

The association had its beginning in 1926 with 15 members and Joseph Zikmund as president. In 1932 the group merged with the Post-Graduate club and elected Harold Schleitweiler, president. The association now has 300 members.

Assisting the officers in planning what is expected to be the biggest dance in the history of the association are Jerry Francik, general chairman; Zorka Vovcheff, invitations; Raymond Kure, publicity, and John Zikmund, tickets.

Members of the ticket committee are Jerry Francik, Irvin Snorek, Doris Choice, Lillian Yunek, James Cerny, Lawrence Bartels, Richard Seibert, and George Stancl.

BUSINESS CLUB WOMEN TO HAVE AMATEUR HOUR

Program to Be Complete Except Broadcasting.

With amateur hours sweeping the radio networks, the west side's own business women, not to be outdone, will display their talents in the line of music, comedy and drama tomorrow evening in a replica of radio's latest craze, to be complete in almost every detail with the exception of actual broadcasting.

MRS. BERTHA MacLEOD.

Presiding over that dainty instrument, the gong, will be a "Major Bowes," whose performance is expected to outamateur the most hopeful aspirant. Appearing as guest star of the evening will be "Fannie Brice," who will lend a sturdy shoulder to the quaking line of nail biting talent.

Those who will shed their work-a-day personalities are members of the West Area Business and Professional Women's club. The occasion is the annual president's Christmas party, which will open with a dinner at 6:30 o'clock in the Washington Pine hotel, 5511 Washington boulevard. Mrs. Bertha MacLeod heads the organization.

Amid a holiday setting members will go before the "mike," some of them in costume, to display their particular talents, which are expected to range from tap dancing to one-act plays. Those who fail to enter into the carnival mood will have a penalty imposed upon them.

The "major" will be impersonated by Miss Alma Rasmussen. Mrs. Clara Kelley will portray the guest comedienne. Judgment will be passed upon non-participating members by Mrs. Jessica Slatis. An additional rule of the evening is that those who come in costume must act in character throughout the party.

A decorated tree, the presence of Santa Claus, an interchange of gifts, and the singing of Christmas carols under the direction of Mrs. Bessie Ryan will add to the gaiety of the occasion.

According to Miss Virginia E. Russell, club publicity chairman, a more serious note will be struck by contributions of clothing, canned food and other goods, which will be distributed by the Federated Council of Business and Professional Women Christmas week. Miss Martha Seewer will give an account of her Carribbean cruise taken last spring.

MAYWOOD STAGE GROUP WILL GIVE 2 ONE ACT PLAYS

The Maywood Players will hold open house tomorrow night at the Washington School auditorium in the western suburb, and will present two one-act plays.

Miss Charlotte Andermann will direct "Op-o'-Me-Thumb" with a cast consisting of Isabelle Hammond, Lois Masek, Charlotte Andermann, Elizabeth Riendeau, Mary Lees, and Charles Baker.

Members of the cast of "Christopher's Candle," directed by Miss Gladys Andrews, are Arlene DeAno, Althea Vanderburg, Earl Wilson, Ruth Benson, Lola Carsen, Brad Wakeman, Mildred Law, and Agnes Amling.

Harold Hammond, president of the Players, will be master of ceremonies. Music will be featured. Mrs. Robert Guill, chairman of the executive committee, will have charge of the program.

PREDICTIONS OF A DIAL TWISTER; ALSO PET PEEVES

Personal Prejudices and Choices Revealed.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Predictions:

That "Lights Out," Billy [Last Roundup] Hill's new song, will become even more popular than the radio series by that same name which, however, it in no way resembles. You will hear it plenty on the air. Jack Hylton did a nifty arrangement of it last Sunday.

WALTER TETLEY.

That Radio listeners won't like it if Hylton's publicists continue to announce that he will play "Albert and the Lion" again—and then Hylton fails to do it.

That Bing Crosby's new series with Bob Burns, Jimmie Dorsey's orchestra and a lot of guest entertainers will be a smash hit.

That Chicago listening habits are due to some revision since all major New York programs will be coming in one hour later when the city switches to eastern standard time next March.

That NBC will not pick up any Christmas recorded programs from Great Britain as last year, which permitted Australian youngsters to pipe about spring mornings under the Southern Cross when it was really midnight there.

That Don Ameche's swell singing and fine speaking voice will take him far in the movies—if he gets his chance, as he expects, next spring.

That Edward Davies will some day get a big league break on the air. Like Conrad Thibault and Nelson Eddy, he has a baritone voice that's perfectly suited for radio.

That Jack Major will one day go over better spotted in a big variety program than he does as a one man show nowadays. At that he does a good single.

The Fly in the Ointment.

Personal pet peeves:

Those sponsored news flashes sandwiched in between programs on WBBM: "Crusading editor slain. Chew smearpaint gum; the flavor lasts."

The perpetual insistence that you come out to dance, see the world's finest adagio dancers or magicians on pickups from ballrooms and hotel spots. They do everything nowadays but sell you a room on programs that are supposedly noncommercial.

The shirt tail announcements local NBC stations have been putting on lately all starting "Of unusual interest is the Sophie Zilch recital on this station at this hour tomorrow." Also: "That was Donald McGibeny! Did you hear him?" This one reminds you of the old wheeze, "If you don't get this letter, let me know right away."

Announcers Sometimes Annoy.

Smart alec or smug announcers. In the first class one might well include John B. Kennedy and Ted Husing. The list of the smug lads, those fellows who have that air that listeners must be hanging on every word they say, is too long to enumerate.

Those pompous masters of overstatement also get under the skin. Their tremendous oral fanfare leads up to nothing more important than a presentation of Elmer Flute playing the Peanut Vendor from the Peewee café.

The current insistence that everything advertised on the air from floor wax to hash will make the ideal Christmas present.

Eddie and Fannie's rhymed commercial lines.

Praise for These.

Personal recommendations:

Walter Tetley's impudence on the Fred Allen show.

Those helpful motoring suggestions on the G. M. Symphony hour.

The South American rhythms of José Manzaneres. Note the effectiveness of the simple, straightforward commercials on this and other Ford programs.

The dance orchestras of W-G-N. No other stations or network has anything comparable to this lineup: Kemp, Garber, Weeks, Heidt, Fields, Kyser, Sanders, Kavelin, and Reichman.

Seymour Simon's ingratiating microphone manner.

Ralph Ginsburgh's velvet melodies.

Andre Kostelanetz arrangements.

The New York Philharmonic's tribute to Sibelius.

Quin Ryan to Face Quiz at Marriage Bureau

Mary McPhail, one of the girls from the Cook county marriage license bureau, who has been assisting Quin Ryan in making the W-G-N broadcasts from the county building each Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, will turn the tables on the broadcaster tomorrow and interview him on the program. Mr. Ryan has been interviewing couples applying for licenses for the last several weeks, asking each couple several questions. Now Miss McPhail will question Quin about his courtship and married life.

Doring Sisters Will Be Guests on 'House Party'

TOURS OF W-G-N STUDIOS MADE AT 10, 4 DAILY

More than 15,000 persons attended broadcasts in Studio 1 of the new W-G-N Radio Studio building during the month of November. Public broadcasts are presented each evening execpt Saturdays and the 588 seat studio has had capacity or near capacity audiences for each of the programs. A tour department for the new studio was established during November and more than 1,500 persons took advantage of these tours to see the studios and various other interesting rooms in the beautiful new building. Tours are conducted every day of the week from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m. and two special guides conduct the tours.

Charles P. Taft to Be Sunday Club's Speaker

Charles P. Taft, son of the former President, will be the guest speaker on the Sunday Evening Club service to be broadcast over W-G-N tonight at 8:30 o'clock. The service will be conducted by Clifford W. Barnes.

KAY RETURNS TO GLOOMDODGERS PROGRAM TODAY

Egbert Van Alstyne, singer, pianist and composer of one of the most famous song hits ever written—"In the Shade of the Old Apple Tree"—will be featured with Herbie Kay and his orchestra on the "Gloom Dodgers" broadcast over WBBM from 9:35 to 11:30 a. m. today. Shirley Lloyd, blues singer, and the Bennett Sisters, vocal trio, will also participate in the broadcast which celebrates the return of Herbie Kay and his band to this Sunday morning program.

"We Are Four" Will Be Heard at Earlier Hour

"We Are Four," dramatic serial, will be heard at a new hour over W-G-N beginning tomorrow. The show has been renewed by its sponsors for six months, but instead of being heard at 11 a. m. it will be presented at 9:15 a. m.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—
Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go
The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.
Laxatives are only makeshifts. A mere bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

FIRE PREVENTION LEAGUE OF HIGH SCHOOLS MEETS

Elects Officers and Plans Safety at Christmas.

Discussion of "Fire Prevention at Christmas Time" featured a meeting of the recently organized Fire Prevention League of the Chicago High school yesterday at the offices of the Chicago Association of Commerce, 1 North La Salle street.

Two addresses, by Richard E. Vernor, manager of the Fire Prevention department of the Western Actuarial bureau, and Cadet Captain Gus Carallas, student fire marshal of Austin High school, were given.

The league includes one member from each of the 37 high schools in the city and was organized by the Association of Commerce with the cooperation of the Board of Education. It is being promoted "as a practical laboratory in citizenship and leadership training for students," Frank C. McAuliffe, chief of the Chicago Fire Insurance patrols, chairman, says. Ethel Foster is director of the league.

Officers Are Named.

The action of the leageu is voluntary, all action being approved by the association. Its officers elected recently are: Edmund Berent, Schurz, fire commissioner; Rudolph Zoellner, Roosevelt, chief fire marshal; Roy Welch, Hyde Park, first division marshal and secretary, and Walter Estes, Marshall, second division marshal.

The principal of each high school selects the student to act as fire marshal. This student then conducts fire drills in his school and receives a badge signifying his membership in the league.

A fire prevention poster contest is being conducted in the Chicago high schools. The posters must be handed in early in January and will be exhibited at Mandel Brothers department store. The two best will be entered in a national contest.

Members of the league and the schools they represent are: Karl Stodden, Amundsen; Gus Carallas, Austin; Major Gordon Areen, Bowen; Edwin Falloon, Calumet; Harry Gilbert, Crane Tech; Jack Parker, Englewood; Edward Bartel, Farragut; Douglas Coole, Fenger; Miss Carol Dostal, probably the only girl fire marshal in the country, Flower Tech; Clarence Brunson, Foreman.

Other School Marshals.

—St. Mel—

Five hundred rifles have been received by the Reserve Officers Training corps of St. Mel High school and are being oiled and cleaned preparatory to their installation in the new racks lining the wall of the school gym. The instructor, Sergt. Edmund T. McCann, U. S. A., expects the addition of the .30 caliber rifles to the equipment to accelerate the improvement of the new unit.

Cadet Chester Madolny has been promoted to the rank of captain to fill a vacancy created by the recent promotion of Maj. Charles Krause to lieutenant colonel, second in command.

Nine members of the R. O. T. C. will take part in a play to be given by the dramatic club Dec. 26 and 27. Col. Kogstad and Capt. R. H. Wienke are taking leading rôles in the play, a three act comedy, "The Bride." A special detail of 10 cadets will act as ushers under the command of Lieut. Col. Krause.

Fifty members of the corps, accompanied by Sergt. McCann, will make a tour of THE TRIBUNE plant Wednesday.

Dearborn D.A.R. Chapter to Study 'Old Chicago Trails'

A study of "Old Chicago Trails" will be made by members of General Henry Dearborn chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, under the direction of Mrs. Eugene W. Rogers, 5850 Race avenue, beginning at 10:30 o'clock Tuesday morning in the woman's club bureau of Mandel's department store. The group will meet the first and third Tuesdays of each month. Mrs. Frederick C. Dallach of La Grange, is regent of the chapter.

Featuring the hectic adventures of two wealthy bachelors, a three act comedy, "The Bride," will be given by the St. Mel High school dramatic club on Dec. 26 and 27 at the school auditorium, 4319 West Washington boulevard. Miss Mary A. Tynan is directing the all-male cast, which includes four veteran players.

Arthur Kogstad, Jack Crowder, Joseph Prohaska, and Frank Byrne are the four experienced actors. Two of the rôles will be presented by different students, one on each night, and Prohaska is playing two parts.

Kogstad, playing the part of Mortimer Travers, one of the bachelors, at the Friday performance, presented by Frank Byrne Thursday, becomes enmeshed in a plot revolving around the theft of valuable jewels and the intrigue of a would-be bride and his maidenly aunt. The aunt, Miss Henrietta Travers, will be played by Edward Cooney at the Thursday performance and by Jerome Nerger on Friday.

Marie Duquesne, the bride, played by Jack Crowder, becomes suspected for a while of the theft of the jewels which were stolen by James, the butler, the rôle of James Murphy. The other bachelor, Wilson Travers, by Eugene Boyd, and Dr. Sandorss, by Prohaska, further mess up the situation of the bride by declaring her mentally unbalanced.

The rest of the characters include Officer O'Brien, also played by Prohaska; Isaac Walton Reginald Pelham, by Richard Wienke, and Inspector Gillson, Jerome Marren. A detail of cadets will serve as ushers at both performances.

WILD DUCKS GET DRUNK AFTER BIG STILL IS RAIDED

ST. CATHARINES, Ont.—As wild ducks showed the effects of imbibing from a creek in which police dumped 8,000 gallons of mash recently, six men arrested on a Thorold township farm in connection with a four-vat still seizure, were arraigned in court. Royal Canadian mounted police, aided by officers of Thorold town and township, combined for the raid which netted the still equipment, mash and 35 gallons of allegedly illicit alcohol.

While police were dismantling the still, Constable E. R. Rehfield of the R. C. M. P. suffered an injury to his left leg when a small steam boiler burst. He also was spattered with hot mash. Police are holding the parts of the still as evidence. They dumped the mash in a creek running by the barn on the farm. Many ducks were observed later, showing the effects of consuming alcohol.

SEE CHAPPED SKIN Melt INTO SMOOTHEST TEXTURE

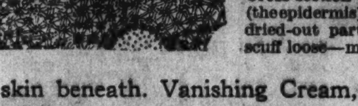
IMAGINE YOURSELF—One minute with a dry, chapped skin that catches powder, looks scratchy . . . The next minute, skin so smooth you can't see or feel a single rough place!

That's exactly how fast a keratolytic cream softens your skin.

That chapped skin you feel is just on top. It's a layer of dried-out particles which are always scuffing loose—"aching" to come off entirely. But they keep on clinging, getting harsher, until you take steps to—MELT THEM OFF!

Then you see silky texture take the place of chapped skin—instantly. A leading dermatologist tells how to bring this about.

He says: "Surface skin is constantly drying out—thickening with coarse horny cells. Exposure to cold and winds hastens this condition. When a keratolytic cream (Vanishing Cream) is applied, these dried-out cells melt away, revealing the fresh smooth



Cross-section of outer skin (the epidermis) showing how dried-out particles on top scuff loose—make it rough.

That's why Pond's Vanishing Cream is so grand for rough, chapped skin—so perfect a powder base! In an instant, it brings out your own young skin—exquisitely smooth and completely "unchapped"—now you are ready for make-up.

Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr.

beautiful young Society leader, says: "Pond's Vanishing Cream keeps my skin from drying out. I use it twice a day to soften my skin and hold powder smooth."

For a smooth make-up—Never put on powder or rouge without first smoothing away every last speck of roughness with Pond's Vanishing Cream. Now your skin is so satiny—powder goes on evenly, without once catching or flaking. And even bitter-cold winds can't cause new chappings!

Overnight for lasting softness—Every night after cleansing, smooth on Pond's Vanishing Cream. While you sleep, it makes your skin softer and softer. Your face is cool, free of shine and this greaseless cream is not smearing the pillowcase. In the morning, your skin surprises you—so fresh and baby-soft!

Winnie Winkle Style Story by Branner

After Winnie had bought new clothes for the poor little child and her mother, and a doll for the girl, she gave them money for food. Then Winnie went home and changed her dress.

When she came out again she was weeping softly. True, she was glad to have made a poor family happy, but now there was no money left to buy Perry's Christmas bicycle.

While she walked along sadly, wondering what she would do next, Winnie was startled by a voice saying—"Miss Winkle, do you believe in Santa Claus?"

Turning, she saw Santa, standing on the curb, smiling at her.

Story concluded next week...

Horse Raising Has Comeback; See Balance with Motordom

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

Ten years ago the prediction was freely made that America was headed for a horseless age. Today many of those who made such predictions are reported to be complaining because they must pay from $350 to $500 for a pair of good work mares. A. B. Hancock of Paris, Ky., president of the Horse and Mule Association of America, says that the industry now is in a prosperous condition, enjoying prices from 25 to 40 per cent higher than two years ago and having a broad demand for all available animals.

From many sources come indications that the horse and mule are gaining ground. Government figures show that colt production has been definitly increasing since 1933. Animal husbandry authorities do not consider the present increased interest in horse breeding as a definite reaction against the use of trucks and tractors, but, rather, as an indication that the country is arriving at a logical balance between its horse and mechanical power needs. They agree that trucks have pretty definitly replaced the horse on the highways, but they are equally certain that horses and mules still are needed to furnish a large portion of the nation's farm power.

All Time Peak in 1920.

The all time peak in horse and mule numbers in this country was reached in 1920 when more than 25,000,000 were to be found on farms and an additional 2,000,000 in cities. Colt production began to decline in 1918, but total numbers continued to increase for two years. Latest government figures show a farm horse and mule population of 17,162,000, with an additional half million in the cities.

While increases in colt production during the last three years have not yet offset the death rate among aged animals, it seems probable that the bottom of the downward trend in combined numbers of horses and mules of all ages will be reached in 1936, federal reports say. The low point in the number of horses and mules of working age probably will not occur until at least two years later, however.

Revival of interest in horse breeding is indicated in practically every middle western state, and agricultural colleges are advising farmers to increase their production of colts wherever possible, not only to furnish their own needs but as a valuable source of income.

Specialist Views the Situation.

"Rising horse prices during the last few years have been caused chiefly by the decreasing numbers and the added demand for work horses beginning two or three years ago. The decrease in numbers came about as a result of high priced feed and the replacement of horses and mules by tractors and trucks.

"During recent years, however, feed prices have been low, making the horse a cheaper source of power than the tractor on many farms. This became more important as cash incomes of farmers decreased, since horses could be maintained with a small cash outlay. Now, horses are in demand and the price is good."

Harry Linn, field representative of the Iowa Horse and Mule Breeders' association, advises Iowa farmers to produce all the colts possible during the next several years. He emphasizes the fact that the number of horses in Iowa declined 9,000 head during 1934, despite an importation of 22,000 during that time and an increase of 62 per cent in colt production over the previous year.

More Colts in Wisconsin.

Reports from the Wisconsin College of Agriculture say that colt production began to increase in that state three years ago with the result that the total horse numbers in the state are increasing. Horses are bringing the best prices in Wisconsin this year that have been paid since 1928. In addition to the increasing number of foals, horse shipments into the state have shown a marked increase during the past year.

A. L. Harvey, animal husbandry authority of the Minnesota College of Agriculture, recently commented:

"Though Minnesota is rightly considered a leading dairy state, the total value of horses on Gopher state farms exceeds the total value of milch cows and hefers by more than $12,000,000. The combined total value of sheep and hogs in Minnesota is just a little over one-third the total value of horses.

"In spite of the fact that automobiles and tractors have replaced a great many horses during the last 15 years, Minnesota farmers have continued to use and raise horses, and as a result are fairly well supplied with horses now when there is a shortage of draft animals elsewhere in the United States.

Prices Reveal the Trend.

"Horses are bringing higher prices in Minnesota this year than at any time since the world war. Prices will undoubtedly stay up until horse breeders are able to raise enough colts to provide and maintain adequate replacements."

The increased interest in horse production is not confined to draft animals nor to the corn belt region. Wayne Dinsmore, secretary of the Horse and Mule Association of America, reports a like increase in popularity of riding horses for sport and recreation. He also finds that the demand for mules has been strong in the south for the last two seasons, with prices so high that many farmers have purchased mares for work and mule production.

"When farmers everywhere begin to raise foals, as they are doing now," Mr. Dinsmore said, "it will not take long to catch up. We have more than five million mares of breeding age. If even three million of them were bred, we would have around one and one-half million foals, or about as many as we had in 1919. It will not be long until we do have them."

BUSINESS EXECUTIVE.

A corporation whose business is more profitable now than ever before, justifying national expansion, directed by executives so well known that you can easily investigate them through your bank, now find that the Chicago market outlets justify a local branch installation.

For unavoidable reasons over which we have no control we are undecided about the man we intended to use in this territory. We prefer a resident man, but it is difficult here to describe his qualifications. However, the basic requirements are intelligent industry and unquestionable integrity, nothing technical is involved.

Early returns should net the individual selected $1,000 per month which should be substantially increased from month to month.

Following a proven mutually profitable policy we permit our branch executives to own control of our branch installations, which to the right man, will require a minimum investment of $5,000 plus an agreement to invest a certain percentage of net profit in further expansion.

Do not answer this advertisement or call it to the attention of your friends if above cannot be clearly established.

Write, covering fully, to Suite 4612, 70 Pine-st., New York, and if interested we will arrange for you to come to New York at our expense.

STATE SALES MANAGERS—REORGANIZAtion of a national sales corporation requires a few additional executives. Must have extensive sales experience [direct preferred] and able to invest modest sum in merchandise later after proving deal at no risk. HYGIENIC CORPORATION OF AMERICA. 210 W. 7th-st., Los Angeles, Cal.

MEN—WITH CARS AND SMALL CAPITAL regardless of where you live answer this ad. No selling, no previous exper. necessary. Automotive dealers pay for our merchandise as they sell it. You make collections and replace stock as sold. Your comm. even as part time workers adds $50 weekly to present income. Write today for full particulars. Address B S 381, Tribune.

Women's Features

Lounging Ensembles Achieve a Story Book Glamor

By RHEA SEEGER.

DECORATIVE lounging clothes this year rival the most romantic and glamorous evening gowns. Picturesque fabrics, soft, glowing, and flattering colors, exquisite, long, clinging draperies, picture book princess sleeves, and fabulously beautiful belts, and sashes . . . these make the most beautiful creations just unpacked. There are shimmering velvets, gleaming satins, and sparkling brocades.

And nearly all of these gowns are destined for bright colored Christmas boxes!

So this page is just as much for the education of the masculine shoppers as it is for the appreciative feminine buyers. Nothing means so much to any woman, no matter how and where she lives, as a luxurious house or hostess gown, a frivolously beautiful negligee, or exquisitely fashioned lingerie . . . unpractical and fragile things that come just once a year.

Lingerie Soft as a Cloud.

It sounds rather exaggerated, but the Christmas collections of such highly pictorial lounging apparel are lovelier than ever before. Nothing is spectacular, nothing is extreme, everything has been cut and sewn and draped to do the most for the wearer. Long, long trailing draperies will magically transform the dullest soul into a ravishing picture. Swishing taffeta affairs will make a siren of the tailor-made efficiency expert who grubs all day in an office in sturdy tweeds and sensible footgear. And these and other materials and subtle combines of color make even lovely ladies more alluring. Such ornamental and soul satisfying stuff is really the essence of a successful Christmas. Instead of utilitarian, drab and dreary looking essentials give any of these utterly feminine creations.

You can find lingerie as soft as a cloud, fastened together with cobweb laces and dozens of microscopic stitches. They are enchanting pieces that shriek of French origin, but have unbelievably low price tickets. You can find glowing new colors. One of these is Romance red, unquestionably the most flattering color ever mixed in a dye pot. You can find dramatic black velvet contrasted with frosty silver lame. You can find Romance red ninon lingerie with a lovely, new, rosy pink shade as a perfect complement.

You'll see padded velvet robes with unusual quilted patterns. These are lined with rosy pink satin. You'll find luscious wash velvet nightgowns that can be matched with bed jackets trimmed with either ostrich feathers or marabou . . . in ivory white, in cherub blue, in rosy pink, even in Romance red and black. But shop while the collections are new and complete.

Alencon Lace a Favorite.

Hunting Season Makes Special Tasks for Cook

These Tips Aid Harassed Housewife Confronted with Game from Wilds.

By Mary Meade.

WHEN the mighty hunter returns from the kill, swaggering in with a load of game, do you ever feel a bit apprehensive about methods of cleaning or cooking the proof of his prowess? Most of us need a few pointers occasionally on preparing game, since we're likely to forget between hunting seasons.

If your nimrod comes home with a deer or, more likely, just a leg of venison, you'll want to brush up on the method of roasting it or on broiling venison steaks. Wild duck requires a little special attention, too, and you may be lucky enough to think about partridge, quail, and pheasant. You'll need a good recipe for stuffing, perhaps one made with wild rice, and you may want to review the "what-to-do" of rabbits and squirrels.

Here are a few of the high spots. With them firmly in mind you ought to be able to convince the chestiest male that you not only think he's a whiz with his little bow and arrow, but that you know how to cook his game with the tenderest of consideration for its flavor and superior quality.

Since venison is the most impressive likelihood, let's begin with that. [It's pretty certain he won't surprise you with a bear!] First, there's the question of roasting it, and then broiling.

ROAST LEG OF VENISON.

Wipe the venison with a damp cloth and strip off the dry skin. Lard the lean side with strips of fat pork, drawing them through with a larding needle. Rub the whole piece with softened butter, then sprinkle with salt and pepper and dredge with flour. Lay the venison leg in a rack in an open roasting pan and roast in a moderate oven, allowing about ten minutes for each pound. The pan need not be covered, nor the roast basted. Serve with a gravy made from the drippings and with a tart jelly.

BROILED VENISON.

Wipe the steaks with a damp cloth and lay on a broiler rack about three inches away from the heat, after first preheating the broiler to 500 degrees F. Broil until well browned on one side, season that side, and turn. Finish the broiling without further turning. The time is about the same as for beef steak. If the steak is from one and one-half to two inches thick it will require from twenty-five to thirty minutes to be broiled medium rare.

Cooking Editor Tells How to Roast Various Game Birds.

ROAST WILD DUCK.

Clip the wing tips and remove all coarse guard feathers, leaving the bird covered with down. Dip in melted paraffin or paint with a paraffin-dipped cloth, cool, and peel off paraffin, down, and pin feathers. Clean thoroughly. If you like a less gamey taste than the original flavor soak the bird for two or three hours in a fairly strong salt solution, to which a little soda has been added, and then rinse before cooking. Stuff and truss the bird, or fill the cavity with a large onion and peeled apple. Place strips of bacon across the breast and roast at 325 degrees F. until tender. Young ducks will roast in one and one-half hours, while older ones require from thirty to forty-five minutes longer.

Partridge, quail, and pheasant may be stuffed and roasted, just as are the ducks. If the first two are young you may want to split them and broil them — ten minutes for quail and thirty to forty minutes for partridge.

The same birds may be cut into serving pieces, dredged with seasoning and flour, and browned in hot fat. When browned, add a little milk or water, cover the skillet, and finish the cooking by baking until tender.

Grouse are even dryer than the other game birds and need to be completely covered with strips of bacon before roasting.

And now for that wild rice stuffing. It's equally well suited to any of the game birds.

WILD RICE STUFFING FOR GAME

4 cups cooked wild rice
3 tablespoons melted butter
1 teaspoon minced onion
¾ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon sage
½ teaspoon thyme
⅛ teaspoon pepper

Blend the ingredients and pile lightly into the cavity of any wild game. Stitch the openings and roast.

There are many possibilities with rabbit and squirrel. We've selected these particular suggestions for a beginning, and with the lot we're including a pet recipe for that poem of poems, a good pigeon pie!

ROAST RABBIT.

Skin and clean the rabbit carefully. Open it down the breast and finish cleaning, saving the edible giblets and removing as much of the fat as possible, since it is that which contributes the strong flavor which many people dislike. Let the split rabbit lie in cold, slightly salted water for two hours and then parboil in fresh water to cover for fifteen minutes. Drain from the water and stuff with pork sausage seasoned with salt, pepper, onion, and sage. Sew up opening, place in a baking pan, and roast for one and one-half to two hours in a moderate oven, basting occasionally.

SOUTHERN BRAISED RABBIT

2 rabbits
1½ quarts water
1½ tablespoons salt
Salt, pepper, flour
½ pound sliced bacon
1 cup milk

Cut the rabbits into pieces of convenient size for serving. Soak in the salted water for two hours, then drain and dry. Sprinkle with salt and pepper, dredge with flour, and brown in the fat left from cooking the bacon, cut in bits. Cook slowly, covered, in the skillet, for one hour, turning to cook and brown both sides. Now pour on the milk and continue cooking for another hour, or until tender.

BRUNSWICK STEW.

Cut gray squirrels into pieces. Bring two quarts of water, slightly salted, to a boil, and add to it the pieces of squirrel. Add a small onion, diced; a cup of dried lima beans, a cup of canned tomatoes, and a quarter pound of salt pork, finely chopped. Cover closely and simmer for two hours, stirring occasionally. Then add five potatoes, cubed; two cups of canned corn, and simmer until the potatoes are tender. Fifteen minutes before serving, thicken with a mixture of one tablespoon of butter and one and one-half tablespoons of flour, season to taste, and stir until the gravy is smooth and slightly thickened.

PIGEON PIE.

Dress and clean six pigeons. Truss, and brown in salt pork fat until the surfaces are well browned, turning frequently. Place the birds in a kettle, add one and one-half cups of boiling water, one-quarter teaspoon peppercorns, one small onion, one carrot, sliced; two sprigs of parsley, and two celery stalks, diced. Simmer until tender, about three hours. Remove the pigeons, strain the liquor, and thicken it with three tablespoons of flour which has been blended with a like amount of butter. Reheat the pigeons in the sauce, place in a heated casserole, and cover with a previously baked pastry top, or with baked hot biscuits.

HOME MADE PRESERVES IDEAL GIFTS

Homemade Christmas gifts always are popular—knitted and crocheted things and, of course, jellies, jams, and marmalades. Put these up in those attractive odds and ends of crockery and glassware you've been saving because they were entirely too pretty to throw away, wrap them gayly, and the result is a delightful lot of inexpensive and distinctive gifts. If your pantry seems a bit bare of summer preserves and jellies, dried fruits and fruit juices may be quickly transformed with the use of commercial fruit pectin. You'll find these as delectable as the pantry supply.

Paris Parades Sunny Styles for Resorts

New Skirts Bear a Suspicious Resemblance to the "Hobble" Species.

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS.—[Special.]—While icy winds chase up and down the Rue de la Paix, and the garde mobile chase agitating communists off the Place de l'Opera, slim mannequins parade sunshine clothes in the dressmaker salons. Neat, checkered gingham suits, dashing cadet coats of flannel, bold toreador evening suits, silk dresses printed with notes of music and fastened with perfumed buttons, and plaited frocks with flaming bouquets of beaded flowers tucked through their belts broadcast new styles for spring.

The buyers snarl and bite their finger nails over a new silhouette that has a skirt so narrow the mannequin walks like a Japanese geisha girl, and oldtimers whisper "hobble skirt" behind their programs. Schiaparelli startles the world with a "sail dress" with one of these skirts so narrow you mince along in it and a flaring sail of an apron tunic over it, just to the knees.

Mainbocher, au contraire, shows dresses with skirts that flow outward at the back and break the record for kindness to the ample figure. He makes suits with hip length jackets that have full length, floating panels at the back and make a woman look as graceful as if she were wearing an evening gown. Molyneux goes girlish with plaited evening dresses having kimono blouses, and Lanvin makes buttoned up tunic coats that go over narrow dresses. Everybody shows pastel colored wool jackets to wear over spring dresses, the sports and town kind.

Wild Horses Cavort on Printed Frocks.

There are lots of printed dresses, but they're different. Nobody will mistake them for the dresses you wore last summer. The "wild horses" printed dresses of Schiaparelli—covered with rearing broncs—red or white ones, surrounded with incredible foliage, are knockouts. Painted prints, done with automobile paint that looks like varnish, and shines, and seems to be woven in, are seen everywhere.

Linens printed with various animals and fish, for southern beach and sports wear, are striking and attractive, especially the ones printed with exotic Japanese fish. The really big news, however, in printed dresses for both afternoon and evening are Mainbocher's veiled printed frocks. They are, when for daytime, veiled with navy or black chiffon. They are indescribably beautiful. For evening they are veiled with many different colors of chiffon or tulle.

Parisienne Dons All Black for Semi-Demi Occasions.

All black dresses to wear for cocktails, formal afternoon, and evening have sleeves, yokes, and back-bodices of chiffon or tulle, also black. They are a Paris midseason style that is alluring and grand for hot weather. Mainbocher shows these with tulle jackets and capes for wraps. Simple little all-black silk crêpe dresses for town is another style that is charming and useful. Our Paris artist sketches one of these in No. 1. It is from Lucile Paray. It is made of black crêpe georgette [all the smooth, oldtime silks are coming back]. This model has the new plaited skirt, stitched down to the knees so the plaits stay put, and it has plaited sleeves held at the elbows by stitched bands. A stubby sash of bright red silk is a splash of color at the waistline.

No. 2 shows you the daring new silhouette of the Paris openings, Schiaparelli's "sail dress." This model is made of rosy red ottoman silk. It has a skirt that demands a sober pace, it's so narrow, and the sail apron is attached to the skirt at the sides. The square neckline and wide shoulder straps and the high waistline are new points. The enamel link chain belt is blue and gold. The bracelet matches, and it conceals a perfume pocket that scents you delicately. The gold fillet worn on the hair is jeweled with turquoises on top.

"Shirt Coat" Copied After Grandpa's Nightshirt.

No. 3 shows you Schiaparelli's "shirt coat" of cream flannel, and it needs no description. It is fastened with buttons made of ivory enamel and shaped exactly like almond nuts with the shells on. It is purposely bulky around the shoulders, just too big, which is one reason why it is so chic.

No. 4 is Chanel's new cadet coat, and it is one of the success models of her collection. The coat is made of bright red flannel, with two circular capelets that are lined with printed silk and that are topped by a small turnover collar. The coat is fitted slightly and is wrapped over at the waistline. Simple sleeves have turnback cuffs.

No. 5 shows you Robert Piguet's new long and short dinner dress to wear down south this winter. He makes this model of semi-sheer red silk crêpe. There is a narrow slip, much like the slips worn under dresses, with hem and top scalloped, and over this the dress is worn, open all the way down the front, and held only at the waistline by a heavy black antelope belt, corselet shaped in front to make the waistline look high, and with a heavy antique silver fleur de lis encrusted on at this point. The wide sleeves are shirred on to the shoulders with a heading. They are three-quarter length.

SKATING SUIT OF WOOL

The Russian influence is noticeably present in this striking skating suit of heavy wool trimmed with yarn simulating curly fur. Red and black is the striking color combination in the original. Full sleeves allow ample opportunity for warm woolies to be worn underneath. The Russian motif is further carried out in the turban, which uses a jaunty white feather trimming set above the right eye.

A FRIEND IN NEED

Any Toys Which Your Child Has Discarded Will Be Instrumental in Giving Joy to Less Fortunate Youngsters at Christmas.

If you are in need, perhaps I can help you! If you have household articles or clothing you no longer use, please let me place them with needy families. Address correspondence to Sally Joy Brown, the Chicago Tribune, Chicago.

By Sally Joy Brown.

TO many the holiday season is the happiest of the year, talked of, planned for, and joyfully celebrated. To others it will be only a time of heartsick memories, or a gloomy period of bitter disappointment, when all the weary pain of poverty is accentuated.

Most of the letters which now come to my desk enumerate such pathetically simple wants, articles that can be supplied with little or no financial outlay, but only at the cost of a little time and trouble. Every home with youngsters in it harbors discarded toys of one kind or another, and if they're still useable, they can make Dec. 25 a real holiday for some less fortunate boy or girl.

"Dear Miss Brown: I have a boy 3 years old, who wants a train from Santa Claus. I am worried about it, as I don't know where I can get one for him, although we require only a wind-up train, as we have no electricity, but burn kerosene lamps. MRS. E. N."

The address is on the north side.

Mrs. R., on the west side, has undergone some twelve major operations, two of them in the last year, and still is attending a clinic for treatment. She has four children, a boy 17, and girls 14, 12, and 5 years old. She writes: "For the last three years I have been in the hospital at Christmas time, and they came to the hospital bravely and never let on that they didn't have any Christmas. The coming holiday looks just as gloomy, as we are on relief. I would appreciate toys for them, especially for the younger children." Her husband also is ill and unable to work. The address is on the west side.

Mrs. C. has had to struggle against many things in the last few years, and in a recent letter to me she said: "My youngsters are boy and girl twins, 10 years old; girls 8 and 6, and a boy 3 years old, and, believe it or not, they have no toys. I may be asking a great deal, but sitting here wishing does no good, so I decided to see if you might help me make the children a little bit happier. I could make a Christmas out of any toys received or children's furniture, as I'm sure there'll be no real Christmas for us this year. Our dad is a painter and can refinish, make over, or paint any furniture of which you may know. We were on relief last year, and now are doing our best to remain independent. We have only beds in our bedrooms, and how can I teach my youngsters to care for their belongings when they haven't any real place for them? We need bedroom floor coverings, and I can make rugs out of old coats or any heavy discarded clothing. I am quite accustomed to improvising and making new from old."

The address is on the northwest side.

"Dear Miss Brown: My husband earns about $40 per month, and it is difficult even to feed and clothe my children on that, so you can see that Christmas presents a real problem to me. My children are girls, 3 and 5 years old, and a boy 4. Their greatest wish is that they have three chairs [the kind that comes in youngsters' table and chair sets], a doll buggy, and a wind-up train. They play nicely together, and as it will be necessary to keep them indoors much of the winter, because they lack warm clothing, I certainly would like them to have toys. I can repaint and repair, and my brother will call for anything offered. MRS. H. W."

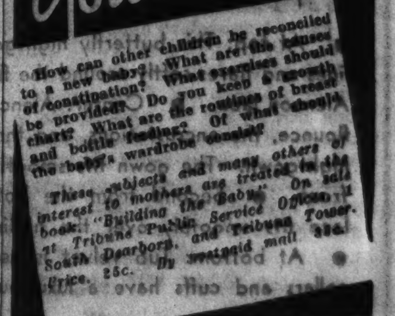
Mrs. W. lives on the extreme south side of the city.

"I am writing to see if any of your readers has a discarded cowboy suit or a train for a boy 10 years old. My little stepbrother has his heart set on either one, and has had for the last two years, but it has been impossible for us to get them for him. His father has been ill and in the hospital most of the time since 1933. I am unable to work and am attending a clinic at present, so my mother has had to care for us. The boy was terribly disappointed last year. MARY S."

If your youngster has outgrown such toys, wouldn't you like to pass them on to this child?

Relief agencies at present find it almost impossible to supply adequate clothing for clients. Here are the facts about an especially needy family, referred to me by a caseworker:

There are four children in the G. family, boys 14 and 11 and girls 13 and 9 years old. The mother died of tuberculosis some years ago, the father now is attending a clinic for the same malady, and the youngest girl has been diagnosed as having "childhood tuberculosis." It is imperative that these youngsters have warm clothing for the winter. So if you have anything which you think might fit them, I will be glad to supply the name and address of the family.



Is Planning of Leisure Hours Duty of Wife?

Interviews Indicate That Wise Women Cater to Husbands' Preferences.

By Doris Blake.

IS planning, or helping to plan, a busy husband's leisure hours the wife's job, or should it be left to the man himself?

Suppose the wife undertakes the planning, and a last minute business appointment upsets said plans. Then what?

We hear so much today about the intelligent approach to leisure hours that we interviewed a few wives of famous and busy men on the subject. We leave it to you to decide to what extent the wife's influence affects the leisure hour management. Also, we leave it to you to decide wherein you can be of use to your particular man, and wherein it is wiser to let him believe that he is the directing genius of your leisure time, or, indeed, let him really be so.

Four Wives of Prominent Men Questioned About Their Aid.

The question with which we approached the four wives of famous men, whose answers follow, was: "Do you help your husband to plan his leisure hours?"

Mrs. Phil Baker, wife of the stage and radio star, who lives in a New York suburb, answered: "No, I don't. Living away from New York City and Broadway, the center of my husband's activities, we are more concerned with the quiet, restful evenings when we do manage to get an evening together.

"Phil, because of his many activities, finds it necessary to spend a good deal of his time at the broadcasting studios and on Broadway. If I know he is coming home, I make provisions for a dinner he will like, and for a quiet, homelike evening afterward, with friends in occasionally for bridge. When it comes to other forms of recreation, I let Phil do the planning, because he is far more familiar with what is good in entertaining amusement."

Mrs. John Charles Thomas Lets Hubby Do the Planning.

Mrs. John Charles Thomas, wife of the famous baritone, answered: "Occasionally. Most of the time, however, I let John do the planning for both of us. We have several boats and we like to fish. Our idea of a perfect period of leisure is a fishing trip with several of our friends as guests. When the busy concert season is on we find little time for leisure. Whenever my husband leaves New York for a concert appearance I always have a delightful surprise ready for him. I get tickets for a concert or instrumental recital for the night of his return. A busman's holiday, as you see! For extensive leisure [and there has been little of it] John does all the planning, to our mutual satisfaction."

James Melton you all know as a great radio star. His recent venture into the movies familiarizes him to countless more of you. Mrs. James Melton gave answer to our question: "I certainly do help plan the leisure hours. Fortunately, we both love the same forms of recreation, one in particular, yatching. When Jimmy isn't busy with his screen and radio duties, or with personal appearances, he usually can be found, and I'm there, too, aboard his beloved boat. With the coming of winter, when we can no longer go sailing, I find that Jimmy enthusiastically endorses my selections of plays and concerts. Then, I plan many informal evenings at home to which I invite mutual friends. Always, however, my recreational plans are flexible enough to allow for any of Jimmy's last minute business appointments."

Mrs. Rosario Bourdon Helps in Plans, but with Reservations.

Mrs. Rosario Bourdon, wife of the well known composer and orchestra leader, says: "I do help in the leisure hours planning, but with certain reservations. My husband is a musician. He spends a great deal of time working on his music, so I make no plans until I determine his mood and whether there is a mental inclination for relaxation outside of the home. I know, and always have known, that a good movie is the most tempting bait I can offer Rosario, even when he is tired. An interesting picture takes his mind off his work to the extent that he is relaxed and refreshed afterward. When he is not too tired, I suggest going somewhere to dance, and he agrees with alacrity. Then, we also derive great pleasure from listening to our collection of symphonic recordings."

From the responses, it is fairly obvious that the man's pleasure, his taste in diversion, is catered to wisely by the woman who makes a success of her marriage. It's equally obvious that the smart wife not only directs that the man's taste be considered, but that she be active party herself to the preferred diversion. In a recent survey of the divorce causes, incompatibility of interest showed up as an omen of domestic discord. Interests and diversions shared in common were presented as a binding clause in the venture known as matrimony.

Every day there is presented, in the feature columns of the Chicago Tribune, a stimulating article by Miss Blake, who lends friendly counsel on a wide variety of common problems.

"Background" Frock Finds Varied Suitability in Sheer Wool and Crepe.

Clotilde is a daily contributor to the Chicago Tribune, offering constructive information to women who enjoy making their own clothes, and presenting a fascinating pattern every day of the week.

By Clotilde.

ITS simplicity makes this frock, pattern No. 2602, suitable for any number of occasions, winning it the apt name of "background" dress. It is appropriate for wear throughout the day, and is effective for the cocktail hour and informal dining.

This frock is cut on dignified yet youthful lines, with smart fulness in the front of the skirt. The original model was created in black sheer wool, with effective contrast in flattering blue crinkly crêpe, employed for the sleeves, which are easy to sew, and for the shirt collar tied in ascot fashion.

Style No. 2602 is designed for sizes 14, 16, and 18 years, and 36, 38, and 40 inches bust measurement.

Size 16 requires $2\frac{3}{4}$ yards of 39 inch material, with $1\frac{1}{4}$ yards of 39 inch contrasting.

Wars Influence New Modes of Paris Salons

INTERNATIONAL clashes are having their influence on Paris fashions, in spite of sanctions and the maneuvers of warriors in this part of the globe and that. Although Italian goods are barred in France Fascist styles and Italian national colors are stamping many of the new modes of Paris salons.

Mussolini's Fascist cap has inspired hats launched by several modistes. Some are trim little felt turbans with wide tassels or fringe swinging from the side or in front. The Fascist dress uniform loans its patch pockets to several new Parisian suits, and the Italian colors—red, green, and white—appear in scarfs and belts.

One designer, Rosevienne, has brought out a dance frock of black and white printed pique, with a large white pique collar, and red, green, and white pique belt. It bears the title "Mussolini."

The Ethiopian side of the clash also affects fashions, but not to such a great degree as does the Italian. The couturiere who created "Mussolini" also has a costume which is called "Negus." The frock is a slim, black wool model, having a lether belt fastened with a metal "slave chain," and white soutache braid palm leaves worked on the shoulder.

The Sino-Japanese struggle in Manchukuo also casts its reflections in a small way, on fashions in the French capital. Oriental touches appear in a number of mid-season costumes. One designer has displayed wool daytime frocks and ensembles partaking of the Chinese mood. Three-quarter length coats, slit on the sides to the hips, and frocks with slit necklines are accented by small frogs of knotted cords suggesting the fastenings of Chinese coats.

The mandarin coat casts its shadow on some of the new evening wraps, short affairs designed of quilted velvet in a turquoise blue which recalls the color of ancient Chinese porcelains.

White Shells Form Engaging Pattern in Crochet Blouse

By Ellen Bruce.

SINCE two tones have suddenly become the order of the day in needlework, crochet workers may have their fun working with angora in shades of white and pastel combinations. The band of this blouse is made of the solid color while the body part is composed of white shells with spots of color in each shell. The narrow tie attached to the V neck matches the waistband and edges of the short sleeves. A good part of the charm of this blouse is found in the dainty puffed sleeve.

With the introduction of the fine angora and angora floss the cost of an angora sweater is not as prohibitive as in the days when only the heavy angora was available. The floss is about 60 per cent angora, but is as effective as the pure angora and less expensive. Even more inexpensive yarns, such as zephyr, fine saxony, and ice wools are crocheted effectively in this little, two tone, shell stitch sweater. Those who find crochet work one of the quickest of the handicrafts will be agreeably surprised to find that this sweater may be made in less than one week.

If you wish instruction for crocheting the checkerboard angora blouse, illustrated today, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to Ellen Bruce, Chicago Tribune, or call at one of the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street and Tribune Tower lobby.

Dog Collars Popular in '90s Again Adorn Feminine Throats

DO you remember that the fashionably dressed woman of the gay nineties wore about her alabaster throat a dog collar of pearls? You will see these necklaces in photographs of that period.

The chokers of those days were made of real pearls and were worth a king's ransom, for there was no such word as "costume jewelry" then.

Today these chokers, or dog collars, have returned to favor. Indeed, they are the last word in smartness. But they are now within the reach of all of us, for the pearls, grand-looking though they are, don't claim to be the kind that Cleopatra dissolved in wine and swallowed.

A large loop store has some impressive dog collars consisting of three strands of pearls of medium size, with supports to keep them standing smartly up about the neck. The front boasts a brilliant, inclosing nine pearls.

This neck ornament isn't too dressy to be worn with a dark afternoon gown, and the effect is stunning.

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

A CHRISTMAS play! What pictures it conjures up of happy bustle—of young things intent or beaming, proudly costumed—of indulgent and admiring grownups—of the smell of fir and glow of holly—and of the expectant hush as the great dramatic event is about to begin!

Any kind of play at any time of the year, with the rummaging for materials, with the posturing before the mirror, and with the writing of it if you're a "writing child," is one of the great experiences of childhood.

But a Christmas play! What fun!

Why not make this part of your Christmas day celebration? Why not give a simple play, with words not too difficult for the children to learn, requiring little rehersal and simple costuming, late on Christmas afternoon or perhaps in the evening just before or after that "buffet snack" which must supplement even an elaborate daytime Christmas dinner?

If your children are not too small, it's a good idea to plan something special for the latter part of Christmas day. Games or the reading of parts of Dickens' "Christmas Carol," or singing, or—best of all—a play.

Plays May Be Had from Library.

Now then, what shall it be? There are lots of Christmas plays in books available—our everobliging librarians can help you. Or your children can take a favorite fairy story, or an Arabian Nights tale, and give it with your help if they've never done such a thing before. Or a Santa Claus can be given.

Or—and this is what I am most interested in today—why not make a Christmas carol come to life? That is, why not dramatize one of the lovely old carols, or one of the sweet and intimate old carols, or one of the rollicking or picturesque ones, like "Good King Wencelas"?

I've just been going over all my collections of familiar carols with this in mind, and I find many that you can adapt to this purpose. You will soon see your own possibilities for simple dramatization, but I will mention these:

"While Shepherds Watched Their Flocks."

"The Wassail Song."

"Now Sing We All Full Sweetly."

"The Cherry Tree Carol."

"The Three Kings," or "We Three Kings of Orient Are."

"The First Noel."

"Good King Wencelas."

"Come With Torches, Jeannette, Isabella" ["Un Flambeau, Jeanette, Isabelle"].

Doorway, Arch, or Screen May Provide Adequate Staging.

There are various ways in which you can work this idea out. Some carols you may find are already in a sort of dialog form, and you can have the words spoken and acted. Others may be acted while the carol is sung. Others may be sung while they are acted. It is also possible to have only pantomime, perhaps centering it about a crèche, having the music of the carol played during the action. Your ideas will soon "ferment" once you get started on this holiday venture.

Staging for a carol-play is the simplest thing in the world. A large Christmas tree, a doorway with impromptu hangings, or an archway between rooms also with hangings, or a screen or two, draped, provide, as a rule, all the scenic effect one needs.

Adults' Wardrobes Often Yield Splendid Costumes.

As to costumes—well, here's where the fun begins. After you once get into the spirit of the thing, your eye will see the most amazing possibilities in the most unpromising looking house furnishings and apparel!

Of course if you are the proud and rare possessor of an attic with old trunks full of clothes, I need hardly make a suggestion. But if you're not, the thing is far from hopeless. Daddy's bathrobe or big brother's lounging pajamas, mother's bed cover or little brother's old rubber boots painted red, discarded thin glass curtains, or a heavy couch cover will all soon be in danger of turning into oriental robes, an angel's delicate garment, or a jolly old Englishman's boots!

Add the possibilities that lie in gold paint, gold and silver paper, tinsel for crowns and gifts—crookhandled canes wound with brown cambric for shepherds' crooks, lighted candles, branches of spruce and green garlands, plus a dozen other ideas that will come to you for "stage properties" and "making something out of nothing" becomes an exciting game.

Cambric and Flannel Make Effective Robes.

If, however, your attic or scrapbag or clothes closet proves disappointing, costumes are still not difficult to achieve, nor expensive.

For the shepherd who appears so often in carols, brown cambric or brown canton [cotton] flannel is cheap and effective. You can cut it to simulate either a gown or a pelt. White chalkmarks on brown cambric can be made to give an effect of coarse hair.

Hanks of brown or black or yellow worsted, sewed on some sort of backing, are effective for "wigging" and "bearding" the characters in a play. Cotton batting gives good results, too. And frayed-out hemp rope offers another [rather scratchy] possibility for the amateur costumer.

Long, full lengths of white cheesecloth [or any other sheer or soft white stuff] with pink or blue wings such as one sees in early Italian paintings make beautifully "drapey" angels' robes. Old sandals can be gilded or silvered or painted lovely colors.

It is often charming to work into a dramatization the character of a Christmas child. All that this takes for costuming is a white frock or a long white cheesecloth gown, girdled high with a red ribbon, and a green or holly wreath for the head of the young performer.

No Limit to Age and Number of Children.

Once started, you and the children will find yourselves able to costume any character—a shepherd, the wise men, the three kings, and Christmas angels—with few materials but a large supply of enthusiasm.

As to age and number of children there need be no limit in "making a Christmas carol come to life."

Small collections of traditional Christmas carols are available in pamphlet form in virtually all music stores and music departments.

For those who cannot reach such a source of supply, this department is keeping a limited supply of one good collection of carols on hand. Thirteen cents covers the publisher's cost and the cost of mailing. Please inclose no envelope, unless it is a large manila one.

Mrs. Bevans' column also appears in the Tribune on Monday and every other weekday.

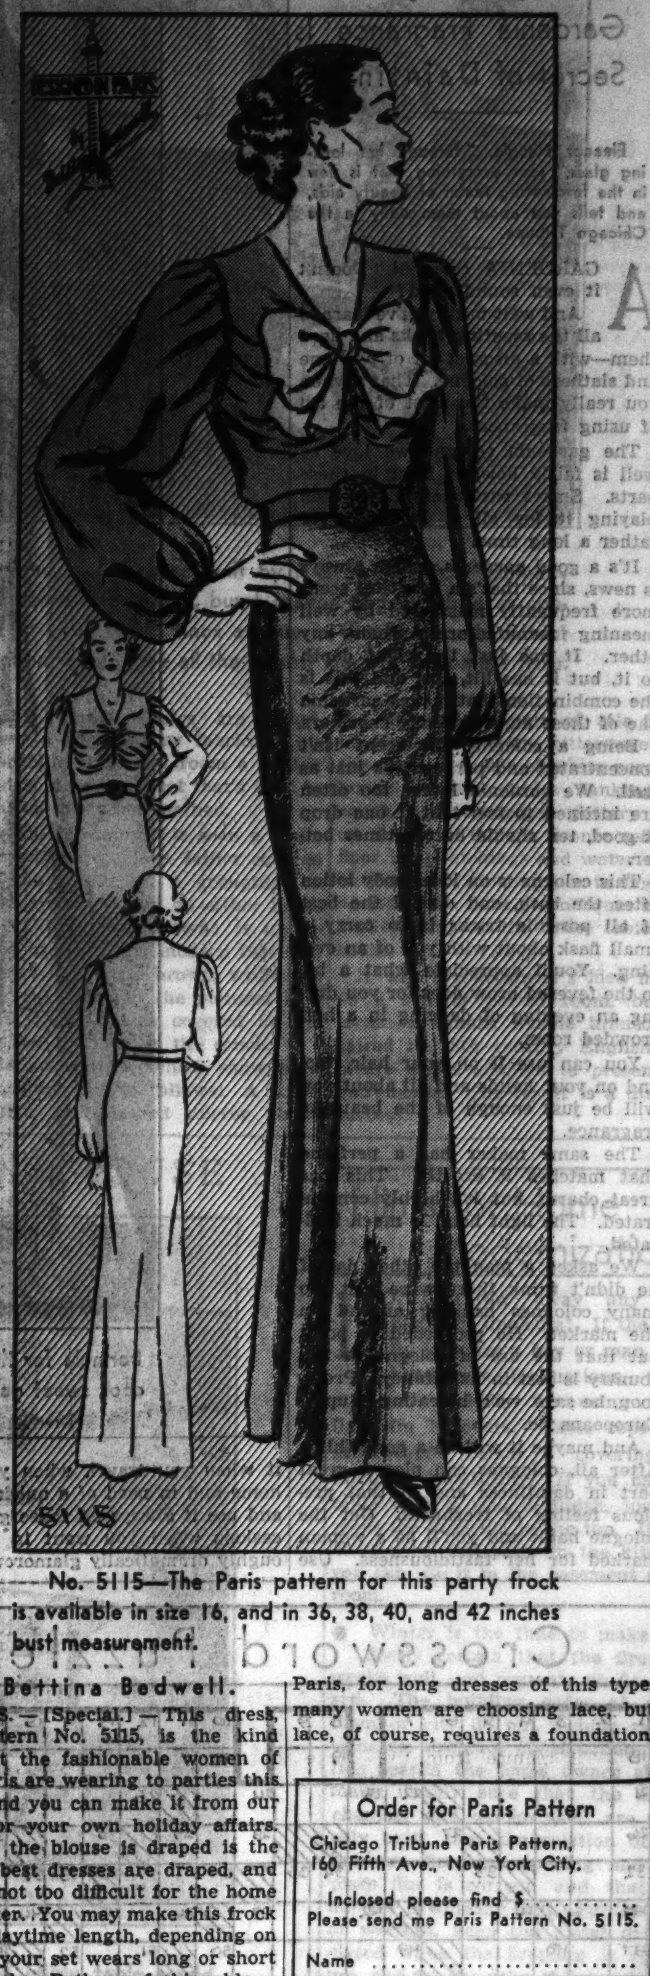
Paris Pattern Party Frock Is Popular in the French Capital



No. 5115—The Paris pattern for this party frock is available in size 16, and in 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measurement.

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS.—[Special.]—This dress, pattern No. 5115, is the kind that the fashionable women of Paris are wearing to parties this winter and you can make it from our design for your own holiday affairs. The way the blouse is draped is the way the best dresses are draped, and yet it is not too difficult for the home dressmaker. You may make this frock long or daytime length, depending on whether your set wears long or short party frocks. Both are fashionable.

Velvet or satin would be good materials to choose for this model and you may add the bit of lace that makes the light touch at the neck or you can simply wear clips or a brooch, if you prefer. Any of the silk crêpes one finds in the stores would be good in this pattern and, in fact, there is no limit, except that you should choose a soft fabric. Here in Paris, for long dresses of this type, many women are choosing lace, but lace, of course, requires a foundation.

THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASS

By Eleanor Nangle

Eleanor Nangle, "through her looking glass," sees everything that is new in the fascinating realm of beauty aids, and tells you about them daily in the Chicago Tribune.

A GARDENIA cologne! Doesn't it even sound good?

And wait until you've learned all the scenting tricks and used them—with a discreet bit of perfume and slathers of cologne. That's when you really make the most of the art of using fragrances.

The gardenia cologne we love so well is fairly new, at least in these parts. Smart easterners have been playing it for all it is worth for rather a long time.

It's a good gardenia, which always is news, since that's a beautiful scent more frequently massacred by well meaning manufacturers than any other. It has just the right depth to it, but it has lilt, too, and this is the combination that makes gardenia one of those night and day charmers.

Being a cologne, the scent isn't concentrated and perhaps it's just as well. We gardenia lovers too often are inclined to feel that if one drop is good, ten should be ten times better.

This cologne is an ideal body lotion after the bath, and one of the best of all possible tricks is to carry a small flask about with you of an evening. You'll appreciate what a bit to the fevered brow does for you during an evening of dancing in a hot, crowded room.

You can use it on your hair, too, and on your hands and all about you will be just enough of the beautiful fragrance.

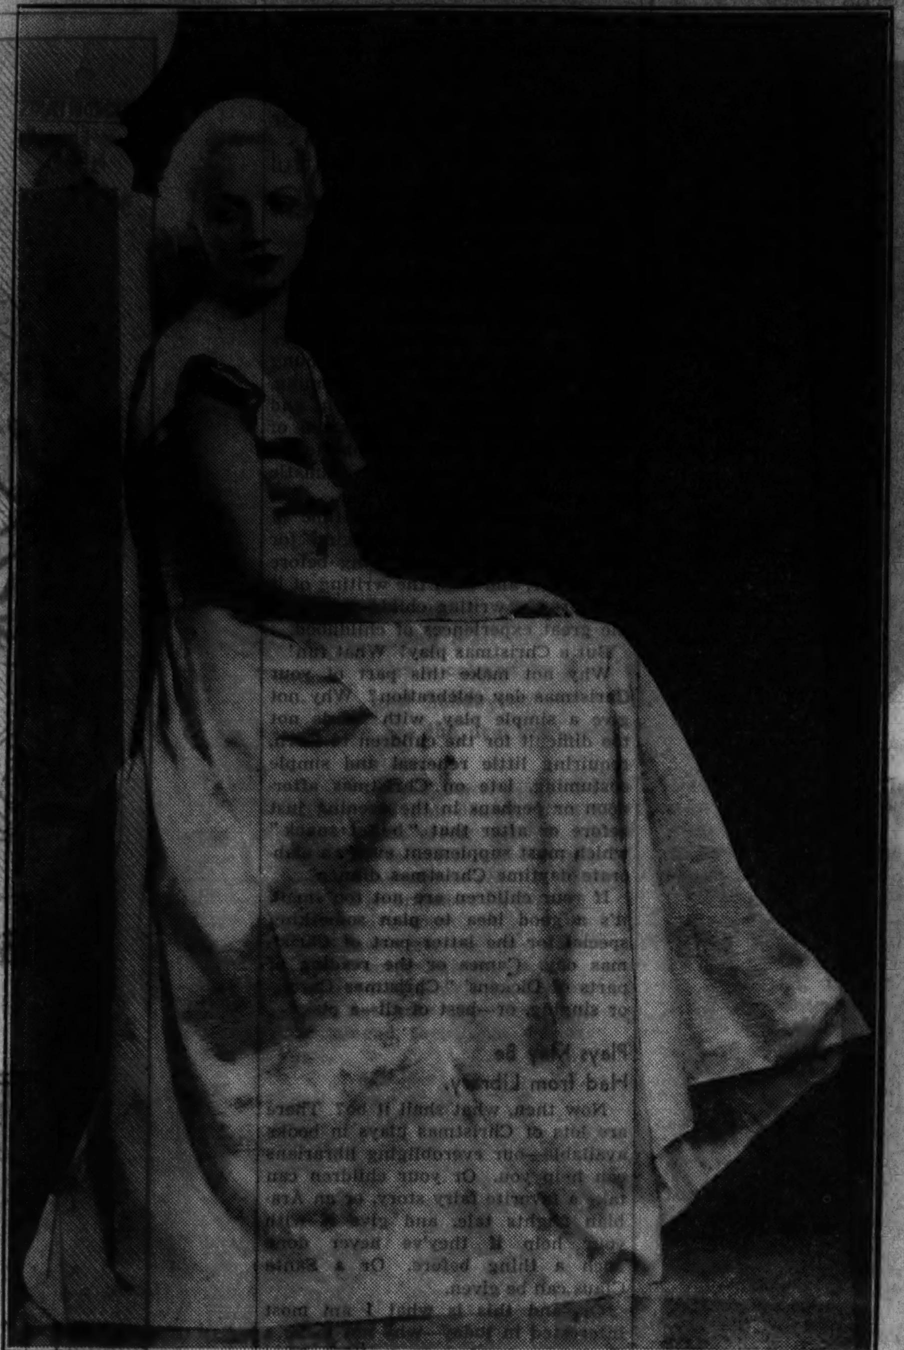
The same maker has a perfume that matches it exectly. This has great charm, but it's highly concentrated. The light hand is much indicated.

We asked a man the other day if he didn't think there were just too many colognes banging around on the market. He proceeded to point out that the use of cologne in this country is just in its infancy. Pretty soon, he says, we'll be eating it up as Europeans do.

And maybe it will be a good thing. After all, colognes can play a great part in daintiness and in that precious feeling of freshness. Get the cologne habit and you'll be a woman marked for her fastidiousness. Use it when you travel, when you're at home and in need of a quick pickup, and use it always on those grand occasions when you want to be thoroughly dramatically glamorous.

Supplement your perfume, which you must use sparingly, with lots of a fine cologne splashed all over your body. You'll be a fresh, but not too fragrant flower. And if you use this gardenia cologne you'll be particularly clever, because that's a grand scent if ever there was one.

[For information about this cologne telephone Eleanor Nangle, Superior 0100, or write to her care of the Chicago Tribune.]



Formula for the precious feeling of freshness that is so important to charm: Use a cool, sweet gardenia cologne supplemented by a discreet bit of gardenia perfume.

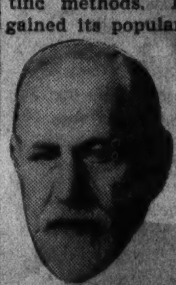
Faces Reveal Variations of Freud, Adler

Paths of Psycho-analysts Were Sure to Diverge, Physiognomist Avers.

Articles by Mr. Westerberg on Physiognomy are to be found daily in the Chicago Tribune.

By Hugo Westerberg.

THERE is one kind of psychology that has a greater appeal to the student of human nature than the older and more strictly scientific methods. Psycho-analysis has gained its popularity mainly because it meets the immediate needs of an individual for an understanding of himself and others that will help him adjust his personality to the practical demands of social life. It employs various means to provide this knowledge, none very accurate but all contributing some observations that can be useful. The interpretation of dreams is one that is well known and important.



SIGMUND FREUD.

The founder of psycho-analysis was Sigmund Freud, a physician and an acute observer in medical matters. Through his interpretation of dreams the secrets of our subconscious mind are revealed, and thus typical irregularities in the mental make-up of otherwise normal people become known. The object is to discover what underlying impulses prompt our actions and what unfulfilled wishes disturb our proper conduct.

Trying to find the dominant influence in human life in this manner, Freud's attention centered on the love motive to the exclusion of all other desires. Now, why did Freud emphasize the sex desire when other urges many times are more important?

A physiognomical reading of him may give the answer and, if we can accept it as correct, many of his extreme and hasty conclusions are accounted for. Looking at the lower fleshy part of his nose we find it distinctly heavy. This means an interest in discovering bad points in people. The one desire in human nature that has been most frequently abused and turned from its right purpose is that of sex, while the others, such as the desire to dominate environment or to gather information about it, have been comparatively easy to regulate. Freud possessed to a high degree all three, but selected for his main theme the one most objectionable.

Freud's celebrated pupil, Adler, did not follow him in this explanation of behavior. Adler holds that the will to power is the fundamental force in man, and that the feeling of deficiency in this respect is the deciding factor in his success or failure.

ALFRED ADLER.

If we analyze Adler's features we notice that his main weakness is that of an undeveloped bony part of the nose in side view. This means that instead of having a tendency to rise above his surroundings and to feel superior to others, which a high ridged nose would have indicated, he feels below them in self-asserting strength. Naturally, through this personal experience of his, he concluded that this was the main point in the life of man.

We find that both men, from the mental phenomena in human nature that came to their attention, selected as a leading issue that one which their own personality traits dictated.

In physiognomy we do not make a mistake of this kind as readily. We know from the features if one or the other of above conditions exists in a certain individual, and on the basis thus established we can make a more accurate application of the knowledge that the genius of these two men has discovered and made available.

[THE TRIBUNE has arranged with Mr. Westerberg to make individual analyses of its readers from a photograph, preferably a profile or three-quarter view. See coupon. Photo will be returned if sufficient postage and envelope large enough for photo are enclosed. A snapshot will do.]

Antique Finish Is Charming on Walls of Pecky Cypress

WALLS of pecky cypress, sometimes called "peggy" cypress, are increasingly popular in modernization work. There are several ways of producing a highly attractive antique effect on this wood.

One method is to stain the wood a rather light gray, using an acid stain. Another is to give the wood a coat of stain produced by adding a bit of lamp black to a liquid composed of equal parts of turpentine and raw linseed oil, plus a little drier. Still a third way to produce this antique effect is to use a "silver gray" filler. Add a bit of lamp black or Prussian blue to the filler, apply it like paint, and before it has hardened, rub the finish across the grain with stiff felt. This will force filler into grain, and at the same time remove all excess filler.

THE STAMP COLLECTOR

By Richard McP. Cabeen

Mr. Cabeen will answer questions about stamps, except concerning value. Do not ask where stamps may be sold as the Postage Stamps and Coins advertising section adjoining contains offers to buy and sell. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

CYPRUS, third largest island in the Mediterranean, was a Turkish possession until assigned to the British in 1878. Since that time it has been an important station in the chain of islands and outposts connecting England with the far east. Recently there has been a rumor that England would consider exchanging Cyprus for some Grecian island in a location better suited for controling the harbor of Alexandria and the northern entrance to the Suez canal.

The first stamps of Cyprus were made by surcharging various British stamps with the name of the island, and in a few cases with a new value. These were issued in 1880 and were soon followed by a definitive set of queen's heads, with the word Cyprus above and the value below expressed in paras and piastres.

These were superceded in 1903 by an issue similar in design, but bearing the portrait of Edward VII. This in turn, in 1912, gave way to an issue with the portrait of George V. In 1924 a new design with the portrait upon a shield shaped vignette replaced the octagonal vignette in use since 1881.

Cyprus Issues Pictorial Stamps.

In commemorating her fiftieth year as a British colony Cyprus, in 1928, issued pictorial stamps showing various buildings, an ancient coin, a portrait of Zeno, the philosopher; the map and arms of the colony, and the portrait of George V. Six values of the set were in a single color and four values were bicolored.

Pleased with the reception accorded these stamps, the authorities soon planned a more elaborate issue which would acquaint the world with the notable ruins of that stronghold of ancient culture and art. These were recess printed from engraved plates by Waterlow & Sons of London, and were placed on sale Dec. 1, 1934.

The values and subjects are as follows: One-quarter piastre, brown and ultramarine, ruins of the Palace of Vouni, built about 500 B. C., during Persian rule; ½ piastre, green, ruins of the Roman forum at Salamis. Here St. Paul and St. Barnabas landed in 45-46 A. D. to found a Christian colony; ¾ piastre, violet and black, the church at Peristerona, an excellent example of Byzantine architecture; 1 piastre, brown and black, ruins of the theater at Soli, the only trace of what was once the second greatest city in Cyprus; 1½ piastre, rose, Kyrenia castle, a fortress captured in 1191 by Guy de Lusignan, titular king of Jerusalem; 2½ piastre, dark ultramarine, "Crusaders' tower," at Kolossi, built by the Knights of St. John in the fifteenth century; 4½ piastre, carmine and black, cathedral of St. Sophia, at Nicosia.

Red Cross Stamps Issued by Finland.

This illustration shows two values of a set of three stamps issued by Finland early in 1935. These are semi-postal issues, with two values quoted on the face of the stamp, the first being the postal value, while the second is a surtax to be used for the support of the Finnish Red Cross society. The three stamps show the portraits of Mathius Calonius, Henry Gabriel Porthan, and Anders Chydenius. The use of such stamps may be obligatory during a very short period, but ordinarily the postoffice allows the patron to select regular stamps if desired.

This cover from Cyprus shows examples of the pictorial stamps recently issued to advertise the ruins and scenery of that historic island. It is shown through the kindness of Mrs. H. R. Gentsch of Chicago. Notes on Cyprus and this stamp issue will be found elsewhere in the column.

Built by Successors of De Lusignan.

This was built by successors of De Lusignan, being finished in 1228, and was converted into a Mohammedan mosque when the Turks drove out the Venetians in 1571; 6 piastre, blue and black, the Bairakdar, or "standard bearer," mosque at Nicosia, built on the ramparts as a memorial to the standard bearer who lost his life in the siege of 1570-'71; 9 piastre, violet and black brown, ruins of St. Hilarion castle, which was built on a mountain top in the thirteenth century as a place of refuge for the boy king, Henry I.; 18 piastre, olive and black, the Buyuk [great] Khan, and ancient but still frequented Turkish inn at Nicosia; 45 piastre, black and green, a forest view in the mountains in the western end of the island.

Cocktail Shaker Unusually Styled in Dumbbell Form

A NEW sensation of the cocktail hour is the dumbbell cocktail shaker, both original and practical. It's made of chromium and holds plenty of refreshment, enough for twelve servings. Trailing right along with the "dumbbell" is the tall and ritzy mixer-shaker with its two way top. This novel gadget makes pleasant the ritual of mixing when that type of beverage calls for stirring the ingredients or shaking the mixer. It's available in clear crystal, ruby red, blue, green, and amber, with nontarnishable sterling silver lines around its middle.

Another new and tricky cocktail mixer eliminates the tedious shaking ordeal. One simply winds up a knob contraption on the lid and a dasher does the rest. It's not electrical. Should any of the parts get out of condition they may be replaced. There also are cocktail mixers with skads of recipes printed in black or white enamel upon the outside, banishing any excuse for "not knowing how." These new numbers are sold in Chicago State street stores.

Titled Woman Takes Part in an Equine Circus Act

FOR the first time in history a woman of title took part in a public circus performance when Lady Eleanor Smith, author of "Red Wagon," volunteered in Scotland to take the place of an ill girl performer in an equine act.

By Nancy Cabot.

"BIG oaks from little acorns grow," said a woman one day when she took the frequently used eight pointed star block and elaborated upon what was, at one time, a most simple pattern. Today it is no more difficult to create "Blue Acacia" because, when the center star is pieced and applied to a ground, branches or boughs of leaves are interspersed between the points and cause quite a furor in the field because of striking individuality. The block is large, measuring 35 inches square, and only four are required for an entire coverlet. This block is most adaptable for small single beds.

Nursery Lamps Reflect Interests of Juvenile World

Lights Express Christmas in Modern Home

And None Is More Effective than Single Yule Candle Set in Holly Wreath.

By Louise Bargelt.

THE small home and large home alike lend themselves to intimate Chistmas lighting effects. Multicolored domestic lights will shine throughout our land on Christmas eve and during the week prior to New Year's day.

No simpler or more effective note for a home than a single Yule candle in a holly wreath, extending a note of cheeriness and hope to the world beyond our four small walls.

In far distant antiquity the Druids hung mistletoe over the entrance to their dwellings—to propitiate their woodland dieties. Centuries ago, in old England, huge Yule logs blazed a welcome in many a vast baronial hall. From early days the berries and branches of holly were used to decorate the Christian churches for Christmas. But before Christianity had come, Romans cut down evergreen trees and lighted and decorated them for their Saturnalia. Later the Roman Drusus introduced this custom into Germany where it was appropriated for the Christmas festival.

Colored Lights May Be Used the Year 'Round.

So many of the customs we follow at Christmas, many of our methods and forms and celebrations, we find have come down to us for hundreds and even thousands of years. Small wonder it is we love them, so inbred and a part of us have they become, with the passing of the long centuries.

One nice thing about decorating our houses inside and outside with strings of colored lights is that we do not need to feel particularly extravagant in this purchase. Their usefulness is by no means confined to one holiday week of service. We don't need to put them away on the morning of Jan. 1 and let them rest for another year: we can use them throughout the entire year, for birthdays and parties, summer as well as winter.

One or more of these strings of lights, which are tiny, come in many different colors, and use little current, would make a practical and useful Christmas present—as well as a beautiful one. If we want them to trim an outdoor Christmas tree, we should buy the waterproofed and rubber covered strings.

With these as a starting base Christmas decorations are greatly simplified. Strings of lights can be the life of the party on Christmas eve, twined around newel posts and door frames. As table decorations they can nestle inside velvety poinsettias, hide in jolly, fat, celluloid Santas, and festoon themselves through mistletoe and holly branches. And when they form the decorations for the indoor Christmas tree, with a certain number of color lights carefully apportioned to each part of the tree, they have not only gleaming beauty to recommend them, but usefulness as well.

The fireplace should come in for some touch of Christmas cheer; perhaps a pair of stalwart little spruce in gayly painted boxes to stand guard over stockings which soon will bulge with goodies. And if one yerns for leaping blue flames to match some rich blue lights, one can dip pine cones into copper sulphate, after giving them a coat of light varnish.

Recreation Room Splendid Gift for Family.

And don't forget the door knocker. Hang a cone cluster from it, or some evergreen and bells—to welcome the incoming guest.

Speaking of Christmas and the home—I recently met a woman who's plotting to put a new basement recreation room into the family's stocking. It's to be a very simple one—whitewashed walls and chintz curtains at the windows, and partitions dividing it from the rest of the basement. The only feature involving much work is the brand new wood floor, which will be all waxed and ready for dancing for the high school flock on Christmas eve.

The family will have instructions to keep out of the basement the week before Christmas. . . .

"When the crowd is downstairs, I'll know just where they are," the mother in the family said. "These current adolescent customs have me worried . . . the crowds slipping away after entertainments to places one doesn't know much about, nor approve of. I decided a game room in the basement would be a worry saver for me."

Bathtub Rumble Seat Another Excellent Present.

This tub will fit into a space usually occupied by a 5½ foot recess built-in bath, and can be installed in an existing bath without tearing down of walls or crowding the lavatory and toilet. At one end is the single "rumble" seat, a part of the fixture itself. This seat slopes slightly, to be self-draining, and it's a grand place for the children to sit while mother soaps them easily and comfortably. Such a built-in tub can fit in a recess of waterproofed walls, and with built-in shower fixtures, wall grip rail, curtain rod, and shower curtain, form a little shower compartment all its own.

Mrs. Bargelt will speak over W-G-N next Wednesday at 2:15 p. m.

A HOLIDAY SETTING

Color lights make a smart table setting, shedding a soft brilliance on shining napery, gleaming silver, and sparkling glassware. Nor should we forget to hang a shining wreath in the window, let a colored light softly illumine a buffet corner. For Yuletide holidays are the best holidays of all—merry events which end the old year ere the new year rings in.

It isn't too early to plan your exterior Christmas lighting effects—if you intend your house to extend a holiday greeting to the passing world. There are as many Christmas color schemes as one could possibly wish, and selection of outdoor color combinations and methods of treatment can rest largely with the tastes and preferences of home owners.

Highly effective, these modern graduated Christmas candles along the pine boughs which surround them. Like the garland which completes the mantelpiece ensemble, these candles are standard decorative lighting equipment; and they will not sputter, blow, drip wax, or set fire to one's cherished possessions.

Crepe Yarn and Angora Floss Combined in Two Piece Frock

By Jean Macdonald.

COMBINATIONS of various yarns are something new with which the designers have been experimenting. Their efforts are proving quite successful. Two yarns are used in the two piece dress illustrated today—crêpe and angora floss. The blouse is made in a most simple and unusual pattern requiring only three balls of angora floss.

This dress is not inexpensive to make because the angora runs about $1 per ball, but the results are worth the expenditure. The crêpe yarn is delightful to work with, as is the angora. However, if a less expensive combination is desired, there is no reason why a fine zephyr, two ply saxony, or even ice wool may not be substituted. In the original model crêpe yarn trimmed the angora blouse at the waist, the collar, and cuffs. Solid color dresses are of equal beauty and attractiveness.

This blouse may be knitted with ease and rapidity. It is decidedly new, but it is successful only when fine yarn is used.

Model House Uses Brown and Beige Deftly

Green, Burnt Orange, Off-White Provide Contrast; Draperies Lively.

"Furnishing Your Home on a Modest Budget," a booklet by Claire Winslow, explains many ways of bringing beauty and charm into your rooms without undue stretching of the pocketbook. It is 5 cents by mail, 3 cents at the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street and Tribune Tower lobby.

By Claire Winslow.

GAY, splashy pattern in the draperies and in the upholstery of two chairs adds liveliness to the color scheme of the living room in a model home recently opened for public inspection by a large electrical company. This house is one of seven built in Chicago and the suburbs. It is located at 6100 North Knox avenue, in the Sauganash district.

The furnishings were planned by the decorator of a large Chicago store and may be duplicated by visitors in their own homes. As we've said often in this column, budget rooms, model houses, etc., offer countless suggestions to the woman interested in making her apartment or house more comfortable, more up to date, more attractive. In a short visit to an intelligently arranged display of furnishings she can pick up extremely timely and helpful ideas, she can become acquainted with the smartest colors and fabrics of the season and with the new trends in furniture and electrical equipment.

The house referred to is not only unusual and most artistic in its brick and timber outer construction, but is equally intriguing inside. The living room, illustrated in the photograph today, is all in warm tones of brown and beige, with green, burnt orange and off-white for contrast.

Walls and ceilings are painted off-white. On the floor is a broadloom rug of walnut brown, this tone being repeated in the rough textured fabric of the good looking, tailored couch placed before the windows.

Draperies are of a stunning glazed chintz, having a brown background and a bold design of leaves and berries in green and burnt orange. They are hung under a stretched, shaped valance of the same material and over white Venetian blinds.

You'll notice that two of the comfortable lounge chairs are upholstered in the drapery fabric. This never fails to give a room a feeling of unity, a smart effect that's hard to equal by any other method.

The accessories, which show skill in selection, are as follows: A large, circular, gilt framed mirror above the fireplace; a pair of tôle flower holders, filled with bittersweet, on the mantel; a pair of white porcelain lamps on sofa tables flanking the couch, a forest green pottery lamp on the drum table, a bronze reflector floor lamp, etchings and water colors on the walls, growing plants, smoking accessories, a dark green liquor set on a silver tray on the coffee table, and books.

It was the decorator's idea not to do a strictly period room, but to create a simple, livable interior inspired by 18th century English furniture styles adapted to present requirements. The result is a distinct success.

STUDY IN COLOR HARMONY

The charming living room in the model house built by a large electrical company is all in tones of brown and beige, with green, burnt orange and off-white as contrast. This home is located at 6100 North Knox avenue in the Sauganash district and is open for public inspection. You'll see all the newest electric equipment here.

New Chair-Side Table Serves Many Purposes

"Making the Most of the Dinette," a helpful booklet by Edith Weigle, tells how to furnish this small room to increase its apparent size and beauty. It is 3 cents by mail, 2 cents at the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street and Tribune Tower lobby.

By Edith Weigle.

WHY not give your house a Christmas present this year? Perhaps it has not been remembered during the last few seasons and would welcome a few pieces of furniture. It is not necessary to spend a lot of money, although, of course, it is a grand thing to do it, if you can, for, after all, our homes are the centers of our lives. The shops are showing such a wide variety of items at this holiday time you are sure to find just the right thing.

Tables, for example, always mean greater comfort in any room. At one Chicago store is a brand new chair-side or couch-side table that has many uses. Its adjustable top lifts like a reading rack and may hold a book or your writing materials or a drawing board. You can raise it or lower it as you wish. Or it may hold a small reading lamp and smoking accessories beside your favorite lounging chair. It is of modern design, reasonably priced, and comes in walnut veneer or gumwood.

At another store is a line of most attractive tilt-top card or tea tables. White or ivory finishes vie with the pastel and brilliant tones, and almost all the tables are decorated in some manner. The one pictured for you today and originally displayed at the American Furniture Mart has a border and base of jade green. A charming French print depicting three figures in a garden setting is centered on the top surface, adding its lovely, soft, blended colors, and making a pretty picture in itself when the top is tilted, as it is in the photograph.

At another Chicago store you'll find the stunning, modern utility table shown in the second picture today. It was made by an Indiana cabinet company and is displayed at the American Furniture Mart. It is proving extremely popular, for it, too, has so many uses. Low enough to fill the rôle of cocktail or coffee table before a couch or big chair, it has a convenient drawer for holding cigarets, playing cards, etc., and a shelf for books, as well as an open shelf for magazines and portfolios.

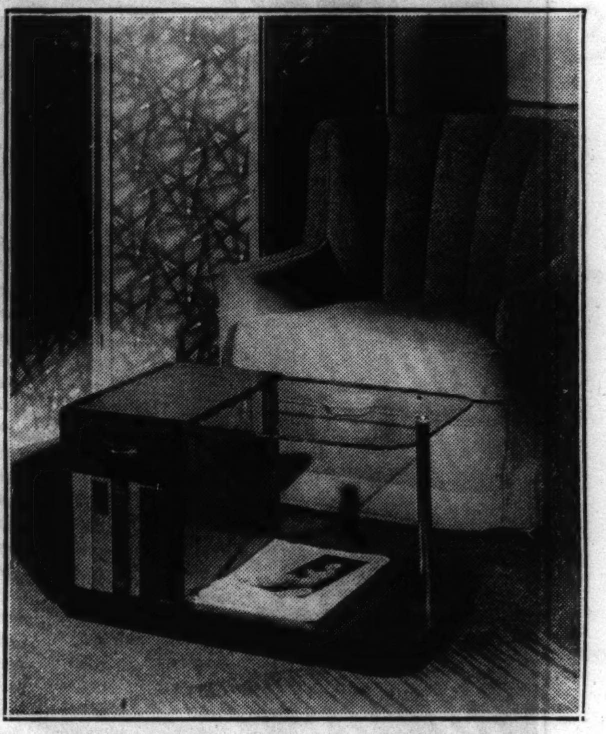
In the manner of Duncan Phyfe are many charming little drop leaf mahogany tables sold by all the stores. Some are just large enough to hold a graceful lamp and a book or two, while others can be used for dining when the leaves are raised. This type of furniture is at home in almost any living room because of its simplicity and quiet beauty.

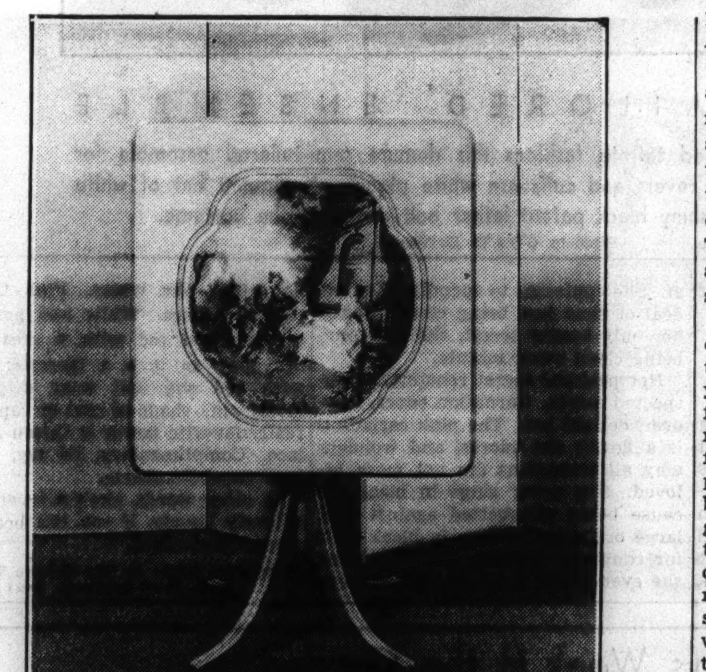
Screens are growing better looking every year. The wooden shutter types are as popular as ever, and if you want to save money get them unfinished and paint them yourselves to match your color schemes. Or, for a few dollars, you can have a three panel screen made of composition board and cover it with some of the gorgeous new wall paper, trimming the edges with a narrow paper border, or with gummed decorative tape made especially for the purpose. And since most of the best papers are washable now, there's no need to be timid about using white, dusty pink, powder blue, pale peach, or any of the delectable pastel tints.

Other gifts for your home at Christmas might be: A new lounge chair in the smart, tight curly mohair; a console or chest of drawers for the entrance hall, decorative wall brackets to hold pots of trailing ivy or figurines, a corner cabinet, a chaise longue for the bedroom, a chintz covered boudoir chair, a knee hole desk with inlaid lether top, or mahogany pedestals for plants.

A GIFT FOR THE HOUSE



This good looking and attractive utility table would make a fine gift for your home for Christmas. It is modern but so conservative in line that it will adapt itself to period furnishings. Seen at the American Furniture Mart. Sold at several Chicago stores.



A tilt-top card table may be the answer to what to give her for Christmas. This one in jade green, its top decorated with a French print, was photographed at the American Furniture Mart. Sold in Chicago.

Hints for Home Modernization

DON'T throw away any odd pieces of linoleum! If the family includes a boy or man with handicraft inclinations, there are ways aplenty for using these linoleum leftovers. Table tops and drainboards take a covering of linoleum beautifully. If you have a table with a smooth finish, just cement the linoleum to the top. If you don't need this piece in the kitchen, you can use it in the basement game room.

● Winter is the time to make perfectly certain that the fireplace works well, and presents no fire hazard. The building codes of every town or city do not include regulations on fireplace construction. For this reason the home owner should make doubly sure that the smoke chamber and smoke shelf are properly built, that the relation of size between fireplace opening and fireplace flue is correct, and that the damper is working well. For the sake of warmth, keep the metal damper closed when the fireplace is not in use, and for the sake of fire safety as well as beauty, use a fire screen—to protect furnishings from flying sparks.

● A useful addition to kitchen equipment is a wood filing cabinet of the type used in offices. These letter file drawers can be purchased in groups of two or three, or separately, and piled on top of one another. Enamel or lacker these drawers to harmonize with your kitchen decorating scheme, and you have a handy accessory for all manner of recipes and menus, memoranda, and bills. Or instead of files, a small desk, with drawers and cubbyholes, will prove a big help. A small radio atop it will provide diversion and instruction!

● It is often a problem to know what to do with the old bricks of a fireplace, in order to freshen them and to add to their good looks. It is possible to coat them with a casein or cold water paint, which will simulate the treatment in old houses, where the fireplace brickwork was often painted white.

● In filling cracks in wood floors, don't use ordinary putty. This material loses its oil as time moves on, and becomes loose and brittle. Use a standard grade of crack filling compound, especially manufactured for filling the cracks in wood floors. You can buy this type of compound at any good store or material supply house which sells paints.

● If you have an old type of chimney projecting into the room with hard to furnish spaces on each side of it, try having the wall built on each side of breast flush with chimney. In this new wall space install cabinets or bookcases, finished in the same manner as the woodwork and trim. This will give the entire room a new face!

Home Treatment For Keeping Skin Young

MERCOLIZED WAX is the one beauty aid you can afford because this single preparation embodies all the essentials of beauty that your skin needs. It cleanses, softens, bleaches, lubricates and protects. It is so simple to use, too. Just pat it on your skin each night as if it were an ordinary cold cream. That's all. Mercolized Wax seeps into your pores and dissolves grime and dust and all impurities. It absorbs the discolored surface skin in tiny, invisible particles, revealing the beautiful, soft, young skin that lies beneath. It clears away freckles, tan, oiliness, sunburn or any other blemishes. You use such a tiny bit of Mercolized Wax for each application that it proves an inexpensive beauty investment. Beauty cannot be taken for granted. It must be cared for regularly if you want to hold it through the years. Mercolized Wax brings out the hidden beauty of your skin.

POWDERED SAXOLITE dissolved in one-half pint witch hazel quickly reduces wrinkles and other age signs. It is a refreshing, stimulating astringent lotion. Use it daily. At all drug and department stores.

La Dragonette of Radio Fame Stars in Charm

Songstress of Airlanes Is an Outstanding Example of Complete Loveliness.

Miss Donnelly's authoritative articles, counseling women in matters of beauty and charm, appear every day in the feature pages of the Chicago Tribune.

By Antoinette Donnelly.

Curiosity took me, recently, to one of her broadcasts and to seek her out afterward for an interview. She proved to be one of the greatest delights of an interviewer's life, also of an observer's, from a seat out front.

There's a long walk from the entrance door to the auditorium stage from which, nightly, the lovely lyric soprano voice is transmitted over the "mike." There are steps to be mounted, orchestra men and instruments to be dodged on the way to the center of the stage. I recommend you, girls, if you ever want to see a dream a-walking, go to watch that entrance and exit of Miss Dragonette! If the man seated nearby exclaimed: "She doesn't walk like one queen. She walks like three queens!" he was merely trying to pay tribute to a beauty of motion incomparable.

Beautiful Carriage Outweighs Singer's Diminutive Height.

She's a diminutive person, but by sheer force of beautiful carriage of her body, she manages the illusion of height. She holds her head with superb grace. When she walks, the only movement of which one is conscious is the necessary movement of the hips, but this is so controled that one honestly has the impression of a dream a-walking. I couldn't imagine a more enchanting picture than to have the lovely soprano appearing before an audience of youngsters and wearing the fairy tale habiliments of the "golden princess." The youngsters would have to believe there is such a princess. She's a fascinating looking person altogether, only 5 feet 2, weighing just a little over a hundred pounds, with hazel eyes [Scotch plaid eyes, she calls them], exquisite skin, and golden blonde hair.

And CHARM, readers! She has it and in every demand that could be made upon that frequently not so mysterious X-quality. Feminine to the fingertips. Gracious. It was delightful to stand on the sidelines in the hallway outside her dressing room and watch the poised, the gracious and sincere way she greeted the seemingly endless procession of her radio fans. Quietly, beautifully done, but each departing handshaker feeling a personal warmth in the greeting. That's charm. Her dress was white, over which was draped a scarlet velvet cape. Her aria that night was from the "Daughter of the Regiment."

Miss Dragonette tells me she dresses for her songs. I hear that no other wardrobe known boasts so many evening frocks. It's imperative, as you may know, at the large studios for the artists to wear formal dress. And, in addition, the popular radio star tries to incorporate into her dress the theme or spirit of the song to be sung. For an "Ave Maria" she wears soft white. For a Spanish song a maize yellow, much ruffled, may be her choice. For a Good Friday song a Fortuny model cast on ecclesiastic lines.

She tells me, too, that she walks in the spirit of the song. She's intensely interested in movement. She has made a great study of Greek dancing and rhythmic principles of movement. Her flowing grace is, she tells me, a developed thing. That illusion of height she gives, likewise, a practiced art. She illustrated for me how one can stop the reach of hands by shoving them forward and stopping abruptly. Then followed an illustration of how, in the manner of the Grecian dancers, one gives the sense of incompleted distance by stopping slowly and with upturned grace of hand and arm.

Regal Manner One of Chief Sources of Singer's Charm.

There's nothing bizarre, nothing stagy, and nothing dramatic about the enchanting young woman. One has merely a sense of an enormous reservoir of control and purpose within the diminutive form. The regal head carriage is part of the study, difficult for me to explain, but lovely to look at. She confesses to spending a great deal of time just being clean. That's her only beauty secret, she tells one, being clean every minute.

Her perfume secret remains her respected secret. Carnation odors, however, delight her. The pink carnation is a flower she adores, and wonders why all carnations are not more beloved. She never sings in black because being silhouetted against that large orchestra of men in black calls for contrast. Besides, the only black she ever wears is velvet. Blues, powder blues, she wears. Pink that is pink she likes. White and gold she adores. And red with a great deal of yellow in it is a favorite. With such red she will wear a certain lovely pink shade of coat or cape. Her really favorite flower is Queen Anne's lace. Complimentary, I'd say, to her own exquisite charm.

In other words, she's a lovely, and a lovely Lovely, if you can bear any more superlatives.

About Now

By Eleanor Jewett.

Is there a touch of holly
In the sunset's glow?
Is there a hint of carols
When the north winds blow?

Are the toy shops crowded?
And the children, after play,
Do they write lists of something
For the fire to whisk away?

Do chimneys rise in your town
At each end of the street—
And Santa Clauses ring a bell
And stamp their heavy feet?

If you can answer all of these Questions with a "Yes"—
Then Christmas must be pretty near,
Don't you guess?

Etiquet Editor Cites Rules of Party Attire

Miss Bartlett will be happy to answer your questions pertaining to etiquet and correct social behavior. For a personal reply, inclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope with your letter.

By Helen Bartlett.

WITH the holidays come parties—dances, debuts, dinner parties. And with each party invitation there are those who want to know what is the correct thing to wear—the length of the dress, the necessity of gloves, hats, and such, and the appropriateness of this accessory or that. A brief outline of the significant details of the formal afternoon and evening costumes should help to put right those of you who are not quite certain.

Formal daytime functions necessitate formal daytime attire. This is distinguished by a dressy afternoon frock, one quite elaborate for fashionable, exclusive affairs. An afternoon dress, by the way, is not as tailored as is a street dress, and a little less elaborate than a dinner dress. And it usually is about half way between the two in length—somewhere between street dress length and ankle length, depending upon the style of the dress. The hat is a dressy afternoon type complementary to the dress, and of the same color or harmonizing contrast. For formal luncheons and receptions, the hat is kept on.

The preference in gloves is white kid or dull finished chamois. Although, if another color seems more suitable and complementary to the costume, it is perfectly permissible. At a formal luncheon the gloves are removed after one is seated at the luncheon table. The handbag, like the other accessories, should be of a dressy type, tapestry, petite point, silk, antelope or velvet.

The attire for formal evening wear centers itself around the formal gown, the style of which depends upon the fashion of the moment. In most cases, the dress worn to a formal dinner is simpler and less extreme than that worn to a fashionable ball or to the opera. Evening slippers or sandals clothe the feet.

Women do not wear hats with full evening dress. Gloves should be long and of white kid. The gloves are removed at a formal dinner party after the guests have been seated at the table. And, I might add, they should be removed entirely and not rolled at the wrist. A rather elaborate evening wrap completes the costume.

For a semi-formal dinner party, a dinner dress is appropriate. A dinner dress differs from an evening dress in that it is much simpler and less elegant. It is long skirted, usually, but has sleeves of some description, often long ones, and sometimes is cut high at the neckline. Another difference in the costume is that a hat accompanies it. In other respects the details are approximately the same.

Complex Process Insures Furniture Smooth, Dull Finish

After the wood has been refinished with a coat of good interior varnish it should be rubbed carefully with a fine sandpaper. This will reduce the thickness of the varnish coating, and will help to remove any hint of gloss.

Then apply a good grade of rubbing varnish. When this is dry give the surface a thorough rubbing with fine powdered pumice in water. Then rinse the piece with clear water, remove all trace of pumice, and apply another and final coat of the rubbing varnish. After this dries hard rub the surface again, this time with pumice stone and crude oil. This will cut the gloss more slowly than pumice and water and will furnish that silky, dull, soft finish so coveted these days.

Bird Pictures Are Smart in Dinette or Breakfast Nook

TO brighten the dinette or breakfast nook are some brand new, inexpensive but gay and colorful bird pictures. They are in natural wood frames, on colored mats, and each shows one of three or four different birds of brilliant plumage. The price is so low you can afford to get several, and to give them away for Christmas presents, as well. Sold in a Chicago store.

Simple Tools Aid in Cutting Quilt Patches

QUILT makers whose fingers ache from cutting out thousands of small patches will find relief in the news that this work may be lightened if they only will equip themselves with a simple set of tools. If there is a handy man about the house he will never miss the things needed for cutting patches.

In their simplest form these tools are a woodworking chisel, a mallet, and a block of hard wood. The chisel should be about an inch wide and as short as possible. It may be an old one which has been cut down both in blade and in handle. The mallet should be moderately heavy with a broad face, and the block of wood should be at least 6 inches square and made of edge grain wood, so that repeated use will not cause it to splinter or roughen.

When a number of patches are to be cut from the same pattern the design should be transferred to a piece of thin cardboard and carefully cut out, allowing, of course, for the seams. The required number of pieces of material is piled up on the wood block, the cardboard pattern placed on top, and the whole fastened securely in place with thin nails, or with tacks if the pile is not too deep. The nails will not harm the patches if they are driven through the part allowed for seams.

The entire pile now is cut in one operation by driving the chisel through the material, always holding the flat face of the chisel against the edge of the pattern and making sure that it is vertical so that it will not undercut the pattern and ruin the patches at the bottom of the pile.

The ease of the work will depend upon the sharpness of the chisel, and if this is properly attended to it will be found that most of the cutting may be done by simply pressing down while slowly rocking the chisel, without the necessity of using the mallet. Fewer accidents to the fingers will occur if the mallet is shaped like a paddle with a broad surface, rather than like a hammer, and a rubber floor tile mounted on a wooden base will make an excellent substitute for the edge grain wood.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, Dec. 16.

Greenhouse hydrangeas are frequently hardy if carefully protected and left in the ground out of doors. Invert a keg or half barrel over the plant and keep filled with leaves, covering to prevent a continuous wet condition. Many semi-tender plants may be kept if protected in this manner. Protect the trunks of fruit trees and many ornamentals by wrapping the trunks with building paper or wire netting. Place the lower part below the ground to prevent mice from working beneath the wire. Drain shallow lily pools and fill them with straw or leaves. Leave open drains. Allow fallen leaves to remain on shrubbery borders. They are sufficient for adequate protection during winter.

Tuesday, Dec. 17.

Growing plants obtained from the florist should be given a little food about once a month. Keep pans of water on radiators to increase the humidity in the atmosphere. Trays of moist pebbles beneath pans or pots of bulbous plans tend to keep the plants from drying out. Poinsettia plants are developing their flowers at this time. They do best in a temperature of 60 to 70 degrees. Do not allow the soil to dry out and protect the plants from cold drafts or the leaves will turn yellow and fall.

Wednesday, Dec. 18.

The experienced gardener prunes his plants at any time. Dead wood may be removed whenever noticed. Shrubs are dormant at this time and pruning may begin on any bright day. The rule is to prune after flowering. This is to prevent the amateur from cutting out the flowering wood that was made the previous year. Keep the center of the plant open. Then it is always in order to keep rampant growths trimmed back for shape.

Thursday, Dec. 19.

Winter spraying may be started at any time. Every gardener should have a good compressed air spraying outfit with accessories sufficient to reach fairly tall trees. The most common and destructive insects are the San José and oyster shell scale and occasionally scurfy scale and cottony maple scale. Lime sulphur solutions are the standard insecticide. They can be purchased ready mixed. Miscible oils are excellent, as they spread freely and readily enter crevices. Old shoots or canes of blackberry and raspberry plants should be cut out and remaining growths cut back slightly.

Friday, Dec. 20.

Why not make this a gardener's Christmas by presenting friends with something they can use in connection with their garden work? Tools, books, packets of seed, gloves, orders for plant materials, etc., make excellent gifts. Instead of the usual cut evergreen as a Christmas tree, why not buy a live tree and plant it in a conspicuous spot on the lawn and decorate it with electric lights? More and more are citizens using this idea and it is a good one. The cost is small.

Saturday, Dec. 21.

Cold drafts are sometimes injurious to house plants. This is especially true if the plants stand close to a window. Move the plants away from windows or place sheets of newspaper between the window and the plants. This is easy to do and may save considerable trouble. Interesting and effective small plants for low pans are asparagus plumosus, asparagus sprengeri, baby's tears, club mosses, or small seedlings of grape fruit. Try growing one of the large seeds of the avacado [alligator pear] in a glass of water. Take three toothpicks, insert them in tripod form in the base, and place the seed in the glass. In a few weeks roots will appear and a long sprout grow from the top. Later the glass is broken and the rooted seed planted in a pot.

Lounging Ensembles Rival Most Glamorous of Evening Gowns

In the center panel, at the left, is shown a velvet hostess gown that will make the most blasé clothes collector gasp for adjectives. It is high and formal in front and deeply gouged out and gracefully draped at the back. It has a slithery train and long, long, softly falling sleeves that trail the floor. Add to all this a wide, bejeweled belt of kidskin, and the result is the perfect hostess gown. The housecoat portrayed at the right in this panel is a long, swirling affair of taffeta made with full, puffed sleeves, a wide skirt, a simple, slenderizing collar, and a tie belt.

in this advertisement. Why? Because everybody knows Philco! Philco radios are giving satisfaction to over 6,000,000 owners today. This year alone, 1,600,000 Philco radios will be produced. These facts speak for themselves. Philco, without question, is America's favorite and fastest selling radio. Its cabinets, its mechanism, its performance, are the standard by which all radio comparisons are made. Philco values today are greater than ever in its history. That's why we select Philco as the feature of our Radio Sale of Sales. That's why illustrations can add nothing to our announcement that—"Tomorrow Is Philco Day at The Fair."

We Quote No Prices . . . .

in this advertisement. Why? Because our sensational Philco Day offers are not limited to only one or two or six of Philco's models. Every one of the 49 Philco models is included in this great sale at special prices. Tomorrow we offer maximum trade-in allowances of 10%, 15%, 20%, yes, as much as 30%, depending upon the radio you select. And, in addition, we offer many extra inducements . . . valuable gifts in the Yuletide spirit, special terms—all arranged for Philco Day, all intended to make it worth your while to buy your radio for Christmas tomorrow, at The Fair.

We Stage Factory Demonstrations

. . . on Philco Day. We will present in our radio department not only a great array of radio bargains, but also a series of interesting exhibits to acquaint you with the latest achievements of radio science. Representatives of the Philco factory will be on hand to demonstrate the newest developments of the great Philco laboratories, such as the amazing Built-In Aerial Tuning System, an exclusive Philco invention that doubles the number of foreign stations you can get and enjoy in your homes . . . scientific High Fidelity . . . Inclined Sounding Board . . . Shadow Tuning and many other improvements that have made the 1936 Philco the superb instrument that it is. They will help you realize, as we do, the tremendous strides radio has taken under Philco leadership. They will help you realize, too, how a 1936 Philco will bring you infinitely greater joys from the rich programs of modern broadcasting than your present radio can possibly give unless, indeed, you now own a 1936 Philco.

Bargains of Every Description . . . . . .

. . . You will find an inviting array of bargains in our radio department for Philco Day—models of every description, at every price. Table models and compacts, beautiful floor type consoles, superb inclined sounding board models and radios of period design, many in antique finish. Also new models, just announced by Philco for Christmas and displayed in our radio department for the first time. Radio phonograph combinations, too, some with automatic record changers. You will find Philco automobile radios on sale at tremendous bargain prices.

SPECIAL PHILCO DAY Terms . . . .

You need no cash to buy on Philco Day. Take your choice—NO MONEY DOWN! No payments to make until next year. These terms are special for Philco Day only. And remember, maximum trade-in allowances—as high as 30%—will be made on your old radio tomorrow!

Floor Samples and Demonstrators . . .

A snap for early shoppers! If you come early and are on time, you can have your choice of just 25 floor samples and demonstrators which we are closing out at smashing reductions. A variety of models, consoles, baby grands and "X" models. First come, first served.

A final word! For TWO reasons, don't miss this history-making event! FIRST, because Philco Day brings you the year's biggest radio savings! Second, because we have just had word from Philco that PRICES WILL GO UP in a few days without notice! So you make a DOUBLE SAVING if you buy Monday—the special Philco Day saving and the increased price you will have to pay if you wait! The most popular styles will go fast—so be here early!

Dream of Empire Stirs Japan

THE mailed fist of the "Son of Heaven" strikes again in China. Nippon's foreign policy—to spread Japanese trade and culture throughout the orient and to establish a Japanese "Monroe doctrin" for the far east—is being defined today, as it has in the past, by divisions of Japanese soldiers, well trained and equipped with all of the newest machines of modern warfare.

There is nothing new in the policy behind Japan's impending grab of north China. It was born in the sixteenth century. In 1592 a Japanese army, created and inspired by the great warrior shogun Hideyoshi, called by historians the "Napoleon of Japan," invaded Corea. The advance of this army was stopped by the Chinese, but only the death of Hideyoshi in 1598 brought an end to the fighting. The succeeding shogun did not share Hideyoshi's dream of expanding empire, and the Japanese army was called home.

In those days the emperor, although a sacred person, was not the actual ruler of Japan. The ruler was the shogun, or most powerful of the ruling feudal chieftains. Abolition of the feudal system and the development of the more democratic form of government existing in Japan today came about in comparatively recent times. Following the death of Hideyoshi, Japan entered the Tokugawa period, which was the era of almost complete isolation.

Efforts of white men, chiefly Spanish, Dutch, and Portuguese, to establish trade and spread Christianity in Japan were strongly resisted. All foreigners were considered barbarians, and it was not until 1853, when Commodore Perry of the American navy made his historic call on the rulers of Japan, that the people of the island empire were permitted to have any dealings with outsiders.

The success of America in establishing trade and diplomatic relations with Japan was quickly followed up by other foreign powers. The Japanese government and people made a complete about- [Continued on page eight.]

Chicago Stage Gets Five New Shows for Holidays

Best Bets of B'way Coming for Holidays

'Personal Appearance' to Open at Harris on Dec. 20 with Gladys George.

By Charles Collins.

IF one waits long enough the unexpected will happen, the impossible will manifest itself as true, and the miracle will come to pass. Let the soul be possessed with infinite patience and eventually one will find the man biting the dog, the hen growing teeth, and blood dripping from the pressed turnip. Also one will see new plays coming to Chicago in abundance.

The latter miracle is scheduled for the approaching Christmas holidays. It will begin on Dec. 20 and continue until Dec. 26—a week that will contain the openings of five engagements, each of decided interest. This state of affairs recalls the good old pre-depression and pre-movie days when the merry Yuletide in Chicago was a long succession of workaday groans for dramatic critics.

In order to prepare the playgoing public for this embarrassment of premières, I will drop into my informative style and present the facts about these five theatrical productions. My opinion as to their value as works of art will be withheld, of course, until after I have seen the performances; my present task will be that of a historian and cataloguer. Here goes:

Comedy About Movie Queen on Tour.

"Personal Appearance"—Opens at the Harris theater on Friday, Dec. 20, as a successor to the long-lived "Three Men on a Horse," which ended its run last night. This is a comedy dealing with the vagaries of a motion picture star, graciously permitting herself to be seen in person by vaudeville audiences. It was written by Lawrence Riley and produced by Brock Pemberton; it had a run of 503 performances in the Henry Miller theater, New York.

The central rôle is acted by Gladys George, a new girl to Chicago audiences. She has bounced up into steller position on the strength of this hit; her photographs reveal her as a comely young person, and Manhattan experts have proclaimed her a clever comedienne. The story on a thumb nail: Film beauty on tour is stranded by accident in small Pennsylvania town and gets tangled up with a good looking young gasoline vender.

Musical Show with Star Comedians.

"Anything Goes"—Opens at the Grand Opera house on Sunday, Dec. 22. A musical comedy which had 419 performances in the Alvin theater, New York. Songs by the well known Cole Porter; libretto by Guy Bolton, P. G. Wodehouse, Howard Lindsay, and Russel Crouse. The chief comedians are William Gaxton and Victor Moore, whose careers came to a peak in the New York company of "Of Thee I Sing" and its sequel, "Let 'Em Eat Cake." They have not appeared in Chicago for a number of years. The leading women of the large cast are Benay Venuta and Irene Delroy. Reported by all observers as a handsome, tuneful, and comic production. The story on a dime: Public Enemy No. 13, disguised as a clergyman, flees to Europe, taking his machine gun aboard ship; he meets a gentleman stowaway, and the pair have woman trouble in the ship's night club department.

"The Old Maid"—Opens at the Erlanger theater on Monday, Dec. 23. Zoe Akin's dramatization of Edith Wharton's novel, with Helen Menken and Judith Anderson as co-stars and the original New York cast. This play was last year's Pulitzer prize winner and was also ranked by Burns Mantle among his "ten best." It has a run of 305 performances at the Empire theater, New York. It is a drama of emotional tendency—mother love, frustrated maternal ambition, etc. The story in a puff: Old maid devotes her life to bringing up an illegitimate child.

Russian Farce Re-opens Blackstone.

"Squaring the Circle"—Opens at the Blackstone theater on Wednesday, Dec. 25. This is a play of modern Russion authorship [Valentine Katayev is the author's name, if it means anything to you], and, marvelous to relate, it is said to be funny instead of dismal. Moreover, it pokes fun in a farcical way at communist habits. It was produced in Russia seven years ago and has had about 15,000 performances there.

The play was staged in New York last September and is still running. This is a special company for Chicago and a tour. Glenn Hunter and Muriel Kirkland are the leaders of the cast. The story in a nip of vodka: Abram and Vasya, bright lads living in one room, get married to Tonia and Ludmilla all of a sudden, and bring the girl comrades home to their cubicle, which thus becomes an overcrowded love nest for four.

Spectacle of Vienna Waltz Kings.

"The Great Waltz"—Opens at the Auditorium theater on Thursday, Dec. 26. An operetta spectacle ["musical romance" is the program label] that was a great tourist attraction in New York last year. It had 298 performances in the Center theater [Radio City] in the season of 1934-'35, but it also carried over into the current season. Music by Johann Strauss, father and son; libretto of European origin, adapted by Moss Hart; produced by the eminently successful Max Gordon and staged in a spectacular way by Hassard Short.

Guy Robertson, Marion Claire, and Gladys Baxter are the leading singers in a large cast. The last half hour of the show is said to contain fireworks of stagecraft that elicit Ohs and Ahs of admiration from the customers. The story in a Viennese roll: Papa Johann Strauss, the waltz king, is jealous of his son's unrecognized talent, but a Russian lady kidnaps the old maestro and gives the junior a chance to introduce a neat new thing in watzes called "The Blue Danube."

Now to wait for a few days until one discovers if Chicago's Christmas gift of shows will live up to its prospectus.

Fourth Guild Play.

The Theater Guild's fourth New York production of this season will be "Call It a Day," by Dodie Smith, with Philip Merivale and Gladys Cooper in the leading rôles. The play opened late in October in London. It is a comedy of life in a middle class suburban family.

STAR IN DRAMA FOR HOLIDAYS

Prima Donna

BENAY VENUTA, blonde prima donna of "Anything Goes," came to the footlights from the field of radio entertainment. She was born in San Francisco, but grew up in Hollywood. While a high school student she earned pin money by working in the chorus at Grauman's Egyptian theater in the prolog to the picture, "The Big Parade."

She made her musical comedy debut at the age of 13 in a Pacific coast production, "Tip Toes." Two years in Fanchon and Marco vaudeville followed and then came a radio job in San Francisco. She sang, wrote continuity, helped produce and sold radio accounts.

She received her first radio chance in New York last year. Thereafter she was a feature over the Columbia network until her engagement in "Anything Goes."

Cabarets Get New Programs for Holidays

Chez Paree Plans for Libby Holman's Return with New Performers.

WHEN Libby Holman opens at the Chez Paree on Friday, Dec. 27, she will be surrounded by a new revue. Featured in the new cast will be Babs Ryan and her brothers, radio trio formerly with Fred Waring's Pennsylvanians. Allan Cross and Henry Dunn, song comedians, are now in their third week at the Chez Paree. Recent additions to the current revue are Jean Travers, soprano, formerly featured in the Theater Guild's revue, "Parade," and Bobby May, humorous juggler.

● The Edgewater Beach hotel opened a new show in its Marine dining room last night which features Sonya and Romero, dance team. The new bill includes the Jordan trio, who offer innovations in skating tricks. Herbie Kay's orchestra continues.

● The Hotel Sherman's College inn continues its ice show, while George Olsen, Ethel Shutta, and the band offer cabaret entertainment. Miss Shutta features "You Let Me Down," in which she burlesques the torch singers.

● A specially arranged production for New Year's eve will be presented by George Nelidoff and his company returning to the Walnut room of the Bismarck hotel. The troupe has had a successful engagement in the Schroeder hotel, Milwaukee, since its departure from the Walnut room. Leonard Keller and his dance orchestra will provide the music.

● Special pre-holiday programs by Horace Heidt and his Brigadiers troupe are being presented in the Gold Coast room of the Drake. The Four King Sisters, Lysbeth Hughes, singing harpist, the Radio Ramblers, Jerry Bowne and Art Thorsen, and the Glee club are featured, and Frances Willer is the novelty dancer.

● Seymour Simons and his orchestra have begun their fifth month in the Continental room at the Stevens hotel. The band features Mary Jane Walsh, Doc Davis, Nelson Bitterman, Zev Clay and Norman Cast. Bouche's "Continental Revue" is presented in forty minute performances at dinner and again at midnight.

The Co-Dance group, led by Judith Ford, offers "Mood Indigo" and "Jassnocracy," and the Three Bernard Brothers with the Duval Sisters give a satire on modern dancing. The dinner entertainment also features Mildred and Maurice in a waltz and Rosita Ortega in Spanish dances.

● The Gay '90s café offers George de Costa, George Rosen, Betty Tarcott, Flo Hill, Rosalea Rich, and a chorus. . . . Assisting Alfred Barr's Continental Gypsies at L'Aiglon restaurant are the Globe Trotters, playing violin and accordion, and the Venetians, a violin and guitar duo. . . . Earl Rickard is now at the 885 club, with Ruth Mae, a new torch singer; the Dictators, a new dance band, and Gretchen Lee. wife of Ferenc Molnar, is mentioned for the leading rôle.

European Rights.

Dr. Edmond Pauker, international play agent, who has acquired the Central European rights, exclusive rights, exclusive of Germany, to "Night of January 16," says that the melodrama will receive as many European productions as "Men in White" or "The Trial of Mary Dugan." The first will be given in Budapest, and Lillie Darvas,

'Weep for the Virgins' Distorted View of Western Poverty

California Is Made to Look Like East Side

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—There are three of them in the play called "Weep for the Virgins." Two of them are smashed utterly and one is not any too happy at last curtain fall. They live down San Diego way in a cannery settlement that is nothing at all like anything this visitor ever saw in California. They are the daughters of an ex-burlesque queen who, having ruined her life when she married a cannery employé outside the profession and also outside her class, is determined that her daughters are going to be properly provided for.

She makes a housekeeper of Ruby, the oldest, which is a relief to mother. Mother does not like housework. She trains Clarice for the stage and Hollywood by teaching her tap dancing and keeping her on a diet. And she has an idea that Violet, with her looks and ambition, will snare a man with money.

"Weep for the Virgins" is a curiously distorted picture of the curse of poverty in California as seen through the eyes of eastern expressionists. It is the sordid, grimy, depressing poverty of New York's east side, or the northern reaches of the Bronx, where tenements are called apartments, or the silk factory towns of New Jersey. It does not remotely suggest the poverty problems of California, which, however severe they may be, are not of the squalid and hunger tortured variety familiar in the east. . . .

The burlesque mother does not make out well with her virgin daughters. Ruby, trying to make extra money as a waitress in a dance hall, is taken over by a sailor. An honest sailor, but ruthless according to his kind. Violet, seeking to make money without sacrifice, would feed a companion of the evening knockout drops. When he protests she bashes in his head and is thereafter compelled to leave town in order to avoid the police. Clarice finally weakens on her dieting. She grows too heavy to tap dance comfortably and she is so starved for sugars and sweets that she marries a man as old as her father on promise that he will let her eat as much as she wants to.

Group Theater's Staging Conscientious but Obtuse.

The Group theater, which is rather given to fighting the battles of the underprivileged and exposing the psychology of the poor and the frustrated victims of a capitalistic nation, has staged "Weep for the Virgins" with a good deal of care and practically no understanding of the situation or the types exposed.

The actors include Alexander Kirkland, J. E. Bromberg, Paula Miller, Phoebe Brand, Ruth Nelson of the first company, and Evelyn Vardon as a guest to play the mother.

The setting is dull and heavy. The audience response so far has been uncertain. . . .

"May Wine" a Plot-ful Musical Play About Psychiatrist.

Such joy as the week has produced is found in a musical play called "May Wine." Laurence Schwab produced it. You may recall Mr. Schwab as the young man who had so much fun and success doing operetta revivals for the St. Louis Municipal theater last summer that his urge to get back into the producing business was revived.

His first venture this year was not so happy. He brought a musical comedy called "Venus in Silk" east after it had done well in St. Louis. For one reason or another it did not do so well in Philadelphia and other towns where it was tried and after spending $60,000 trying to fix it, Schwab decided to forget the whole business.

"May Wine" is an original music play in that Frank Mandel adapted it from a story by Wallace Smith and Eric von Stroheim, evidently for the pictures. Oscar Hammerstein II. agreed to do the lyrics and Sigmund Romberg a score. They hoped, I assume, to produce something on the order of "Music in the Air," but more dramatic. A straight story that would tie in with lyrics and songs. The result is rather plotty. At the play's opening a diffident psychiatrist [Walter Slezak] has called the police, handed them his pistol and announced that he has just shot his wife. The police, rushing into an adjoining studio, rush back to demand the whole story. As the professor starts from the beginning there is the expected flashback to happier days.

Baroness Causes Crisis in Professor's Emotional Life.

From which point you are brought through the professor's meeting with a pair of impecunious Austrians who would live by their wits and support their fading titles. One, a baron [Walter Woolf King], whom the professor meets in a barber shop, introduces him to a baroness [Nancy McCord], who is seeking to capitalize her voice. The professor loves the baroness. The baroness would attach herself to the professor's money and return post-haste to the baron.

But the baroness learns to love the professor, though she can't make him believe it. Naturally she is greatly surprised when he suffers a mental aberration and would do murder. When they get to the epilogue you discover it wasn't the baroness the professor shot, but a wax figure of the baroness which he had made to sit at the end of his desk and keep him company.

A bit labored, altogether fanciful and not extremely interesting, this sort of manufactured story, even when decorated with sentimental and romantic songs. But the Romberg score may save it. The songs are rather nice. "I Built a Dream" and "Something New Is in My Heart" among them. And a lightly smoldering torch number, "Somebody Ought to Be Told." . . .

"Dead End" and "Boy Meets Girl" May Take to Road.

Reports from the touring country are so encouraging that it now seems likely several additional companies will be sent out carrying recent Broadway hits with them. Last week report was current that Norman Bel Geddes is building a road production of "Dead End," which is definitly a New York drama if ever there was one. George Abbott is prepared and his backers are agreed, I hear, that a second and possibly a third company should be organized to offer the new [illegible] "Boy Meets Girl," to at least the key cities of the country before spring. Herman Shumlin is casting a second company to play "The Children's Hour" in Boston as, I suspect, a test booking. If Boston will pass it, then the key cities at least will be open.

Max Gordon is beaming because of the success of "The Great Waltz" on tour. This rather exceptional musical comedy has been returning weekly profits of from $6,000 to $10,000, and those were big figures even before the depression. "The country's playgoers," insists Max, "are proving two things to me through their response to this play: One, that they are eager for the flesh and blood drama if it is competently done. Second, that there is a definite swing toward clean stories. Not only with 'The Great Waltz,' but with 'Pride and Prejudice' we have had the same experience."

Eva Le Gallienne, who has been carrying the torch for art and the serious drama through the country, has returned to New York for a fortnight's contact with her old public. She is playing "Rosmersholm" as her principal Ibsen offering, "Camille" as a vehicle with which to prove to audiences seeing her for the first time that she can act, and a couple of Spanish comedies, "A Sunny Morning" and "The Women Have Their Way," by the Quinteros, for week-end bills.

Miss Le Gallienne is honest in her determination to keep her prices within reach of the majority that has been unable to enjoy the living theater for some time because of the cost of it. Therefore, she tours with settings of drapes, black velvet, for "Camille," with a sidewall or two and selected furniture to set it off; gray velvet for Ibsen, similarly treated. She has set her top price at $2. She charges no more than that in New York. It is an honorable and praiseworthy plan and will work so long as she does not let her productions become too shabby. Playgoers still expect a good deal of the theater.

"I FOUND STELLA PARISH"

Somehow or other this doesn't look a lot like Kay Francis—but Kay Francis it is! The pretty lady may be seen now in "I Found Stella Parish." It's at the Chicago.

'MOANIN' LOW' GIRL AS CABARET STAR

Libby Holman will make her first appearance in Chicago since "Three's a Crowd" at the Chez Paree on Dec. 27. She will sing as the star of a new cabaret revue. She has been in retirement since the tragic death of her husband in 1932. [Marcus Bleckman Photo.]

By Mae Tinee.

GOOD morning!

"Trans-Atlantic Tunnel" was adopted from a novel by Bernard Kellermann. Its basic idea—the building of a tunnel on the ocean floor between New York and London, for the primary purpose of promoting peace between the two great English speaking nations—has the Jules Verne flavor and vision.

So competent has been the technical carrying out of the idea that such an undertaking seems not only plausible—but probable.

This picture, with its scenes set in the comparatively near future, features in its action such wonders as television, radium gauges, and strange aircraft—comparable to the present autogiro—which can cross the ocean in several hours, making the trip from London to Manhattan a mere commuter's journey. And all a man has to do to secure prompt communication with another anywhere is to reach out his hand and press a button or turn a switch.

President and Prime Minister Address Congress, Parliament.

Fantastic as it all seems, it's far from being as fantastic as it would have appeared in pre-radio days. If you can believe in the radio you can believe in anything. Can't you?

One of the most remarkable of its sequences is that which shows congress and parliament meeting simultaneously—in Washington and London—with the President of the United States addressing congress and parliament and the prime minister of England talking to both bodies—through the medium of television.

Walter Huston is the President. George Arliss is the prime minister and the episodes featuring these great actors ring so true that the blood pounds in your ears.

Richard Dix is seen as the brilliant, altruistic engineer who conceives the idea of the tunnel. He makes his character a dominant figure, hard-driving, resourceful, incorruptibly sincere.

Triangle Weakest Aspect of Story.

Leslie Banks plays his loyal friend in arresting fashion. Madge Evans as the hero's wife is a beguiling creature whose jealousy of another woman is understandable—though the reasons outlined in the picture for her husband's [purely business on his part] relations with this girl are the weak strand in the story fabric. Undoubtedly this situation—and a number of others—are incorporated for the purpose of pointing a moral: To illustrate how great enterprises can be crippled by selfish considerations and greed for personal gain.

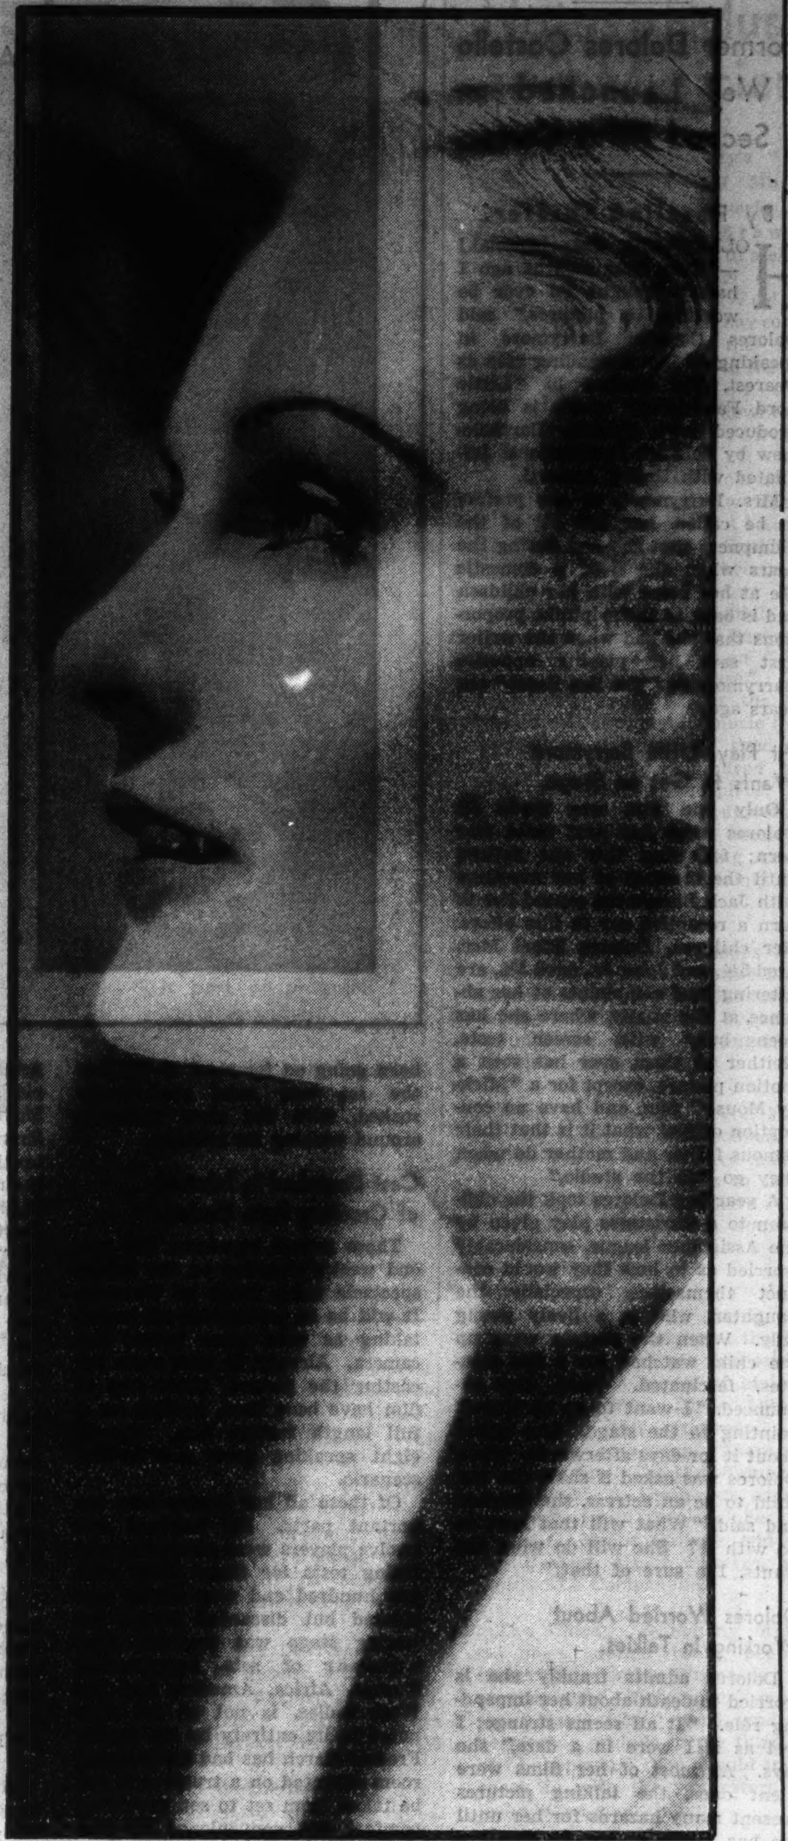
As the two crews—one from New York, one from London—work toward one another beneath the surging seas of the Atlantic, your interest in their progress mounts feverishly.

Stock manipulations, submarine volcanos, misunderstandings, hates, tragedies, are seen one by one as insurmountable obstructions to the great plan. But though tears flow, blood spills, fires rage, and lives are snuffed out—the work goes on to a wildly inspiring finish.

The acting is all magnificent.

But—the man at the helm—Director Maurice Elvey—was the driving power. And to him belongs the lion's share of the glory.

SURE IS GROWN UP



Isn't this a charming study of Madge Evans? This once popular child star who grew up to be a great big popular lady star has the leading feminine role in "Transatlantic Tunnel." At the Palace.

Ex-Wife of Barrymore Is Hard at Work

Former Dolores Costello Well Launched on Second Film Career.

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special.]—"Even four months ago I hadn't thought I'd ever be working in pictures," said Dolores Costello Barrymore in speaking of her impending rôle as Dearest, the mother in "Little Lord Fauntleroy," which is being produced with Freddie Bartholomew by Selznick International [affiliated with United Artists].

Mrs. Barrymore, as she prefers to be called, has lost all of the plumpness that she had during the years when she lived a domestic life at her home with her children and is back to the sylphlike proportions that she had when the writer first saw her playing opposite Barrymore in "The Sea Beast" ten years ago.

At Play, Little Barrymore Wants to Get on Stage.

Only one film was made by Dolores after her first child was born; following this she retired until the crackup of her marriage with Jack Barrymore caused her to turn a receptive ear to film offers. Her children, Dolores Ethel Mae, aged 5½, and John Jr., aged 3½, are uttering loud complaints at her absence at the studio, where she has been busy with screen tests. Neither of them ever has seen a motion picture, except for a "Mickey Mouse" film, and have no conception of just what it is that their famous father and mother do when they go "to the studio."

A year ago Dolores took the children to a Christmas play given by the Assistance league, considerably worried as to how they would conduct themselves, especially the daughter, who is a lively young lady. When the curtain went up the child watched for a few minutes, fascinated. Then she announced, "I want to go up there," pointing to the stage. She talked about it for days afterwards. When Dolores was asked if she'd like her child to be an actress, she laughed and said, "What will that have to do with it? She will do what she wants, I'm sure of that."

Dolores Worried About Working in Talkies.

Dolores admits frankly she is worried to death about her impending rôle. "It all seems strange; I feel as if I were in a daze," she says. As most of her films were silent ones, the talking pictures present many hazards for her until she has a rôle or two to give her confidence in herself. Some color tests have been made of Dolores at the studio, but she expresses herself as frankly dubious about color films until more natural effects are achieved. So far, she thinks the emphasis on the color of settings and costumes detracts from the interest in the actors.

A little color psychology of her own was divulged. She confesses that in a moment of exuberance she bought a red sports suit and is now hopefully waiting for the courage to wear it!

Steffi Duna, playing Neleeta, the half-breed, and Pedro De Cordoba, playing Brother François, were enacting the scene in which Anthony Adverse, lying perilously ill with fever, is sought by Brother François. Neleeta prevents the friar from seeing Anthony [Fredric March], and sends him away to leave the plantation forever.

This episode from the African slave dealer experiences of Adverse was dramatically rendered by the dynamic little Steffi under the direction of Mervyn Leroy. The set, a bungalow with surrounding veranda, was being constantly showered by studio rain to make the drip, drip from the eaves, and the pouring of rain outside whenever the door opened. As the scenes had been going on for most of the day the set was most realistically soaked, with the crew tiptoeing around wishing for rubbers.

These scenes represent the second week's shooting on the heroic spectacle being made by Warners. It will be as pretentious an undertaking as ever came before the camera. Already, in tests made for casting the picture, 12,000 feet of film have been used, enough for a full length feature film. Ninety-eight speaking parts are in the scenario.

Of these all but twenty take important parts. Six hundred and twelve players were given film and dialog tests for these rôles, with one hundred and nine others considered but discarded before the testing stage was reached. The number of sets, representing Europe, Africa, America, and the West Indies, is not as yet computed in its entirety by the studio. Fredric March has had his dressing room mounted on a truck so it can be taken from set to set, providing comfort and convenience for him on location or at the studio.

Herbert Mundin Hangs Up Record for Teetotalling.

At the Chaplin tea for H. G. Wells, Herbert Mundin, English comedian, proudly announced that he has carried himself through cocktail parties for the last eight months unsullied by anything stronger than ginger ale. "My grandfather, Bill Mundin, stayed on the water wagon from the time he was 22 until his death at the age of 93. And what do you suppose his deathbed request was for? Just for one bottle of beer!" said Mundin.

In "Next Time We Love," at Universal, Margaret Sullavan and James Stewart were photographed watching a pair of rare and valuable osculating fish osculate. As the heat of the lights became too intense for the welfare of the kissing fish, their owner rushed in and provided doubles for them and the scene proceeded.

Greta Garbo, vacationing in her native Sweden, will return in May to make "Camille" as her next screen vehicle.

Stu Erwin thoroughly dislikes airplanes and because of it Hollywood's aviators have put over a stunt that has him worried. The impending air race between Los Angeles and the Playa Ensenada in old Mexico has Jimmy Dunn, Ken Maynard, Wallace Beery, George Brent, and the rest all busy tuning up their motors and fussing around their planes. Jimmy Cagney is to be the starter and he has phenagled Erwin into accepting the position of "advisory starter," which has Erwin worried, as he isn't sure just what it implies. Stu has a lurking fear that he might have to be the last to leave the ship in case of trouble.

Gigi Parrish is busy house hunting, as her family, consisting of father, mother, three boys, and two sisters, have announced their intentions of coming from Philadelphia to spend the holidays with her.

Joseph Santley, former musical comedy star, has moved up to big time directing after Suly's work with small companies. Santley will megaphone "Her Master's Voice" for Paramount with Edward Everett Horton and Peggy Conklin.

The M-G-M studio is finally getting actors for "The Good Earth." They've solved their casting difficulties by going to San Francisco and getting Chinese there, some of them professional men, not actors, but willing to try acting at a price.

Gladys George has the central role in "Personal Appearance," the comedy which will begin an engagement at the Harris theater next Friday night after a long run in New York.

"CASE OF THE LUCKY LEGS"

BitsABOUTem

Motherhood certainly doesn't hamper the style of feminine film stars! Now that NORMA SHEARER'S new baby is five months old, she's calmly preparing the movie version of "Romeo and Juliet" for the delectation of her fans. JOAN BENNETT has been doing her best film work since the advent of little Melinda Markey. After the birth of Joel McCrea Jr. Frances Dee staged a screen return in "Becky Sharp" and, with her other small boy but a few weeks old, she contemplates a screen return in several months. EVELYN VENABLE, who recently presented her husband with a daughter, is negotiating with a film company concerning a new movie rôle. JOAN BLONDELL, VIRGINIA BRUCE, SALLY EILERS, KAREN MORLEY, and DIXIE LEE are all proud mamas who have kept right on with their silver sheet shining, and then there are ANN HARDING, GLORIA SWANSON and MARLENE DIETRICH. OWEN MORE, one time popular star of the silent screen—and, of course, also known as the one time husband of Mary Pickford—is in New York to do a play—stage play—called "The Season Changes."

Says ERNEST B. SCHOEDSACK of "Grass," "Chang," and "Four Feathers" fame: "The day of the expeditionary picture is over. Because better jungle films can be concocted in Hollywood than in the heart of Africa. . . . Even such an elaborately equipped party as that of Rear Admiral Byrd had to return to Hollywood for the making of nearly a third of "Little America" . . . the film used today, highly sensitized for incandescent lighting, will not stand up under the rigors of a two year trip; the cost of transporting sound and other technicians is prohibitive. . . . GENE AUTRY, crooning "western" player is bewailing the high cost of cowboy outfits. In less than a year, he says, he's had to buy ten pairs of boots at $50 a pair, six ten-gallon hats at $50 a hat, twenty-five fancy shirts at $25 a shirt, and fifteen pairs of pants at $25 a pair. Goshalhemlocks!

We hear that, under an assumed name, JOAN BENNETT writes on interior decoration for two national magazines. . . . MAX BAER is said to be studying English and direction under a private tutor, preparatory to bursting anew into the films. . . . JEAN HARLOW has one favorite hat that she's had copied in various materials to suit the seasons for more than four years. . . . UNA MERKEL'S hobby is collecting odd handkerchiefs. She has hundreds of 'em. . . . FLORENCE LAWRENCE, nationally famous as "The Biograph Girl" in 1909 will have a small rôle with RICHARD DIX in "Mother Lode."

Critic Casts Up Artistic Accounts of Opera Season Just Past

Formidable Works Most Skilfully Done

Long Labors on Them Explain Mediocre Singing of Lighter Music.

By Edward Barry.

THIS is not the inside story of the opera season. It is simply an attempt to evaluate the work that Paul Longone's company has done in the five weeks that ended eight days ago. The squabbles and charges and countercharges are not my business. The operatic milestones are.

The Chicago City Opera company, which inherited the mantle and the manager of the Chicago Civic Opera company, gave twenty-nine performances between Nov. 2 and Dec. 7. Twenty and one-half operas were presented [the half being the bit of "Pagliacci" on Nov. 23] and three full size ballets. The percentage of repetitions was especially small during the early part of the season. There was none until the start of the third week.

Besides its regular subscription performances the company gave one popular price opera, two special presentations for the school children and one for Mildred Gerber's debut on Thanksgiving night. These are all included in the above computation.

Two Novelties Performed.

If you compare the original plans with the accomplished facts, you find a high measure of achievement. In the company's printed répertoire in the program books two novelties are listed, "Gale" and "La Fiamma." Both of them were performed. The projected revival in English of "La Rondine" and "The Secret of Suzanne" remained a project to the end, but all the other works under this heading [with the unimportant exception of "The Jewels"] appeared sooner or later on the schedule.

In the standard répertoire three out of the four French operas came to the stage. The company promised three in German and delivered 100 per cent. "Tosca" is the only standard Italian work that never quite arrived.

On the other side of the ledger stands "Turandot," an afterthought. It was one of the three great achievements of the season and, in one person's opinion anyway, goes a long way toward cancelling out the minor lapses listed in the preceding paragraphs. I think it is reasonable to say that the company did what it promised.

Most Rehersals Devoted to Difficult Operas.

Now about the quality of the performances. It has been a curiously uneven season. The most striking feature of this uneveness is that the poorest performances came in the easiest operas. Such immense tasks as "Rosenkavalier," "Turandot," and "Fiamma," were finished smoothly and competently. The explanation of this phenomenon lies in the fact that rehersals are expensive, and that the company wisely [or unwisely, according to your point of view], decided to give most of the rehersal time to the extremely difficult works and just take a chance on some of the others. I am perverse enough to applaud this policy in a season when money is scarce. The loss of "Fiamma" would be far too high a price to pay for slightly smoother performances of some of the deadlier of the ancient standbys. There is no denying, though, that the policy can be carried too far and work a hardship on subscribers and singers alike.

The first of the season's three great achievements came on Saturday afternoon, Nov. 16, when "Rosenkavalier" was sung by a cast that included Lehmann, Stueckgold, Claire, List, and Ringling. Henry Weber conducted. The sweet Strauss music and the gayety of the story were two of the reasons for the success of the performance; a more important one was the perfection and enthusiasm of the cast, from principals down to silent supers.

Raisa and Tokatyan Magnificent in "Turandot."

Puccini's overpowering "Turandot" filled the stage with color and the theater with sound the following Wednesday, Nov. 20. Raisa and Tokatyan turned in a magnificent performance of their intricate parts. Gennaro Papi was in charge.

On the last Monday of the season came the long awaited American première of "La Fiamma." Raisa and Bentonelli sang the leads and Richard Hageman conducted. Mari Barova distinguished herself as the troublesome Eudossia. Respighi's music made a tremendous impression on the audience and combined with the lavish stage pictures to work up the greatest enthusiasm of the season.

Other performances exceptional for one reason or another were "Don Giovanni," "Thaïs," "Gale," and "Lucia." The first cast Pinza in the rôle of the don, and Edith Mason as Zerlina; the second brought Helen Jepson here for the name part, and John Charles Thomas as the male lead; the third marked the first time a woman composer of opera had ever conducted her own work in a major house; the fourth was the vehicle for a successful debut by Mildred Gerber.

Schedule Sparkled with Brilliant Singers.

The Ruth Page ballet proved a good drawing card. Besides a great deal of incidental work it took the spotlight for three separate performances. In addition to Miss Page, the corps de ballet boasts as principals Blake Scott and Bentley Stone.

The five week schedule sparkled with names. Ezio Pinza, Edith Mason, Joseph Bentonelli, Armand Tokatyan, Mario Chamlee, Rosa Raisa, Helen Jepson, John Charles Thomas, Lotte Lehmann, Chase Baromeo, Marion Claire, Carlo Morelli, Emanuel List, Grete Stueckgold, Mila Kocova, Hilda Burke—there is not a one here whose presence would not glorify any opera house in the wide world.

The list is not half complete because it does not include some of the men and women whose excellence we take for granted. Mari Barova, Eleanor La Mance, and Ada Paggi are good examples. Among the men, Giuseppe Cavadore, Lodovico Oliviero, Frederic Jencks, Wilfred Engelman, Mark Love, Norman Cordon, Virgilio Lazzari, Pompilio Malatesta.

Coe Glade and Jean Tennyson rose several steps nearer stardom this winter. Both of them have looks, brains, voice, and acting ability. Frank Forest, William Martin, Sidney Rayner, and Jean Fardulli made successful Chicago debuts in the course of the season. So did Anna Leskaya and Mildred Gerber, to mention only two.

Three Great Conductors Each Scaled One High Peak.

The directors of the company gave important and difficult parts to Rosalinda Morini, Hilda Ohlin, Geri Dorsey, Sonia Sharnova, Maria Matyas, and Helen Bartush. All six delivered. The last was found in the opera audition contest and has had a good first season. If your favorite singer has not been mentioned please remember that the list does not pretend to be complete.

The great conductors this year were Gennaro Papi [now unhappily resigned], Richard Hageman, and Henry Weber. Each of these men scaled one of the high peaks of the season. Desire Defrere handled stage management, and Harry W. Beatty details of setting and lighting. Dino Bigalli acted as chorus master and conducted several times besides. Otto Vandsburger took one or two performances.

With the possible exception of New York [and such festival towns as Salzburg and Bayreuth where the situation is hardly comparable], no city in the world habitually plays host to so many first rate opera stars in so short a time. Perhaps the sixteen listed first a few paragraphs ago establish an all time high for any five weeks here or elsewhere.

When you suffer from civic inferiority complex and bemoan the fact that fate or chance or economic necessity has cast you up on the shore of what you imagine to be the outermost artistic sea, it is healthful to remember that the citizens of many older and larger towns read the news of Chicago music and pound the table in exasperation and envy. Even the cities of Europe, while they have much longer seasons, do not usually have many more big names. Virtually every artist of note at one time or another lets the dream of American gold overcome his hatred of the sea. And most of those who get as far as New York decide to stick it out and see the west.

Critic Finds Monday Subscribers Most Fortunate.

Would you be at all interested in anybody's opinion as to the relative luck of the five sets of opera subscribers? A season ticket for Monday night or Wednesday night or any other regular fivesome is a gamble, of course, although the management tries to be fair in distributing the good things around. By a little method which would look even more absurd in print than it actually is, I have arrived at the following conclusions. You incur no obligation by reading them, except the obligation of writing in if you disagree violently.

Monday night subscribers were the most fortunate of all. They had "Rosenkavalier" and "Fiamma" and were the only regular customers to see two out of the three highs of the season. Besides, they were given Pinza's "Don Giovanni" and Jepson's "Thaïs." As penance they had to sit through "Trovatore," but heard some singers in the ancient work that redeemed its dullness.

Saturday night ran close to Monday with the brilliant "Mefistofele," a performance of "Fiamma," and the world première of "Gale." "Butterfly" was excellent, and even the unrehersed "Rigoletto" had its points.

Third Luckiest Heard Saturday Matinees.

Third luckiest of the subscribers were those of Saturday afternoon. The first great peak of the season was reached during one of these sessions when a peerless cast sang "Rosenkavalier." They had a Jepson "Thaïs" and a brillian "Cavallerra" with Raisa and two ballets thrown in for good measure. Edith Mason sang Violetta for them. But there is some justice in the world, and right in the middle of the season the Saturday matinée crowd got "Tannhäuser" full in the face.

Tuesday and Wednesday finished even. Tuesday had nothing spectacular and nothing dull [the famous "Carmen" was stimulating, whatever else you may say about it]. The Wednesday subscribers were given "Turandot" and had to take "Aida" along with it.

In order to prevent the Tuesday and Wednesday people feeling that they have been defrauded, I shall have to explain that this method of computing the relative merits of the various sets of performances is by points, and that there is no great spread between top and bottom. Monday rates 48, Saturday night 46, Saturday matinée 44, Tuesday and Wednesday 39 apiece. The method is based on so many things that contain a personal equation that there would be as many results as there are people foolish enough to work it out. Unscheduled misfortunes, like sickness, may have spoiled the balance slightly. This tabulation is no guide whatever for you in the business of selecting your night for next season.

Gala Performance Is Scheduled for Next Friday.

There is a special gala performance scheduled for next Friday night, with an act of "Aida," an act of "Lucia," and a "surprise." Good-by, then, for ten months to the Chicago City Opera company. According to present plans it will reopen Nov. 2 under the same name and run six weeks instead of five. "La Fiamma" will be the curtain raiser, in case you are making any November plans now.

Jason Whitney was elected president of the company in a meeting of the board last Tuesday. He hopes to cut still further the deficit of $40,000 which caused the organization a little anxiety toward the end of the season.

Anna Fitzu, the likable secretary of the Chicago City opera, announces informally the founding of a "Don't Knock club." She asks that we look at our own opera as objectively as we would the Metropolitan or any other and consider the highs as well as the lows before indulging in any big generalizations.

Hampden's Tour.

Walter Hampden may begin a tour next month. He has not decided what plays he will take out. His plans for "Coriolanus" have been deferred until next season.

OPERA SINGER IN 'GREAT WALTZ'

N. Y.'s "Met" Opens Season Tomorrow

Wagner's "Ring," Complete, Most Ambitious Project in Its Schedule.

THE Metropolitan opera of New York is scheduled to open a fourteen weeks' season tomorrow night. Perhaps the following paragraphs will be of interest to those Chicagoans who find themselves in the eastern metropolis on business or pleasure several times a year, or who are opera conscious enough to wish to compare New York's fare with ours.

The Metropolitan opera season will run from Dec. 16 to March 22, with five subscription performances and an average of two special presentations a week. The répertoire from which the operas will be selected is not as noticeably larger than ours as the much greater span of time would indicate. The eastern outfit will repeat frequently to spread the thirty-six listed works over about a hundred performances.

New York's most ambitious opera project of the year is a matinée Wagner cycle. The music will be given without abridgement, and will include the complete "Ring." "Die Meistersinger" and "Parsifal" find a place in the répertoire and will no doubt come to the stage in the course of the cycle. The other Wagner works outside the "Ring" are "Lohengrin," "Tannhäuser," and "Tristan."

New York Hears More German Opera Than Chicago.

The Metropolitan runs far ahead of our company as far as German opera is concerned. The French and Italian répertoire of the two troupes balance out fairly evenly. We have the edge as far as spectacular novelties go; they come back with a "Pelleas" and a "Rondine." They will hear "Gianni Schicchi" of Puccini in English if present plans hold, and the ancient "Norma" and "Il Barbiere" in Italian.

Here are some of the names familiar to Chicago which appear on the Metropolitan roster: Gennaro Papi, Carlo Morelli, Hilda Burke, Chase Baromeo, Edith Mason, John Charles Thomas, Desire Defrere, Dorothee Manski, Helen Jepson, Lotte Lehmann, Kathryn Meisle, Cyrena van Gordon, Lauritz Melchoir, Virgilio Lazzari, Emanuel List, Pompilio Malatesta, Ezio Pinza, Leon Rothier. This does not include the Ravinia artists of other years who built such a following hereabouts by their frequent journeys west.

The soprano mainstays [in addition to those listed above] are Lucrezia Bori, Florence Easton, Kirsten Flagstad, Grace Moore, Lily Pons, Rosa Ponselle, Elizabeth Rethberg—what a list! Gladys Swarthout and Louise Homer are the biggest names in the mezzo and contralto division. Among the men are such known quantities as Althouse, Crooks, Hackett, Martini, Martinelli, Bonelli, and Tibbett. The only thing left to say after such a catalog is that we have a much finer opera house.

"Dress" Tradition Attacked by Directors.

Edward Johnson, general manager of the New York company, is well known here because of his years of work at the old Auditorium. He and the directors of our organization have in common a desire to see opera lose a little of its social importance and become a greater artistic event. Both companies deplore the emphasis put on dress, and hope for the day when people will drop in for an evening of music and drama without planning a costume in advance.

If you can only be happy in your old tan suit and brown brogues you may yet be welcome to a seat in the fourth row center in either opera house. You might not be completely at your ease if you should try it right now, at least in the Metropolitan.

Show for London.

THE VOICE OF THE MOVIE FAN

Letters published in this department should be written on one side of the paper. If you wish a personal reply, please inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Apropos Mrs. Milton Sills and a Missing Address!

Dear Mae Tinée: To settle a dispute, would you kindly write me the name of Milton Sills' widow? Inclosed find three cent stamp for return mail. Thank you, MRS. E. B.

Editor's note: Doris Kenyon is the widow of Milton Sills. You forgot to send your address with the stamp, or your letter would have been answered personally.

Garbo Admirer Finds Her "Anna Karenina" Charming.

Miss Mae Tinée: Anna Karenina is enchanting. Garbo lives her rôle. One is enthralled by her personality. When, in despair, she hurls herself under the wheels of the train, one cannot help but pity and love the woman who gave everything for love. Fredric March teams well with her.

Miss Tinée, don't you honestly think there is no one like her? I hope that they will appear together in another film soon. Sincerely,

A. P. MORSE.

Notes of Music and Musicians

Northwestern university's "History and Enjoyment of Music" series is drawing to a close. Next Wednesday comes the next to the last of the downtown concerts in the course when Albert Spalding brings his bow and fiddle to the Auditorium. Felix Borowski will speak at 7 p. m. on "The Violin and Its Literature." The program to follow traces the history of the instrument's music from Tartini to the present time, although it skips a hundred and fifty years or so in one place. An advance release by the university describes Spalding with becoming restraint as an outstanding American violinist. He is certainly this and a great deal more.

ALBERT SPALDING.

Alberto Salvi, the famous harp virtuoso, plays tonight at the Little Concert house at 5118 Blackstone avenue. He is assisted by an instrumental quartet consisting of violin, viola, cello, and flute.

Jessie B. Hall brings Von Hahn and De Negre to the Goodman tonight. These dancers have made a big name for themselves in Latin-American countries, where they have just completed a fourteen months' tour.

Raymond Hanson, the young Evanston pianist who played with the Symphony orchestra at the first young people's concert this season, is booked for a recital of his own in the De Paul Little theater [downtown] this afternoon. His program is ambitious. There are excerpts from "The Well-Tempered Clavichord," a Beethoven sonata, a Chopin group that includes the taxing G. Minor Ballade, and the big B Flat Minor Scherzo, and Liszt's "La Campanella."

The Chicago Symphony orchestra plays another young people's concert this coming Wednesday. It programs the "Nutcracker" music, the "Magic Fire" scene, and the heartening prelude to the third act of "Lohengrin." You should try to sneak in with the youngsters. It looks like a good show.

For adults, Dr. Stock promises the Miaskowsky Sixth Symphony and a repetition of the "Minutes Symphoniques" of Dohnanyi introduced here a few weeks ago. These are items of the Thursday-Friday program.

Back to Broadway.

The booking of Katharine Cornell's "Romeo and Juliet" for the Martin Beck theater, New York, beginning Dec. 23, means that "Winterset" must move to another house. Two principals in Miss Cornell's company will be making their New York debuts—Maurice Evans as Romeo and Ralph Richardson as Mercutio.

Science May End Peril of Fog

By DR. THOMAS M. BECK

SOME weeks ago it was stated in this department that the menace of fog to transportation remained practically an unsolved problem. But so fast does science advance that it appears this conclusion already must be retracted. Recently it was reported that Ponte, a young French engineer, had invented a means of enabling ships to detect the presence and position of obstacles before them, even though hidden by fog.

The reader should remember, however, that such discoveries usually are not complete solutions of problems, but should be looked upon as steps in the right direction. Science does not make its conquests by means of single decisive battles, but rather by the gradual pushing back of the unknown through the efforts of many men. This latest method of fog penetration doubtless requires considerably more practical testing before its worth is known for certain. Until this is determined the method must be looked upon as being the latest and probably the best of a number of plans.

Before describing the method it may be well to discuss the peculiar difficulty presented by fog. Fog is not opaque; the obvious fact that a foggy day is much lighter than night shows that light can penetrate it. But each water droplet present in the fog acts as a tiny lens, bending the light rays. The number and the random arrangement of the droplets result in a beam of light being scattered in all directions. By the time the light pattern from some distant object reaches our eyes it is so distorted that we cannot make out the shape of the original object.

It is known that red light (that is, the light with the longer wave length) is less diffracted by lenses and therefore less scattered by fog. Pursuing the analogy farther, infrared light should penetrate fog with less dispersion than does red light. As a matter of fact it does, but its usefulness in this respect is limited by the fact that it cannot be seen, and there is no quick and accurate method of determining its presence.

Radio waves are light waves of still longer length. While they can penetrate a fog with practically no scattering, they are sufficiently unlike visible light in respect to reflection properties as to make them useful only in cases in which they need not be reflected from any object. That is, they can be applied to uses analogous to that of a beacon, but not to that of a searchlight.

Now, a typical infrared wave is about .0001 of an inch long, while radio waves are of the order of hundreds of yards in length. Ways have been found of generating and detecting all of the intervening wave lengths, and it has been found that waves up to about a yard in length are reflected in practically the same way as is visible light. However, such radiations are refracted to a negligible extent and therefore are not scattered by fog.

The present method of fog penetration consists of generating, on board a ship, a narrow beam of rays of about a six-inch wave length and sweeping it back and forth over a 45-degree angle over the ship's course. When the beam strikes a reflecting material (metals are the best reflectors for such rays, as they are for visible light) it is reflected back to the ship, where it is detected. It is analogous to a searchlight that sweeps the sea with a beam of visible light, and a man whose eyes detect the light reflected back from floating objects.

The method of generating and detecting these rays is not yet described in detail, but apparently it is done by means of a highly modified short-wave radio broadcaster and receiver. The rays are said to be powerful enough to detect the presence of a ship at a distance of four miles or that of a channel buoy at two miles.

Last week mention was made of scientific studies of the properties of two strictly imaginary substances, an ideal gas and an ideal black body. The question may well arise as to why scientists are willing to devote vast amounts of time and energy to what appears to be scientific boondoggling. If there is no such thing as an ideal gas, why should anyone waste any thought upon it when there are so many real gases that can be studied?

There are many technical problems involving the interdependence of a gaseous volume, pressure, and temperature; for example, the efficiency of a heat engine, or the change of atmospheric pressure with altitude, or the energy required to compress gases or to evacuate a closed container. But the mathematical equation connecting these factors in the case of any one gas is rather complicated, and also differs from the equations for other gases.

But an ideal gas is so defined that this relationship is quite simple. As a result, calculations are possible with the ideal gas that could not be made in the case of any actually occurring data. Moreover, the equation for an ideal gas is a close enough approximation to that of any actual gas that it can replace the latter for most practical purposes, with the result of greatly simplified calculation.

About the only place where the ideal gas equation cannot be used with even moderate accuracy is where gas liquefaction is involved. But, after all, one could hardly expect an ideal gas to be capable of becoming a liquid.

The black body is a bit harder to visualize; if it existed it would be blacker than a coal bin at midnight. It is defined as an object made of an imaginary material which absorbs all radiant energy falling upon it and also radiates energy at a rate proportional to the fourth power of its absolute temperature. The value of such a mental concept is perhaps not readily apparent to the reader.

But such a mathematical relationship between heat radiation and temperature is an extremely valuable one. It provides a method of calculating the heat loss from a hot body when its temperature is known, and its temperature when its rate of heat loss is known. Of course, no known material is perfectly black in this sense of the word. Yet it is a relatively simple matter to measure the degree of blackness of a particular substance, and from this to determine the degree to which it follows the radiation law.

It was pointed out last week that this relationship between energy radiated and temperature provides a means of measuring the temperatures of materials too hot to bring into contact with a thermometer. The astronomers use the same principle in measuring the temperatures of the planets and the stars.

In addition to these two ideal materials there also are a number of others, such as the ideal reflector (the exact opposite of the black body), the ideal solution, and the ideal solid. For the most part these others are of less importance, either because they do not provide sufficient groundwork for the derivation of new general laws of the behavior of matter or because they are so ideal that they no longer resemble any known substance.

The study of ideal substances has occasionally led to advances in the theoretical side of knowledge. Thus it has been shown that the deviations of actual gases from ideal behavior are due to two factors, the volume of the molecules and the attractive force between them. A mathematical analysis of these deviations in the cases of different gases has led to the determination of the numerical values of these quantities.

To sum things up, these ideal substances are nothing more than idealized conceptions of certain material properties, which are freed from disturbing individual factors present in actual matter. They do not picture the actual behavior of any matter, but rather the way it should behave.

Scientific Queries Answered

Address questions of scientific nature to Dr. Thomas M. Beck, Graphic Section, Chicago Tribune. For personal reply inclose stamped, addressed envelope.

Question: I have been told that the weight of a body changes as it is raised in the air. Is this the truth?—M. K., Chicago.

Answer: There frequently is a little confusion between the terms mass and weight. The mass of a body is a measure of the amount of matter in it, while the weight is the gravitational force acting on that mass. For most purposes on the earth's surface the two terms are interchangeable without serious error. The mass is unchangeable, but weight depends upon the distance of the body from the earth's center. The farther we move out into space the less we would weigh, because we would be farther from the center of the earth. However, for such altitudes as we are actually able to reach this loss is almost imperceptible.

A New Pup for a Merry Christmas!

THERE will be no lack of puppies in Santa Claus' pack when he starts on his annual trip to distribute Christmas gifts within a few days. Indications are that everywhere the lasting value of a puppy as a Christmas present is being appreciated more and more by American families. A puppy as a Christmas present to a child is a living, enduring gift that increases in value through the years. Moreover, a puppy (as one mother has phrased it) "teaches thoughtfulness and unselfishness, an important angle in child development." Playful, devoted, faithful—a dog becomes not only a valued companion in a home but also a guard. There is a real cash value to a puppy that has grown up in a home and learned to know that home as its own.

Here are a few tips on breeds which American dog owners (through their purchases) have made popular as home dogs during the last few years:

Boston terrier—Short-haired, rather small, and inexpensive to keep. Handy size and clean around the house. Excellent disposition. Considered a good breed for small home or apartment. Its short coat is considered an advantage.

Wire-haired fox terrier—Popular as a pet dog. Hardy, lots of style, plucky, intelligent, and inexpensive to keep. Naturally requires more barbering and grooming than short-haired dogs. Likes children.

Scottish terrier—Another breed that is ideal for the small home or apartment. Weighs around 18 pounds. Neat and clean around the house. Its dark coat is considered an advantage because it is easy to keep neat looking. Very smart and quick to learn.

Cocker spaniel—Gentle, extremely affectionate, merry disposition. You can get them in solid colors. Parti-colored dogs also are popular. Not difficult to keep in a small space. Likes children.

Pomeranian—Another of America's most popular toy breeds. Weighs but a few pounds, so is inexpensive to keep. Very perky and alert around the house.

Spitz—Popular as a pet here in Chicagoland. Good looking breed, but naturally requires more grooming than many breeds because of its color and length of coat. Very smart and courageous.

Sealyham terrier—The underslung, short-legged terrier, nearly all white in color. Excellent disposition, playful. Likes children. Not so noisy as many of the terriers. Weighs around 18 or 20 pounds.

Irish terrier—A 25-pound dog that fits in anywhere. Likes children. Has a wiry coat. Makes an excellent companion and guard dog.

Dachshund—Another breed with the disposition and brains to make it an excellent companion dog in the home. Its close, short coat is easy on the rugs in the home.

The above-named dogs are rather small in size but have many qualities to make them good house dogs. Among the more popular breeds in the middle-weight class may be mentioned the chow, German shepherd, Doberman, springer spaniel, bulldog, English setter, Airedale, Irish setter, collie, and Schnauzer.

Springer spaniel—Second most popular spaniel in the country. Weighs 40 or 45 pounds. Wonderful disposition and likes children. The springer is a friendly fellow, a great pal for a child. It has become extremely popular in Chicagoland and elsewhere.

English setter—A beautiful breed. It's stylish, good looking, and with the kind of disposition that makes it an ideal companion for children or adults. Very smart. Naturally needs more room and exercise than (for instance) a Scotty or Boston terrier.

Irish setter—Has a dark mahogany coat. Is playful, affectionate, and smart. An active dog that shouldn't be confined too much. No need to worry about this breed's disposition. It is friendly and affectionate.

Chow—Aloof, reserved, lots of character, plucky and brainy. Doesn't care much for strangers. Has a big following among fanciers who want a distinctive breed.

Purdue Co-ed Takes Her College Course Seriously

She's Practical—and She Wants a Career

By MARGARET SCULLY

PURDUE university at Lafayette, Ind., is essentially a serious, sober, practical place. The buildings scattered over its broad, level campus were built for service rather than beauty. They are sturdy, workaday places, pleasant matter-of-fact and unpretentious. Only in the new Memorial union and the newer Residence Hall for Women is much emphasis laid upon external beauty. Both buildings are very handsome.

Purdue is primarily a technical school. Students here are in training for some particular type of work in the outside world. It may be engineering, it may be dairy farming, it may be pharmacy, it may be dietetics, it may be fashion designing. Whatever it is, the course is stiff and there are few short cuts.

Some co-eds know what they want to do and pick Purdue because it offers the specialized training they seek. Some go to Purdue because of its proximity to their homes and by the very nature of the place are forced to make up their minds as to a career. The fact remains, however, that the typical Purdue co-ed knows what she expects to do when she is graduated and is preparing for it. Moreover, Amelia Earhart is on the faculty in the capacity of "consultant in the department of careers for women."

Marksmanship is one of the favorite activities with women at Purdue. Practicing for a place on the rifle team are, left to right, Blanche Kernel and Betty Klein, both Pi Beta Phi pledges, and Sally MacDermid, Chi Omega pledge. All three girls are freshmen. Purdue also boasts a girls' hocky team, places upon which are competed for with keen rivalry. (Tribune photos.)

Purdue men attribute a third reason to the feminine enrollment. They point to the prevailing ratio of five men to one girl as a deciding factor in a co-ed's choice. But the co-ed heatedly replies that no girl in her right mind would work as hard as she must work merely to find a husband—and particularly a Purdue husband! There is a good deal of friendly disparagement between the sexes on the campus, but it doesn't seem to interfere with a gay social life.

The Purdue girl admits that she is not a beauty, nor does she make the most of herself by careful attention to appearance. Rather she claims as her particular virtues simplicity, friendliness, democracy, and common sense. She likes her school because, as one put it, "they take you for what you are, not what you look like or what you wear."

She works hard because she has to. She plays hard at campus activities to relax from the strain of her work. She's "activity mad." She spends little for clothes and is clever about making over last year's dress. She even wears last year's dress as she wore it last year and thinks no more about it. She is practical, perhaps somewhat unimaginative, and she is extremely conservative. Her home probably is in a small town, and she has the small-town point of view. She is not sophisticated. She knows it and doesn't mind.

Upperclassmen were bombarded with so many questions from freshmen concerning makeup, clothes, dates, and all the little intricacies of campus life that the Women's Self-Government association this year held what it called the "charm school." On one evening a faculty member told what, from the teacher's standpoint, constituted charm in a co-ed. On another occasion a senior man gave his version of the same subject. Other evenings brought forth style shows, demonstrations of correct makeup, and kindred feminine interests. The women's lounge in the Union, where these meetings were held, was always packed.

Although more than half the co-eds smoke, there are proportionately more that do not than at most universities. No smoking is permitted on the campus except in the Union building. There are taverns and attractive cocktail lounges in the town, but few feminine students indulge, for drinking is frowned upon.

The majority of feminine students are taking home economics, and they think nothing of a schedule that keeps them in classroom or laboratory from 8 in the morning until 4 in the afternoon for at least three days a week. During certain years and in certain courses it may be for five days a week. The girl student thinks it is hard, to be sure, but since everybody else is likewise afflicted, she takes it as a matter of course.

Because of the number of laboratory courses in the average undergraduate's schedule, classes seldom are cut "just for fun," and one of the severe punishments of both the student senate and the W. S. G. A. is "campusing"—forbidding attendance at classes for a stated period.

Outside of the classroom the Purdue co-ed thinks nothing of devoting every afternoon from 4 to 6 to the various activities in which she is interested. She may be on a Women's Self-Government committee; she may be out for the rifle or hocky team. She may be interested in the Union and active in its programs of dance decoration or planning for special campus events handled by that staff; or she may be a contributor to the Exponent, student daily, or to Débris, campus annual.

Whatever it is, aside from athletic enterprises, she heads for the activity offices on the second floor of the Union at 4 p. m. on the dot and adds to the general air of bustle and confusion which reigns there from 4 to 6. Taking a minute off between conferences, she may join a friend for an ice cream soda in the sweet shop on the ground floor, where everybody not otherwise engaged during those hours congregates.

Another outside interest which meets with universal approval are the convocations, consisting of lectures or concerts presented for students and faculty approximately every six weeks. And there also are religious convocations held the first Sunday in each month. The Purdue concert choir furnishes the music, and Eliza Fowler hall, where services are held, is always packed. Students find these gatherings stimulating and thought-provoking, and they are popular.

Because of the combined demands of her work and her activities, the Purdue co-ed seldom dates during the week. Occasionally engaged or almost engaged couples go to the library together, but for the most part dating is confined to Friday and Saturday nights, with an occasional movie on Sunday. There is a "mixer," or dance, every Saturday night at the Union, and almost everyone attends. Special dances, frequently formal, are held there on Friday evenings. Twice a year the co-ed shows her boy friend just how it should be done by giving "co-ed bid" dances.

For the Gold Diggers' dance and the Gingham Gallop she calls for her date in a cab, sends him a corsage of cabbage leaves and celery stalks, carries his comb, handkerchief, pipe, and key ring, and takes him out between dances for refreshments. The men, entering into the spirit of things, keep the girls waiting anywhere from ten minutes to half an hour, hand them an assortment of articles that would fill a carryall, and order the most expensive refreshments on the menu.

The military ball in the fall starts off the formal season, and before that special event arrives there are frantic trips to town for accessories, sewing machines hum, and the social whirl gets under way.

Freshmen girls at Purdue live for the most part in the new Residence Hall for Women, although it is not quite big enough to accommodate the entire freshman class. The hall is a beautiful, modern building with handsome lounges and comfortable smaller "date rooms," a spacious and bright dining room with a huge fireplace at one end, and suite for the director and her assistant on the main floor.

Downstairs there is a game room with pingpong and card tables, a shampoo room equipped with sprays and dryers, a laundry room where the girls have modern facilities for doing the weekly wash, and a sewing room with a large cutting table, full-length mirror, and two electric sewing machines.

The girls' rooms upstairs are attractively furnished with maple beds, dressing tables, and desks and are further enlivened by the tenants' own ideas on interior decoration. As to food, it is excellent and there is plenty of it.

Regulations are self-imposed. The girls vote on house rules at their first meeting and they elect to be in on weeknights at 8:30 rather than at 11, which is the W. S. G. A. deadline. Although there are a chaperon and two assistant chaperons, there is also a night chaperon who acts as hostess in the living rooms on the first floor, "to make the boys feel welcome and at home."

As a matter of fact, these quarters for freshmen are so ideal that it is with considerable regret as a rule that old tenants move out to make room for the incoming class.

As sophomores the girls who are sorority members move into the sorority houses, of which there are only six. These are for the most part comfortable but unpretentious residences, probably closely approximating the homes from which the girls have come. The fraternity houses on the Purdue campus, on the other hand, are palatial affairs.

The girl who is unaffiliated finds herself a room in a private home or boarding house in the town. As one nonsorority girl put it: "That's about the only distinction between being organized and unorganized on this campus; the unorganized girls really don't have very nice places to live." But so far as other discrimination is concerned, there is none. Here again you are taken entirely for what you are. The unorganized girl feels, too, that she escapes the possibility of being "typed," which sometimes occurs when one is a member of a distinct group.

As to dates, she meets men in classes, through friends, and at the various Union gatherings held early in the year, and, once started, the social life is as full as anyone's. She admits that when it comes to campus politics she is at a disadvantage, but realizes that it is in some measure her own fault, since the unorganized women on the campus outnumber sorority members two to one.

Girls at Purdue do not demand great expenditures of their boy friends. Amusements are fairly limited and comparatively inexpensive. The average Saturday night date consists of going to the "mixer" at the Union, tickets for which cost $1 a couple, and usually one trip down to the sweet shop for refreshments at 10 cents each. Total cost, $1.20.

In the fall somebody occasionally arranges for a hay ride, and a huge wagon is filled with couples, singing, joking, holding hands, while the driver keeps his horses jogging merrily over the countryside. In the spring there usually is a rush for roller skates, and hikes and picnics are popular. Cars are permitted at Purdue, providing that students drivers have both written parental permission and $5,000 of public liability and $2,000 of property damage insurance.

Each year it is the belief that the entering class of freshmen is the prettiest yet, and freshmen are given quite a whirl by Purdue men who are socially inclined. It therefore develops that, although numbers of romances do lead from the classroom to the altar, the more frequent procedure is for a freshman girl to succumb to one of her attentive admirers when spring rolls around and take his pin. He thereupon graduates. They correspond. He returns for homecoming. They quarrel. She returns the pin to him and herself to social circulation.

Heavilon hall is the center of three Purdue traditions. First, Purdue students walk around its tower, never through its archway. Second, when the hall was destroyed by fire shortly after its original dedication it was decided to build the tower "one brick higher," which phrase has stuck in campus language and is used to refer to any improvement. And, last, tradition would have it that no girl is considered a true Purdue co-ed until she has been kissed at midnight under the arch of Heavilon hall.

Education at Purdue is more practical than it is "intellectual" or "liberal." The co-ed occasionally complains that she has comparatively little time for elective courses in the humanities. She learns to cook and to sew. She knows a balanced diet when she sees one. She understands child psychology and has watched its practical application in the nursery school, where children between the ages of two and five are taken care of daily. During her course in child development she takes a hand in their supervision. She may undertake a course in institution management and serve her apprenticeship in the home economics cafeteria, where approximately 150 persons are served each noon. She and her co-workers plan the menus, prepare the food, and serve it. Or during her course in home management she lives in the "practice house" for six weeks, taking turns buying the food, cooking the meals, and doing the housework.

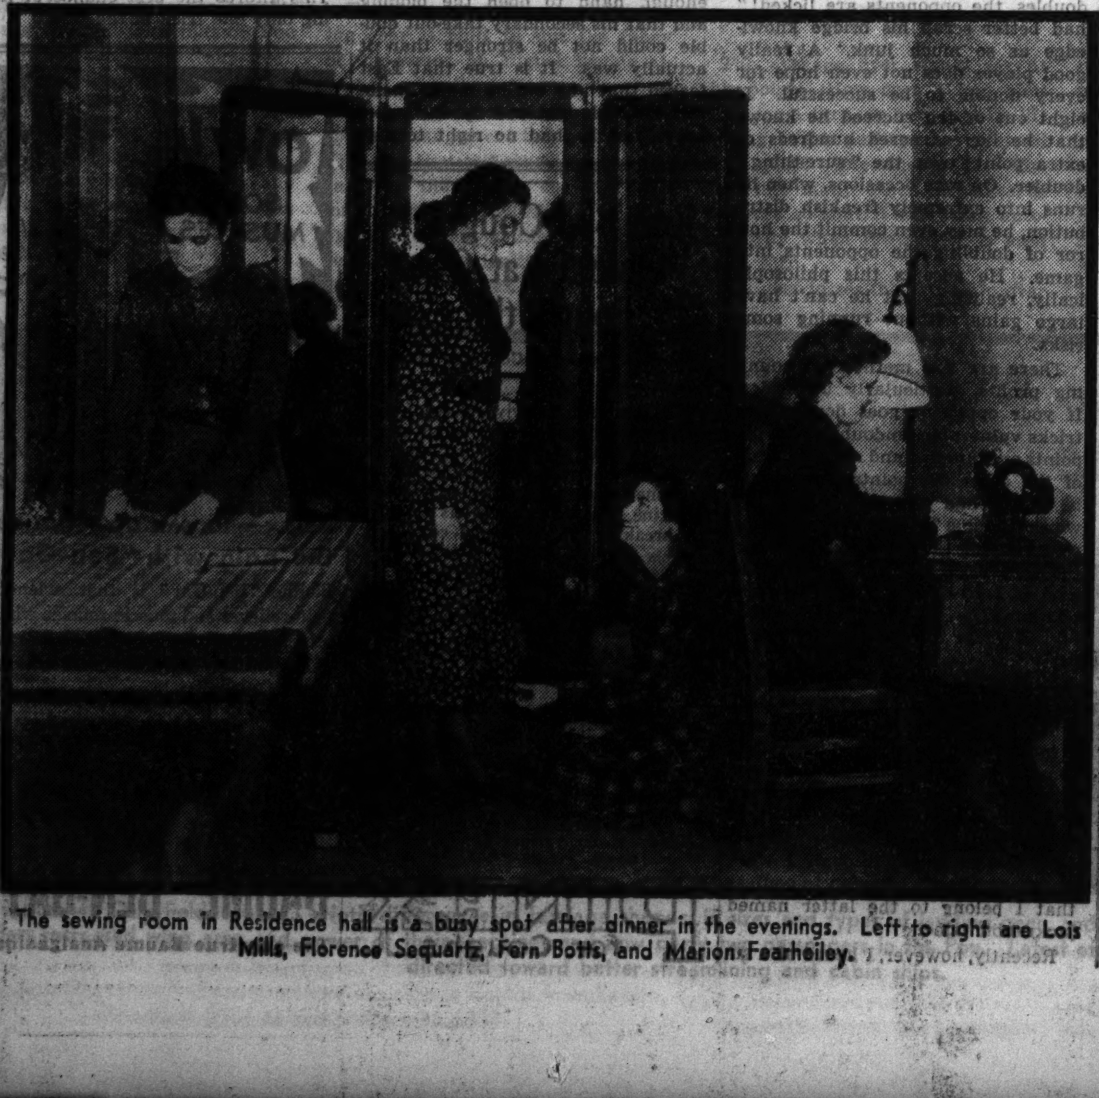
And there are such courses as horticulture 34, which teaches her the principles of flower store management and how to arrange bouquets artistically.

Although there is a course designed primarily for the homemaker, most home economics students specialize in some particular branch. Many girls, of course, have in mind the possibility of matrimony when they have worked anywhere from two to five years, but for the immediate future it is a paying job that interests them most. They train either to be a hospital dietitian, to manage a cafeteria or restaurant, to be a textile or clothing buyer, or to teach home economics in Indiana schools.

Dean Mary L. Matthews reported that every home economics graduate last year who wanted a job now has one and that she is hard put to it to fill the highly specialized requirements of applications.

As to costs at Purdue, tuition is $46 for the first semester and $41 for the second for the Indiana student. For the out-of-state student it is $50 more a semester. One estimate placed the total cost for the academic year for a student living in private residence or boarding house between $375 and $465, with an average cost of $400. This is exclusive of clothing and traveling expenses.

For the girl living in Residence hall, room and board are approximately $375, exclusive of tuition, books, and so forth. Sorority house bills are not uniform, and their dues and assessments vary also, so that it is impossible to set an exact figure.



The sewing room in Residence hall is a busy spot after dinner in the evenings. Left to right are Lois Mills, Florence Sequartz, Fern Botts, and Marion Fearheiley.

Dream of Empire Once More Stirs Japan

Army Defines Foreign Policy of Nation

face in their attitude toward foreign ideas and products. The people, intensely curious and uncommonly intelligent, quickly adopted and learned the use of the foreign inventions and goods which began to flow into Japan in a swelling stream from all the industrial centers of Europe and America. Japan, through isolation, had become unified. Next, through international trade and diplomatic intercourse, the empire emerged as a world power. Reborn and nourished to its present national importance was the foreign policy of Hideyoshi — conquest and expansion.

Japanese leaders needed no tip from Berkeley, who wrote, "Westward the course of empire takes its way," to determine the course of the policy of expansion. Directly across the Sea of Japan is Corea, dangerously close to the Japanese mainland if controled by a foreign power. It 1894 it was nominally so controled by China.

To the Japanese army high command, which was then, as it is now, a powerful political force in the government, Corea was what sportsmen refer to as a "natural." In 1894 a rebellion broke out among Corean natives. Both Japan and China sent armies to Corea to quell the disturbance. After the rebellion had been put down, however, the Japanese army did not move out, and the Jap government ignored the existence of China's nominal control of Corea. The consequence was the first real war between China and Japan.

Victorious after nine months of fighting, Japan set up in Corea the first of its puppet states. The government did not openly assume control of the country at that time, however. It was not until 1910 that Japan, as a result of further military and political developments, formally took over Corea as a part of the empire. In Corea Japan had a fine buffer for defense and a sizable chunk of Asiatic mainland from which to expand. And, as a direct result of its victory over China, Nippon acquired the islands of Formosa and Pescadores.

Japan, toward the end of the nineteenth century, was in a position to rival other foreign nations which had acquired or were desirous of acquiring possessions in the far east. Great Britain had become firmly established in Hongkong and Shanghai. Portugal had acquired Macao. France had spread its sphere of influence from Indo-China to Kwanchowan and Shanghai, and Russia, through railway construction treaties, had moved into Manchuria.

In 1902 it was plain to Japanese rulers that, to avoid serious clashes with foreign powers which had growing interests in the orient similar to those of Japan, a consolidation of Japan's position through treaties was necessary. This realization led to the establishment of an alliance with Great Britain which has continued to the present. An attempt to come to terms with Russia in respect to Manchuria failed and led to war.

Russia had built the South Manchuria railroad and had sent troops into Manchuria to guard its lines. Russia had also fortified Port Arthur. Japan desired the withdrawal of Russian troops and an agreement with Russia which would give Japan equal trading and other rights in an independent Manchuria. But the Jap proposals were ignored by the government of the czar, and for Japan war was the alternative.

In this war the military and naval forces of the mikado scored two great victories, the siege and capture of Port Arthur and the destruction of the Russian fleet by the Japanese navy under Admiral Togo. But, although victorious, Japan was badly disappointed in the terms of peace signed in Portsmouth, New Hampshire, in 1905. She received the South Manchuria railway, the Russian lease of the Liaotung peninsula, the Russian concessions in Manchuria, a small indemnity for money spent to maintain Russian war prisoners, and Karafuto, the southern half of Sakhalin island.

The formal taking over of Corea in 1910 has been mentioned. Other than that Japan made few strides in expansion until the World war. She assumed, through her alliance with Great Britain, the protection of all interests of the allies in the orient and successfully captured the German-controled city of Tsingtao in the Shantung province. After the war Japan withdrew from Shantung, but the empire was further expanded in 1920 when the league of nations gave Japan mandates over Pacific islands north of the equator. Since then Japan has withdrawn from the league, but she retains the islands and intends to keep them.

There was nothing sudden about Japan's annexation, through the method of setting up the puppet state of Manchukuo, of Manchuria. It seemed sudden to the world only because little prominence had been given to the years preceding 1932 in which Japan had gradually strengthened its military force in Manchuria, ostensibly to guard the Japanese-owned railways, mines, and factories. The final wresting away from China of this vast and rich territory by force of arms was accomplished under the guise of quelling banditry. Japan really had considered Manchuria hers by right of conquest since the Russian war.

Also in recent years Manchuria has become increasingly important to Japan as a source of raw materials, principally iron and coal, those commodities so vitally needed in the manufacture of armament. Manchuria gives to Japan, in fact, a vast store of natural resources which the empire previously lacked. Also the country provides a field for colonization to absorb great numbers of Japan's growing population. Through recent purchase from Russia, Japan now owns practically all of the railways of the country, which in turn own or control most of the mines and industries. The Japanese army is in charge of the defense, and Japanese advisers help conduct and partially control government offices.

The grab of Manchuria was not seriously opposed by foreign powers, because these powers had no considerable interests in the country. The Russian interests had been liquidated by war and by purchase. In coming now to the newest thrust of Japanese imperialism, the north China venture, one finds quite a different picture.

The Japanese motive in north China is considered to be the creation of a buffer, invaluable in case of a war with Russia, rather than a desire to set up another puppet state, although the latter development is not without the realm of possibility. But in north China Japan faces the possibility of a serious clash with the interests of foreign powers, principally those of her old ally, Great Britain, whose friendship with Japan has noticeably cooled in recent years.

The influx of Japanese soldiers through gateways of the Great Wall was immediately resented and protested against by the central Chinese government. China, however, because of its peculiar internal politics and the fact that some of the war lords of the northern provinces are either openly pro-Japanese or are lukewarm in their loyalty to the central government, is in a weak position to oppose successfully the Japanese advance.

This would and probably will give autonomy to the five provinces of north China, namely, Hopeh, Shantung, Suiyuan, Chahar, and Shansi, under the dominance of the Japanese army and Japanese governmental advisers. Thus with Jehol, which was taken over by Japan in 1933 as an extension to Manchukuo, Japan today is in virtual control of an area, once Chinese, which approaches in size the area of China itself.

The possibilities of a clash with foreign powers interested in north China arise from these facts: British capital is heavily invested in railways and mines of the area. Other foreign capital, much of it American, is also invested in the country. The legations of all the foreign nations in China are located at Peiping in Hopeh province. Several foreign nations, including Great Britain and the United States, maintain troops at Peiping and at Tientsin to protect the railway between Peiping and the sea.

A larger view would include the fact that Japan has denounced the naval armament limitations treaty providing for a naval parity ratio of 5-5-3 between Great Britain, the United States, and Japan. Observers believe this means that Japan intends to create a navy as large as or larger than that of any other naval power. It also is held likely that Japan may fortify heavily its mandated islands.

The Japanese naval policy already has drawn the United States and Great Britain closer together, and it has spurred the formation of a "little entente" between other countries with interests in or near the orient — Portugal, the Netherlands, and France. Portugal, an old ally of Great Britain, recently has greatly increased the size of its navy, and the Dutch, who also depend on Great Britain for defense, have made similar plans.

The most potent factors in any of the many possibilities for a war between Japan and one or more foreign powers are, however, political developments in Japan itself. Political parties as such mean little in Japan. It is more a government of strong individual leaders, and the sentiment of the country is almost equally divided between the views of the military faction on one hand and civilian interests on the other.

In carrying out the policy of empire expansion in China the views of the military have prevailed. There is considerable doubt, however, that the army and navy faction can overcome the certain strong opposition of civilian leaders to saddling the country with the immense burden of building up a huge navy and a larger military establishment, both of which, in addition to tremendous cost, would invite the threat of plunging the nation into a far-eastern "world war."

Bridge Problem

North and South wanted to play this hand at seven diamonds, but their opponents kindly warned them in the bidding that this contract would fail against a spade opening. So they shifted to the spade suit itself for their grand slam contract. How was it made? See answer below.

The bidding (North and South vulnerable):

North	East	South	West
1 ♦	1 ♥	1 ♠	2 ♠
4 ♦	Pass	4 ♠	5 ♥
6 ♥	Pass	7 ♠	(final bid)

Opening lead—5 of diamonds.

Answer: Diamond 5 opened; North wins first trick and leads another diamond, which South ruffs. Small club led to 10 and another diamond ruffed. Spade led to ace and third diamond ruffed. Spade to king and diamond suit run, South discarding clubs as long as East fails to ruff. If ruff comes, South overruffs, draws last trump, and cashes clubs.

Most Players Timid About Doubling

By ELY CULBERTSON

I AM often called in as a bridge diagnostician to point out a specific fault in a player's game. From long experience I have found that the most prevalent malady is timidity in doubling.

Most players are aggressive enough in bidding for games, and perhaps too aggressive in slam and sacrifice bidding. When it comes to doubling the opponents, however, particularly in less-than-game contracts, a curious inhibition gets control.

In most cases the failure to double at the proper time rests on a complete misconception of partnership coöperation.

We have the too familiar situation of, let us say, an opening diamond bid by North, a one spade overcall by East, and a double by South on such a hand as:

♠ K 10 8 6 5 3 ♥ 6 2 ♦ 7 4 3 ♣ 4 3

It may come as a shock to thousands of players when I say that such a double, despite the six cards in opponent's suit, is simply horrible. Not once in a hundred times will it succeed, for the simple reason that not once in a hundred times will the contract remain one spade doubled. The usual result is that West rescues and that North, depending somewhat on South's indication of strength, will double the rescue bid. And South does not hold a single trick against any contract except spades! He cannot even "rescue the rescue" and must sit supinely while the opponents romp home with their doubled contract.

Perhaps a miracle occurs and the one-spade doubled contract is rescued by neither West nor the doubler's partner. Then what? Is there any assurance of defeating the contract? There most certainly is not, particularly against an astute declarer, who will continually throw South in the lead and make him play trumps into a holding such as A Q J 9 4, cutting South's trump winners to three or even two miserable tricks.

It is infinitely better to have fewer trumps and more honor tricks! In the final analysis, if a defending side has six trumps the most profitable division is usually four and two, sometimes three and three.

Anyone who boasts that "when he doubles, the opponents are licked!" had better scrap his bridge knowledge as so much junk. A really good player does not even hope for every double to be successful. If eight out of ten succeed he knows that he has garnered hundreds of extra points over the "sure-thing" doubler. On rare occasions, when he runs into extremely freakish distribution, he may even commit the horror of doubling the opponents into game. He accepts this philosophically, realizing that he can't have large gains without running some risks.

There are two methods of counting profits, particularly at bridge. If your opponent goes down three tricks vulnerable, undoubled, the 300 points are tangible and real, but what of the other 500 points that would be yours had you said one little word, "double"? Are they any less real because they don't go down on the score sheet? Personally, in such a case I feel as if I had lost 500 points!

Most of us have pet superstitions to which we cling blindly — almost fondly, it often appears. Bridge players are particularly susceptible, some staking their all on the color of the cards; others, more athletically inclined, bounding from one seat to another in chase of the goddess. Lest this sound as though I were above such folly, I hasten to confess that I belong to the latter named jackrabbit tribe.

Recently, however, I heard of a superstition that for sheer practicability surpasses any other of my knowledge. Fittingly, it was announced by a member of the more pragmatic sex — one of our leading woman bridge players. At the time she was playing against another expert, a man who is renowned for an unusually long neck as well as for remarkable technical ability.

"Please!" she said to him ever so sweetly. "Please don't peek into my hand. I'm so superstitious about that!"

I recently watched a rubber of bridge in which pyrotechnical bidding, brilliant and stupid play, and biting repartee were the characteristics of all the hands.

It was only fitting that the concluding hand of the rubber, with both sides vulnerable and East-West enjoying an advantage of about 550 points, should have offered some fireworks.

West	North / South	East
	♠ Q 8 6 2 ♥ K 10 8 5 3 ♦ 7 ♣ A K 8
♠ A K 9 ♥ 6 2 ♦ Q J 10 9 ♣ Q 10 9 3	N. / W. E. / S.	♠ 7 5 3 ♥ A J 9 7 ♦ 5 4 3 2 ♣ 7 5
	♠ J 10 4 ♥ Q 4 ♦ A K 8 6 ♣ J 6 4 2

The bidding (both sides vulnerable):

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1 ♥	Pass
1 N. T.	Double	Pass	Pass
Redouble	(final bid)

Commenting on the bidding, I should say that the only bid not in order was East's final pass to one no trump redoubled. He knew that his partner did not hold a powerful enough hand to open the bidding and that his secondary take-out double could not be stronger than it actually was. It is true that East feared that any bid he might make would be slaughtered by the opponents, but he had no right to risk North-South going game on a contract for only seven tricks and should have bid two diamonds.

The play was as interesting as the bidding. West opened the diamond queen; South held off, and West continued diamonds, North discarding a heart. The diamond ace won the second round, and the queen of hearts was led and allowed to win. The small heart was led and dummy's 10 lost to the jack, and East returned a diamond. South won with the king and exited with the fourth diamond, dummy discarding hearts on both rounds of diamonds. West made a desperate effort, by underleading the ace-king of spades, to steal a trick and at the same time put East in to cash his hearts, but declarer's jack spiked this gun. A spade was promptly led back, and West was helpless. As a matter of fact, had the declarer dared to let West's club lead ride around to his own jack an over-trick would have resulted, but there was a chance that East could take the lead with the club queen and cash two good hearts. So South contented himself with seven tricks—game and rubber. Final score, 100 points for North and South.

Today's Questions

Question: Both sides were vulnerable, and I held the following hand:

♠ A Q J 9 ♥ A Q 8 ♦ K Q 10 6 ♣ Q 5

I bid one spade, the next opponent bid two clubs, my partner passed, next hand passed. What should I say now?

Answer: You should double. You are prepared for any bid your partner can make, including a penalty pass, which should result if your partner is strong in clubs.

Question: I was playing a four heart contract. The dummy had only one entry and only one small trump. My heart suit was A Q 10 9 7 4. How should I play the suit?

Answer: Enter dummy and lead up to your hand, finessing the 10. This affords the best chance of losing only one trick in the suit.

ARIEL'S song.
Come unto these yellow sands,
And then take hands:
Courtsied when you have and kiss'd
The wild waves whist,
Foot it featly here and there;
And, sweet sprites, the burthen bear.
BURTHEN (dispersedly). Hark, hark!
Bow-wow.

Full fathoms five thy father lies;
Of his bones are coral made;
Those are pearls that were his eyes:
Nothing of him that doth fade

End Bad Cough Quickly, at One Fourth the Cost

Home-Mixed! No Cooking! Easy!

Millions of housewives have found that, by mixing their own cough medicine, they get a much more effective remedy. They use a recipe which costs only one-fourth as much as ready-made medicine, but which really has no equal for breaking up distressing coughs.

From any druggist, get 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle, and add granulated sugar syrup to fill up the pint. The syrup is easily made with 2 cups sugar and one cup water, stirred a few moments until dissolved. No cooking needed. It's no trouble at all, and makes the most effective remedy that money could buy. Keeps perfectly, and children love its taste.

Its quick action in loosening the phlegm, helping clear the air passages, and soothing away the irritation, has caused it to be used in more homes than any other cough remedy.

Pinex is a concentrated compound of Norway Pine, famous for its soothing effect on throat membranes. Money refunded if it doesn't please you in every way.

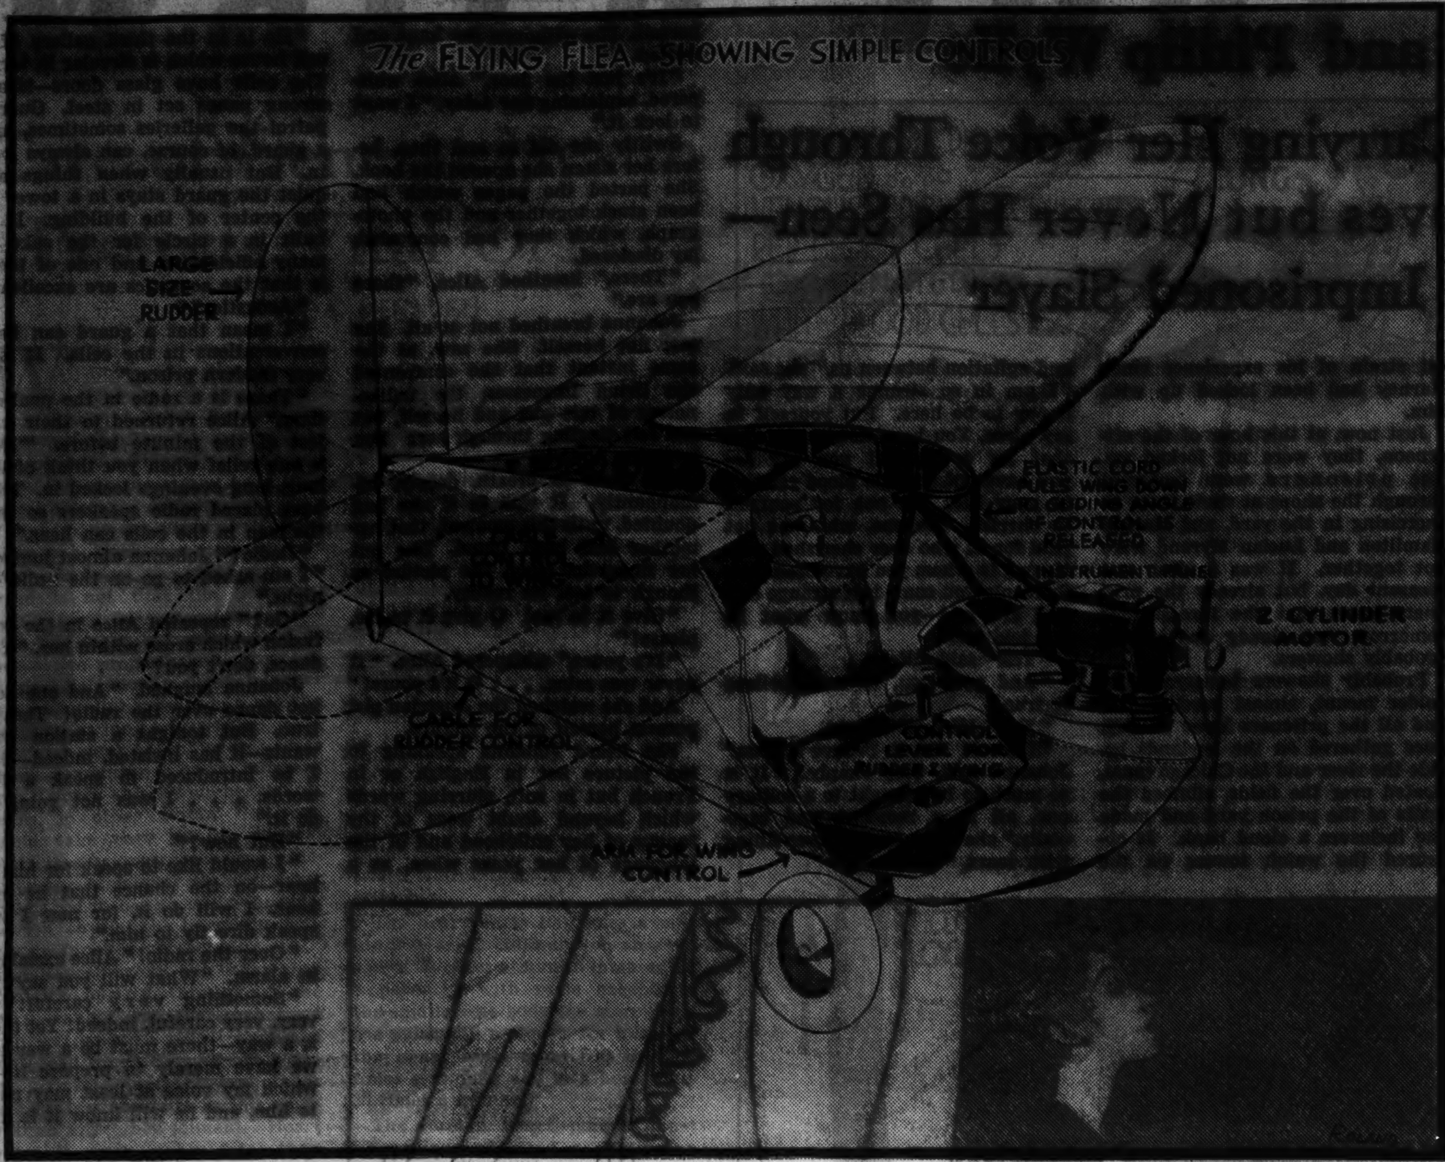
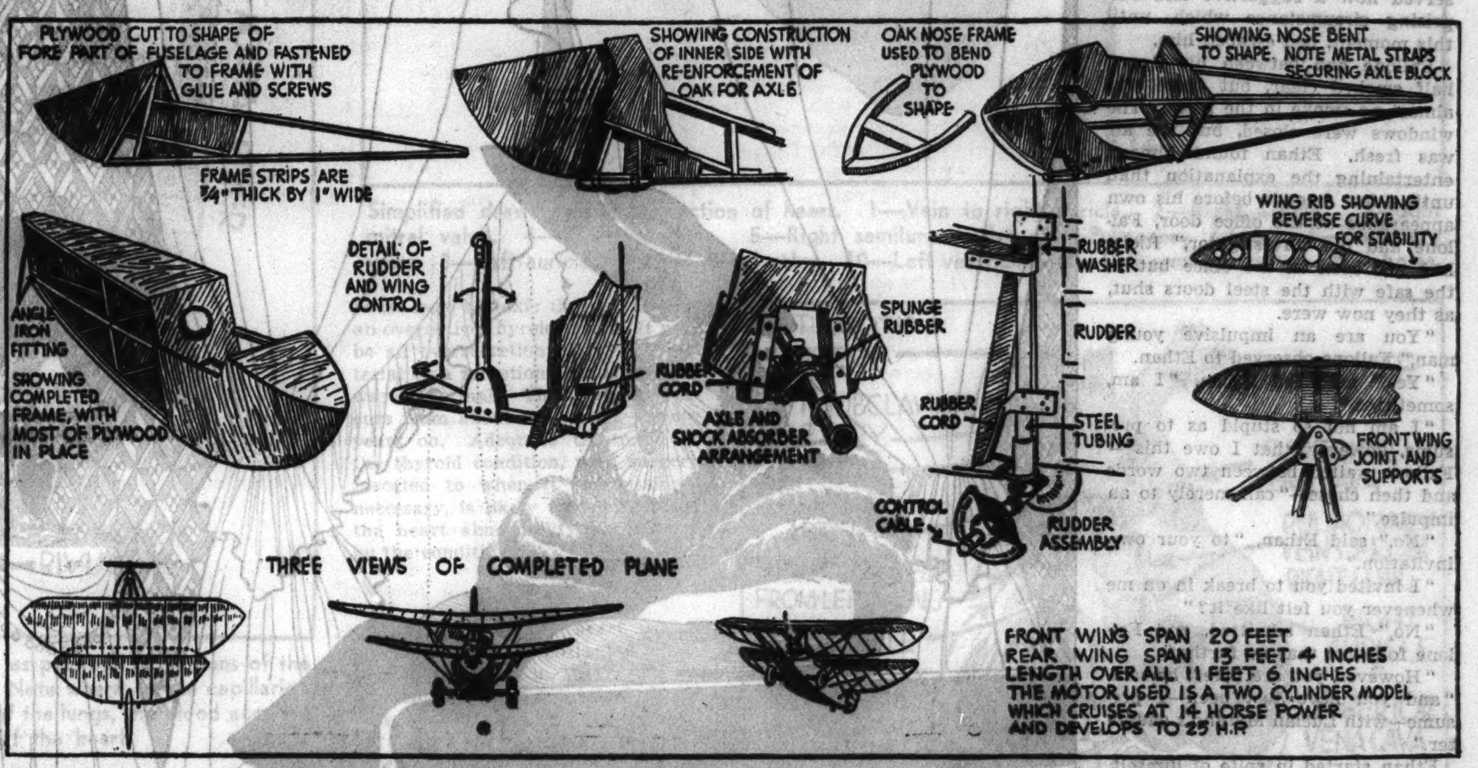
What's New in World of Airplanes and Air Transportation



The drawings at left, above, and below were made from M. Henri Mignet's original Pou and from the original plans which the inventor, designer, and test pilot drew himself. Pou wings follow conventional wing construction, with ribs laid at frequent intervals and supported by twin spars. The wings are covered with doped fabric, linen or a grade of strong cotton material. The diagrams below show how to make and assemble the fuselage and undercarriage. At left the arrangements for the rudder and wing controls are shown on a cut-out drawing. Above the plane is represented in the proper flight attitude. This drawing also shows the method of mounting the engine on the fuselage and the proper arrangement of braced tubing which holds the upper wing to the rest of the ship. The hinge connection is plainly shown, as are the bracing wires for both wings.



Sky Louse Is Europe's Most Unusual Flying Flivver

By WAYNE THOMIS

ONE of the most remarkable of the new light-weight and low-cost airplanes, in which a revival of interest has been evinced by pilots throughout the world, is the French Pou du Ciel—the Sky Louse. This little ship is without doubt the most unorthodox airplane being flown successfully today.

Its appearance is extraordinary, and the aerodynamic theory behind its design is equally curious. It was developed by M. Henri Mignet, an obscure flyer, who not only drew his own plans and built the plane but did his own test flight work as well. At first he had difficulty in obtaining license from the French government to make public his findings, but ultimately he published a book in which the history of the Sky Louse and minute details of its building were told.

After the book was published it excited flying enthusiasts, who immediately began to build duplicates of M. Mignet's original machine. All this occurred less than twelve months ago. Today there are from 400 to 600 of these "lice" flying in France, North Africa, and England. Performance of the little ships is not beyond the ordinary, but they appeal particularly to the inexperienced airman because of their safety and because they can be built for less than $500 each.

Pou records for safety are as unusual as some other features of this tiny airplane. The truth is that most of the Pou, as might be expected, have been in one or more crashes, but only two airmen have been killed in them. Usually the pilots got some bruises and the Pou involved had its undercarriage and fuselage smashed up.

These facts are all the more remarkable because, according to reports from France, the majority of the Pou owners built their own ships and taught themselves to fly in the machines. And generally, according to dispatches, the proud Pou owners had little or no experience in flying more orthodox types of airplanes.

On this record, and despite the assertions of airmen who are experts with conventional ships that the Pou is a dangerous toy, the "sky lice" must be considered safe air vehicles.

Details of the Pou are shown in the artist's sketches and in the photograph accompanying this article. The little plane actually is a biplane with the wings arranged in tandem rather than in the conventional box kite relationship.

The pilot sits directly beneath the forward wing. The aft wing is directly behind him and slightly below the forward wing. The leading edge of the lower wing is tucked about six inches beneath the trailing edge of the upper.

The motor is directly in front of the pilot, arranged in every case thus far as a tractor. The power plant is, of course, the most costly component of the machine, accounting for from $150 to $200 of the total outlay. Many different types of motor have been used, some being two-cycle motorcycle engines, some being light aero engines, and some even being automobile motors converted from the exceptionally light cars popular in Europe.

Horsepowers of these engines vary also, ranging between 14 and 25 horsepower respectively for cruising and full throttle up to 40 horsepower maximums. In England a converted automobile engine is most popular, but in France a small motorcycle engine is most often used.

For the rest of the ship, the landing gear is built to suit the fancy of the owner, M. Mignet having attached a rather flimsy two-wheel carriage with a simple shock chord spring arrangement to his first Pou. The two tiny tail wheels carry the cable of the rudder controls. An instrument panel within the cockpit has a revolution counter, an oil temperature gauge, ignition switch, and gasoline line valves.

Readers who have glanced at the sketches will have observed that the Pou has neither vertical nor horizontal stabilizers. Neither has it elevators or ailerons. The one conventional control surface is the exceptionally large rudder set immediately behind the lower wing, which acts somewhat as a horizontal stabilizer along with its duties as a lifting surface.

Instead of building elevators on his ship, M. Mignet attached his forward and larger wing so that its angle in relation to the fuselage could be varied. He accomplished this by hinging the connection between the wing and the fuselage so that the pilot could tilt the wing upward or downward.

If he tilts it up the Pou begins to climb. If he points the wing downward the Pou begins a glide or dive, depending on the angle of descent. Although this method of control seems radical, it works well in practice.

The average flyer would ask at this point: How does a Pou pilot bank for a turn, or how does he lift a wing which perhaps has dropped in a gust? The answer is: The Pou, like many other airplanes, is balanced so that it will bank automatically when the rudder is used for a turn.

If a gust tosses the little ship over on its side the pilot applies opposite rudder to bring it back to level. For instance, if the left wing dropped the pilot would touch the right rudder. This would start a turn to the right. The right wing then slows down, being on the inside of the turn, and the left wing speeds up. The increase in speed on the left wing increases the lift and the wing rises to level.

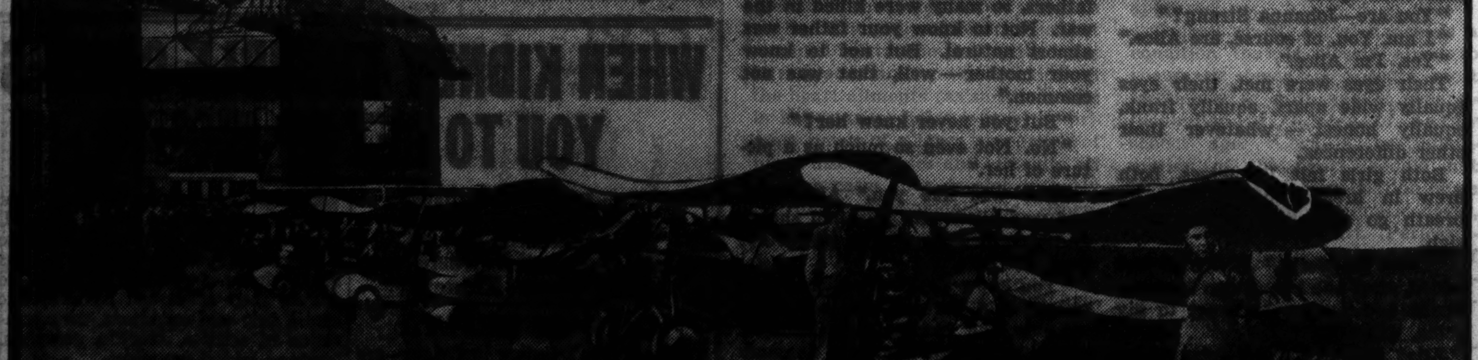
It is true that a Pou's pathway in rough air would be a very zigzag one, but even the largest ships are forced to fly such paths in very rough air. The little Pou, which weighs but 600 pounds fully loaded, should be flown only when conditions are favorable.

One feature of the Pou is its simplicity of control. The stick actuates both rudder and the forward wing. A rubber chord is attached to the leading edge of the wing and to the fuselage in such a way that if the stick is released by the pilot the chord automatically will pull the wing into a gliding angle. This safety provision has saved many an inexperienced pilot who let the little ship get away from him.

Those interested in building Pou of their own will be cheered by the reports from France that "any amateur carpenter" can build himself a first-rate Pou. If he buys the parts and puts them together himself he can do the job for $500 or less. An English translation of M. Mignet's book on how to build the Pou can be obtained through the Air League of the British Empire, 19 Berkeley street, W. I., London.

Although a Pou pilot has plenty of leg room and a comfortable seat, he sits out in the open. The Pou is not a comfortable winter plane.



Pou in line on Orly field, France. Note differences in fuselage shapes, in sizes and types of landing gear, and motors. Some of the French builders increased wing area and power of their machines and now carry two passengers in the Pou. Latest efforts of Pou owners have been directed toward better streamlining and cabin ships. (Acme photo.)

Science Is to Aid Johanna in Carrying Her Voice Through Strong Walls to One She Loves but Never Has Seen—Lucian Myrand, the Imprisoned Slayer

THE STORY TO DATE

Lucian Myrand is serving a life sentence for the murder of Serge Ralten, who was supposedly his friend. At the trial Myrand pleaded guilty, but gave no reason for committing the crime. Nor would he explain his mysterious disappearance for ten months after escaping from a German prison camp during the war. Myrand's wife, Ursula, and his daughter, Alice, live on the family estate near Chicago. On the sixth anniversary of the murder Ursula visits her husband in prison and notices a strange excitement in him. That evening Alice and Ethan West, a young lawyer friend, visit the town house where the murder occurred, and which has been untenanted since. Ethan enters the library and finds a man murdered and sprawled on the floor where Ralten had lain. They call him "Otto." The slain man cannot be identified. Daniel Fallone, professional reformer, offers his aid to Peter Corondelet, with whose office Ethan is connected. Ethan finally learns where "Otto" lodged and in his room finds Sunday papers from which two pictures have been clipped. One turns out to be of nineteen-year-old Johanna Strang, a Bohemian dancer, who is appearing in Chicago. The other is of Alice Myrand. Ethan interviews Johanna Strang, who was born the year of Lucian's disappearance during the war. She admits she came to Chicago to seek her real parents. Daniel Fallone offers to back Johanna Strang. Johanna reads the newspaper stories of the murder in the Myrand home, in which Ethan's name is mentioned, and guesses her identity. In the Myrand library Ethan and Alice find a picture, hidden in a book, of a woman who must have been Johanna's mother. Ethan wonders at Fallone's interest in Johanna and pays a surprise visit to the reformer's office. An agent of Fallone's disappears inside the steel doors of a built-in safe. Fallone seems to be in terror of his life.

INSTALMENT XI.

FROM behind the shut doors of the compartment of steel—the safe or the fileroom—came the metallic click. Was there also a voice? Voices?

The silence of the office, while Ethan and Fallone looked over each other, was confused, of course, by sounds from the hall and from the street. Ethan could not satisfy himself that behind the metal doors two men were speaking, but he observed now a suggestive and surprising circumstance which, until this moment, had escaped him.

Fallone had between his lips a half smoked cigar, but there was almost no smoke in the room. The windows were closed, but the air was fresh. Ethan found himself entertaining the explanation that, until a few seconds before his own appearance at the office door, Fallone and his "investigator," Riola, had not been in the office but in the safe with the steel doors shut, as they now were.

"You are an impulsive young man," Fallone observed to Ethan.

"Yes," admitted Ethan, "I am, sometimes."

"I am not so stupid as to presume, however, that I owe this"—Fallone waited between two words and then chose—"call merely to an impulse."

"No," said Ethan, "to your own invitation."

"I invited you to break in on me whenever you felt like it?"

"No," Ethan admitted, and Fallone followed that no further.

"However, you are here," he said, "and you have just been—I presume—with Lucian Myrand's daughter."

Ethan started in spite of himself. How much did this man know?

"I was with Alice Myrand this morning for a while," he began when Fallone brusquely blurted:

"And you went from her to the other."

"What other?"

"The other daughter, fool!" Fallone cast at him. "For you must be a fool if you imagine me one. Young man, you know they're sisters. I know it. Myrand's the father of both of them."

Ethan could only stare at him in silence. "Have you—proof of that?" Ethan finally said.

"Do you want proof, or are you merely curious as to how much I have of it?" Fallone retorted.

"Rather," replied Ethan, realizing that pretense before this extraordinary man was no longer possible. "I would like to know what you mean to do with yours."

Fallone puffed thoughtfully at the stump of his cigar. He removed it from his lips, stared at it, and carefully crushed the lighted end in his ash tray. "I have different ideas at different times," he replied with a resumption of his pomposity. "Not even Peter Corondelet can persuade himself that a choice of a course of action in this case is a private matter. Murder has been done twice in that house—for Lucian Myrand's convenience."

"Convenience?" Ethan caught at the word and repeated it.

"Certainly," Fallone responded, having almost completely recovered himself.

Fallone went to the door and opened it, but after he glanced down the passage he closed it again.

"One thing," he said in a low tone to Ethan, "I presume Johanna Strang now shares with you the information you have regarding herself?"

"Yes," admitted Ethan, "most of it."

"Then—good day!" Fallone repeated. Again, in the brief silence, Ethan heard metallic clicks from within the safe where Riola had remained. Actually doing what? Ethan wondered. Was the steel compartment, in addition to being a safe, also a sort of listening post wherein Fallone stationed a witness to what was said before him?

"You appreciate, I am sure," Fallone said to Ethan hastily, "I have other appointments."

His pomposity seemed suddenly punctured, and his face was pasty again. He twisted and jerked. He pushed Ethan through the door and shut it behind him.

Ethan descended to the street, and there, before he took a taxi, he glanced up the wall of the building from which he had emerged.

It was a splendid, modern structure not more than five or six years old and tenanted, as Ethan had observed, with businesses and agencies of character and reputation and with prominent professional people. It occupied the corner and half the block, but it backed against a building of an entirely different type—an old, almost ramshackle and disreputable structure.

If times had remained normal a few years ago this undoubtedly would have been torn down and replaced. Left standing, it plainly had deteriorated both in its physical condition and in respect to its occupancy.

IN HER rooms Johanna had lain on her bed for long minutes after Ethan left her. She lay looking out on the waters of Lake Michigan, which were moving slow, powerful billows like the waters of the sea.

Johanna reached again for the likeness of Lucian Myrand which she had cut from the newspaper;—her father. She remembered that the likeness of the young woman who had been her mother had been carried away by Alice Myrand—her sister.

Johanna leaped up. She found the telephone book and flung it open, and finally called a number.

When a butler's voice answered, she said, as calmly as she could: "I'd like to speak to Miss Alice Myrand. Please tell her it is Johanna Strang who is calling."

Mr. Harney Hamilton, doing time in Stateville prison near Joliet, Ill., for swindling, somewhat fancied himself as a psychologist. The case which he was ceaselessly studying was, of course, that of his silent cellmate, Lucian Myrand.

Myrand's body only inhabited his cell. His thought and feeling was elsewhere. He seemed to Harney almost self-hypnotized, sometimes. He seemed literally "far away."

Then Harney would see sweat standing on his cellmate's forehead and on the back of his hands. The man of silence was under the severest strain of his experience since Harney had been locked up with him.

Just now, at this hour of the afternoon, they were not locked up. The prisoners were scattered through the shops at their tasks or exercising in the yard, and Harney Hamilton and Lucian Myrand were not together. It was a clear and pleasant day, but already the prisoners knew that the forecast for tomorrow was cloudy and colder, probably showers.

Probably showers tomorrow and colder meant, almost surely, mist, and all the prisoners knew it. Fog, once gathered on the lowlands beside the river and the Chicago canal, floated over the fields, climbed the walls of the prison yard and made the inclosure a cloud bank. It obscured the watch towers on the wall, and, what was more to the point, it so enshrouded the yard that the guards in the towers were blinded. Therefore, when such fog floated in, the prisoners must be kept in the cell houses. Few of them preferred that. All the imprisoned men hated fog—except the few who, on any particular day, fitted the fog into a plan for escape.

At this supper hour for her husband in the penitentiary, Ursula Myrand was in Corondelet's office in Chicago. She had gone to the city for the day.

Alice, having learned this when she herself had returned home, now was watching for the car in which Johanna Strang would arrive. Alice naturally was excited and disturbed. She sat in the reception room, restive and nervous until a cab from the city drove to the door.

Alice ran to the door and, holding it half open, she saw a lithe, dark-haired girl of her own height and slenderness step to the ground, turn in a quick, graceful way, pay the driver and advance to the house.

Glancing back into the hall, Alice saw a maid approaching and signaled her away. Alice drew the door wide open.

"You are—Johanna Strang?"

"I am. You, of course, are Alice."

"Yes, I'm Alice."

Their eyes were met, their eyes equally wide apart, equally frank, equally honest — whatever their other differences.

Both girls felt likenesses, both drew in breath sharply and let breath go out again, almost in a sigh.

"Come in, please," Alice said and added, after she had drawn Johanna inside the door, "Come up to my room, will you?"

Alice felt, as she led Johanna up the wide stairway, the presence of invisible hazards between herself and this girl—hazards which neither of them put there but which words alone could not sweep away.

Johanna, too, felt this, and she tried to deal with it, as soon as her sister had led her into her room and closed the door.

"Let us not have tenseness and agitation between us," she said. "I am in so strange a way only happy to be here. Put yourself in my place. You have not—remember that for a moment you are I—you have not a single blood relative in your life. No one for yourself to cherish. No one, who was not paid for it, who ever cherished you. No one to whom you have been tied. Suddenly you come to a strange city and are told—you know what he has told me."

"Yes," said Alice.

"And you—you, he said, believe it true."

"Yes," Alice said again.

"I would like to believe it true," Johanna said, very simply. "It is so much to be brought to a solitary one, all in a moment, and especially," she went on, her eyes filling with tears, "so kindly."

"I am glad," Alice said, "that it seemed to you—kindly."

"How else could it seem? Your friend, Mr. West, has been only considerate and so also I find you." Her eyes discovered on the dressing table the photograph of Lucian Myrand.

ALICE, watching her, saw that Johanna recognized him, and Alice watched jealously for the girl to make some move toward the picture. But Johanna made none. She was feeling quite as fully as Alice the delicacy of her position. So this daughter of Lucian Myrand permitted herself only to gaze at his photograph in the frame. She did not even start to pick it up. And Alice, seeing this, felt her hurrying pulses slacken. The girls looked at each other and looked away. Both of them appreciated that they had passed one of their points of hazard.

"He was," Johanna allowed herself the comment at last, "very generous to me. You knew that?" she asked.

Alice nodded. "But you never saw him?"

"Not in my memory."

"But it did not surprise me not to see my father," Johanna protested. "So many children born when I was in Austria never saw their fathers, so many were killed in the war. Not to know your father was almost natural. But not to know your mother — well, that was not common."

"But you never knew her?"

"No. Not even so much as a picture of her."

"She was like you," Alice said and was filled with pity and shame and friendliness. "She was very, very like you."

"You know that," the dancer said simply, and her delicacy was equal even to the constraint on herself which prevented her from demanding, directly, the picture of her mother. "I do not."

Alice gasped and pulled open a drawer and from under a heap of her clothing she drew out the book which she had carried from her father's library. She held it. Johanna's eyes fastened upon it, and Johanna outstretched her hand for it but again succeeded in restraining herself. She withdrew her hand and waited.

"It's just the door," Alice whispered, explaining her delay. "I want to lock it."

Swiftly she did so and then, before her sister, she opened the book. She parted the pages which had been stuck together and the photograph, which they had concealed, lay disclosed.

"There," breathed Alice, "there you are."

Johanna breathed not at all. She saw not herself. She saw, at the same instant that she confronted the living likenesses, the unlikenesses of this girl and herself, but she felt tingling through her: You were my mother!

She drew in breath, deeply, triumphantly. It was as if she had doubted, until this moment, that her mother had been found. She put her fingertips upon the picture as though to test its reality.

"Give it to me! O give it to me, please!"

"It's yours," whispered Alice. "It never was mine. . . . O it's yours!"

And she watched the Austrian girl possess herself of the picture.

She heard Johanna speaking to the picture not in English or in French but in soft, slurring words which beyond doubt were of the tongue of her childhood and of the language of her years when, as a very little girl, she learned her lack of a mother.

For an instant the girls regarded each other. "I have read all that I have been able to find printed in the papers of—him," Johanna said. "And Mr. West, he has told me more. I have read in the papers words which show how he holds to his secret. He shields himself in silence."

"Maddening silence," said Alice. "Utterly maddening silence to my mother."

"I would like to see him," Johanna said but added quickly, "but I know I may not. What is an American prison like?"

"It is a great walled enclosure, five or six times a man's height. On the top of the walls are towers in which guards are stationed, ceaselessly watching, rifle in hand. Within the walls are the prison yards and the cell houses, set in a circle and four galleries high.

"It is 5 o'clock and after. My father—and yours? Shall I say it?" She looked at the girl.

"I have waited for you to say it," Johanna replied, "before I should."

"Well — our father, has had his supper. In a few minutes more all of them—they are about four thousand—will have been fed. They are sent to the cell houses."

"Where is he now—now that he is being locked in his cell?"

"He is in the third gallery of a cell house which is circular in form. The cells have glass doors—small, strong panes set in steel. Guards patrol the galleries sometimes, and a guard, of course, can always look in. But usually when things are quiet the guard stays in a tower in the center of the building. It is built in a circle for the sake of many efficiencies, and one of these is that the acoustics are excellent."

"Acoustics?"

"I mean that a guard can hear conversations in the cells. It is a very modern prison."

"There is a radio in the penitentiary," Alice returned to their subject of the minute before. "That is one relief when you think of the long, long evenings locked in. They have placed radio speakers so that the men in the cells can hear."

"Radio?" Johanna almost jumped. "I am asked to go on the radio tonight."

"Go?" repeated Alice in the confusion which arose within her. "You dance, don't you?"

Johanna laughed. "And one does not dance over the radio! That is true. But tonight a station here wants—it has insisted, indeed—that I be introduced to speak a few words. . . . I was not going to do it."

"But now?"

"I would like to speak for him to hear—on the chance that he may hear. I will do it, for now I will speak directly to him."

"Over the radio!" Alice exclaimed in alarm. "What will you say?"

"Something very careful!" O very, very careful, indeed! Yet there is a way—there must be a way and we have merely to prepare it—by which my voice at least may reach to him, and he will know it is me."

AT THE penitentiary, and at the hour of half-past five, as should be, the single signal shot was fired to proclaim the count complete and correct. All prisoners in place for the night. And in the cells the long, long evening began.

Lucian Myrand looked at his cellmate and Mr. Harney Hamilton once more and with keenest interest returned the inspection.

Harney was perfectly sure that the opinion of a fellow convict, who had spoken to him about Myrand, was correct. Myrand had passed the point of mere speculative half dreaming scheming of possible escape—a condition chronic enough among convicts—and was preparing a definite attempt at escape.

The silence of the cell was broken. The radio had come on. Music at first, and between the programs announcements.

"Keep tuned on this station. . . . This is what we bring you throughout this evening. A half hour of music mixing the latest song hits and most popular favorites by . . . the dramatic comedy sketch featuring . . . at half past seven a big specialty program bigger even than when we announced it to you this afternoon. We have added another to the galaxy of stars from the stage and screen who will speak to you. A new, fresh, vivid, vibrant personality this week has captured and enraptured Chicago. Johanna Strang, the Bohemian dancer, so popular that already her performance is breaking box office records. . . ."

Harney Hamilton heard a sigh which, in its sharpness, seemed almost like a cry though no one more than a few feet away could have heard it.

Harney had been gazing, as people do, in the direction of the radio speaker, but now he spun and stared at his cellmate.

Lucian had backed away to the wall and stood against it, as if steadying himself. He was drawn to his full height, tense and whiter than Harney had ever seen him before.

". . . Of course we cannot present Mlle. Strang's dance over the air, and yet we can, too. She does one of her dances singing a lively little Bohemian song with a lilt and life of its own—or of her own, we should say. She will sing that to you, dancing while she sings it, then she will speak a few words to you. . . ."

Lucian was struggling with himself. He was trying to summon from within him the power to efface his feelings, to deny them before his cellmate and dissemble again, but for once this was beyond his power. And Harney, of course, had an advantage. He knew that Lucian had obtained and had kept hidden in the cell the picture, from the paper, of Johanna Strang, and Harney by this time "knew" more than that, too.

Harney said, "Like to hear that girl, Lucian?"

"Like?" whispered Lucian, and after the single word had to wet his lips.

"Yes," Lucian managed to say.

Watch Your Heart! IF YOU WISH TO LIVE LONG

Care of General Health Protects Vital Organ

By JOHN A. MENAUGH

WATCH your heart!

But not too closely.

The heart, as everyone should know, has a habit, when in normal condition, of taking care of itself admirably. Too much heart consciousness may be just as undesirable as a complete disregard of that important organ of the body. When one is advised, therefore, to watch his heart, the idea being conveyed is not that the individual should keep his attention focused upon his heart, but rather that he should live properly and direct his physical behavior in such a manner as to maintain his heart in a healthy condition as long as possible.

"Watch your heart" in this sense means something quite different from "worry about your heart." It means, in other words, that one should take care of his general health in every way, including a development of mental stability that would tend to banish worry and depression, so that the heart can continue to function correctly.

The importance of the organ that circulates blood throughout the body cannot be overemphasized when we pause to reflect upon the widespread prevalence of heart disease. Heart disease today claims more victims annually in this country than any other ailment. Heart disease is more highly fatal than cancer, tuberculosis, pneumonia, nephritis, or cerebral hemorrhage, as is revealed by the accompanying graph, based upon the most recent death rate tables of the Public Health Service.

Approximately 300,000 persons die each year in the United States as the result of heart ailments, and it is estimated that there are at least two million persons suffering from such ailments in this country at any time, year in and year out. The situation is virtually the same in other civilized countries, where citizens live at a high tension, are forced by economic conditions to labor hurriedly in an atmosphere of confusion and are subject to this or that affliction that may leave its aftereffects in the heart. In barbaric countries, where people live a comparatively free and easy life, it is generally believed that there is much less heart disease, although there are no reliable statistics on the subject. The figure of two million, representing the number of persons in the United States suffering from heart ailments, does not include the many who by ignorance or neglect are allowing themselves to drift into a physical condition that later will mean heart disease.

Many are the ways in which the health of the heart may become affected. Many indeed are the different ailments to which the organ is susceptible. A considerable number of these ailments are designated by terms understood only by medicoscientists, so no attempt has been made in the accompanying table to divide such diseases except in a general way, or to enumerate the ailments except as they are recognized by the layman.

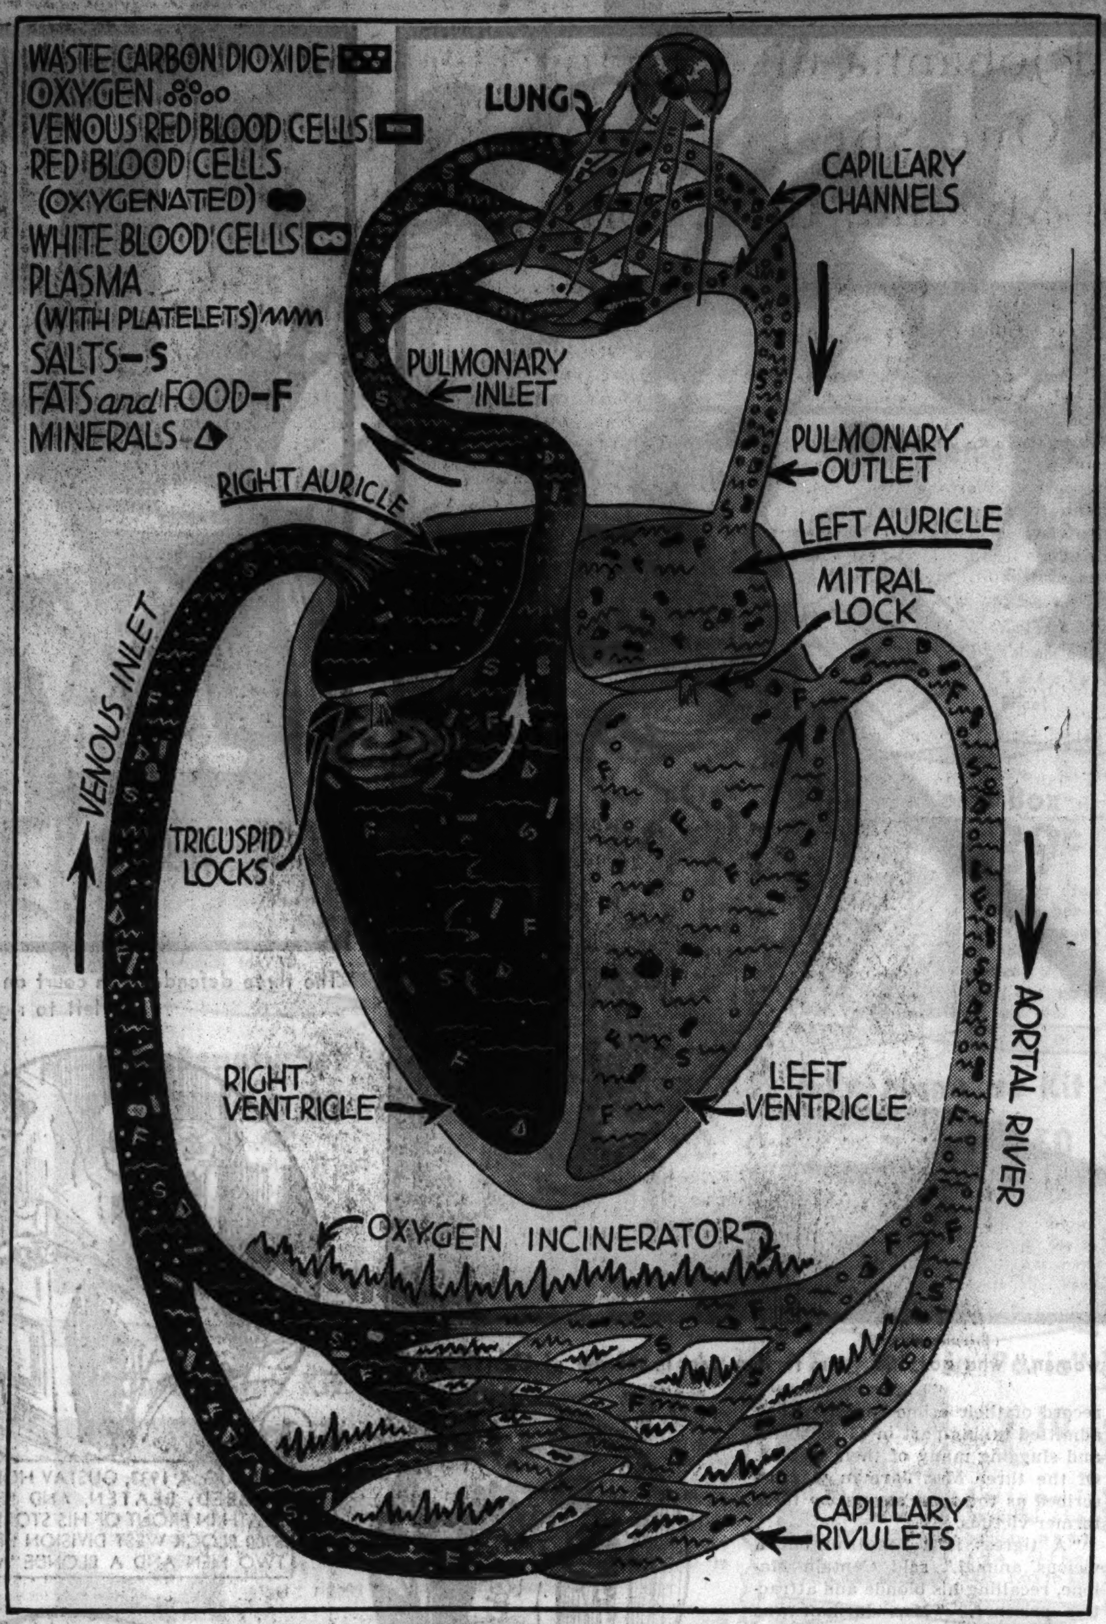
Before taking up the subject of diseases, however, and why you should "watch your heart," let us consider briefly the organ itself, what it is, where it is, and why it is. It is a body of muscular tissue lying in the chest cavity in front of the lungs and slightly to the left of the center. In the adult it weighs about a half pound, and would weigh more if it were not for the fact that it contains four hollow chambers, the two auricles and the two ventricles. It is about the size of the clenched fist of its owner. In newly born babies it weighs less than an ounce. Since its purpose is to maintain a constant flow of blood through the blood channels of the body, it is connected with the circulatory system by vessels that carry the outflowing blood (arteries) and vessels that carry the back-flowing blood (veins). It in addition has its own circulatory system. The muscle wall of the heart is termed the myocardium. The fibrous sac in which the organ lies is called the pericardium. The entire hollow interior of the heart is lined with a thin, smooth membrane known as the endocardium. All of this, and more, too, is revealed in accompanying illustrations that explain more clearly than can words the nature of the heart and the circulatory system.

Inasmuch as its job is to force blood through the blood vessels of the body, the heart, in plainest language, is a pump—but it is the most amazing pump ever devised by nature and one that is far more efficient than any ever devised by man. It never rests. From about four months before its owner's birth until the moment of his last dying gasp it throbs constantly, day and night, night and day, month after month, year after year. Those throbs, which can be felt in the region of the organ itself or in the arteries that lie close to the surface of the body (the pulse), but which are unnoticeable when one's mind is not on the subject, are in reality the contractions of the heart. The contraction, or beat, of the heart is called the systole. The period between contractions is known as the diastole.

The heart beats 100 times a minute in a small child and on an average of 72 times a minute in an adult. Apparently, with some exceptions, the smaller the body the more rapid the pulse. In a mouse, for instance, the heart beats from 500 to 1,000 times a minute, and in a horse only 30 times a minute.

The human heart pumps about 500 gallons of blood a day in an adult. During a normal lifetime it beats about two and a half billion times and moves a total of nearly 35 million gallons of blood. As stated before, it never rests; that is, it never rests completely. The moments between its beats, when it relaxes and fills with the liquid so vital to life, are the periods of least strain. The slower the heart beat, within a healthy range, of course, the less the strain. That is why the heart of the calmly relaxed person or the sleeping person is having a much easier time of it than that of the person who is dashing up a flight of stairs. Plenty of rest and relaxation, therefore, are extremely important in maintaining the heart in an efficient condition.

Without dispute, rest and relaxation, both physical and mental, are first in importance in the treatment of nearly all ailments of the heart. No matter what medicines are prescribed or what other remedial measures are deemed necessary, the physician almost invariably tells his patient to refrain from overexertion, take life calmly, and, in serious cases, to go to bed at once.



The blood system here is reduced to a simple diagram to make it as plain as possible. Functions of the heart, the arteries, the veins, and the capillaries can be seen at a glance. Note where, in the capillaries, the oxygen in the blood is burned up, and where, in the capillary channels of the lungs, the blood acquires fresh oxygen. What are shown as locks are the valves of the heart.

Heart diseases lead all other diseases as the cause of death in the United States. This graph is based upon the Public Health Service's most recent figures. It shows a marked increase in deaths from heart ailments in 1934 as compared with 1933.

In the accompanying table of common heart ailments, second on the list is rheumatic fever, which in reality is a generalized disease, not confined to any one part of the body. It is placed among the foremost of the heart ailments (as such it is first in importance) because it is the primary cause of a large proportion of heart disease cases and virtually all of such cases that develop in early life or in early middle life. Rheumatic fever is in the main a disease of childhood, being most prevalent between the ages of five and twenty, although it may continue throughout life. The peak of the frequency of rheumatic fever is at the ages of twelve to fourteen, and the low point is about at the age of twenty. On the subject of "watch your heart" in relation to this malady the advice should be elaborated into "watch for rheumatic fever and its minor manifestations in childhood." Eliminate rheumatic fever, according to a well known heart specialist of Chicago, and you eliminate the greater portion of heart diseases and practically all heart diseases in early life and early middle life.

Rheumatic fever is a streptococcus infection. It may be one particular type of germ, or there may be more than one kind that produces this dangerous malady. Then, too, there may be other factors in addition to the invading organism or organisms that help in producing the disease, which is likely to manifest itself in many and various forms. Perhaps, on the onslaught of the ailment, there are no symptoms sufficiently grave to attract notice. That is one of the aspects of the disease—it may be so mild in a patient that it is completely ignored. But its after-effects may be serious and eventually fatal. It may exist in the body and cause structural damage to the heart without any recognized symptoms at all.

Children who have frequent colds or sore throats, who are below normal in weight, who fatigue quickly, who have little appetite, who are pallid and show evidences of mild anemia, who have pains in muscles and joints, who have small round nodules beneath the surface of the skin, and who sometimes develop slight fevers, should be watched closely. Better still, they should be examined by physicians on the possibility that they have rheumatic fever. Any one of these symptoms, or several of them, may occur and then disappear. That is not to be taken as evidence that rheumatic fever has vanished. The child may still have the disease. There is no magic in the way of cure for rheumatic fever. The best that even a heart specialist can recommend in a general way includes merely plenty of rest over a more or less protracted period of time and frequent examinations by a physician. On the possibility that any fever may be a manifestation of this extremely dangerous ailment, parents are advised to keep children in bed whenever there is an abnormal temperature and until the fever has been gone for some little time. In the known case of rheumatic fever the child should be kept in bed for two or three weeks after the fever has disappeared.

Chorea, or St. Vitus' dance, is a condition that is closely allied to rheumatic fever. It occurs most frequently in girls and is generally limited to children of early school age. Carditis, or inflammation of the heart, should not be regarded as a complication or as an aftermath of rheumatic fever, but as an essential part. Pericarditis, or inflammation of the walls of the sac in which the heart is inclosed, may be one of the first manifestations of rheumatic fever.

Three or four years after an attack of rheumatic fever the heart may be found to be damaged, even without any evidence of an attack having been noted in the intervening time. In the case of chorea the child may appear to be in good health for seven years after the attack and then the heart show evidence of damage.

Rheumatic fever is most common in the temperate regions and less common in hot countries, although presence of much moisture or lack of moisture apparently have no bearing on the ailment. The disease is not contagious in the sense that it is transported from one developed case to another. In so-called epidemics of the disease it is not that new cases are contracted, but rather that some other infections, such as sore thoats or colds, have caused recurrences or flare-ups of old cases.

First in the list of common heart ailments is the congenitally defective heart, which, in fact, is a condition rather than a disease. Relatively few children are born with defective hearts. Their problem is not nearly so serious as that presented by the prevalence of rheumatic fever. The child born with a heart that is below normal in efficiency must take care throughout life to keep from putting any unusual strain upon the organ. He may show no symptoms of his condition at all, or there may be merely a shortness of breath. A physician's examination will disclose any suspected defect in the heart from birth, but there is little that can be done about it except stress the importance of moderation in living—in work, in play, in eating, and in drinking. Many persons born with defective hearts live out the normal span of life.

Subacute bacterial endocarditis, one of the dangerous ailments of the heart, is a streptococcus infection involving the lining of the heart. Persons who have had rheumatic fever are most likely to be those that develop endocarditis in later life. In fact, the curve of endocarditis goes up at the age of twenty, the point at which rheumatic fever is lowest in frequency. The symptoms of subacute bacterial endocarditis are those of an infection, with slight or moderate fever, and weakness. Physicians in the case of this malady, as in virtually all other heart ailments, advise rest and frequent examinations.

Where there is a rapid pulse, or occasionally an abnormal heart-beat rhythm, or in some cases shortness of breath or pain, the underlying cause may be toxic thyroid, that is, an overactive thyroid gland. It may be an oversecretion of thyroid material or a secretion that is in some way abnormal. This condition occurs from about the age of twenty years on. Adequate treatment of the thyroid condition, with surgery resorted to when it is considered necessary, is likely to take care of the heart abnormality brought on by the condition.

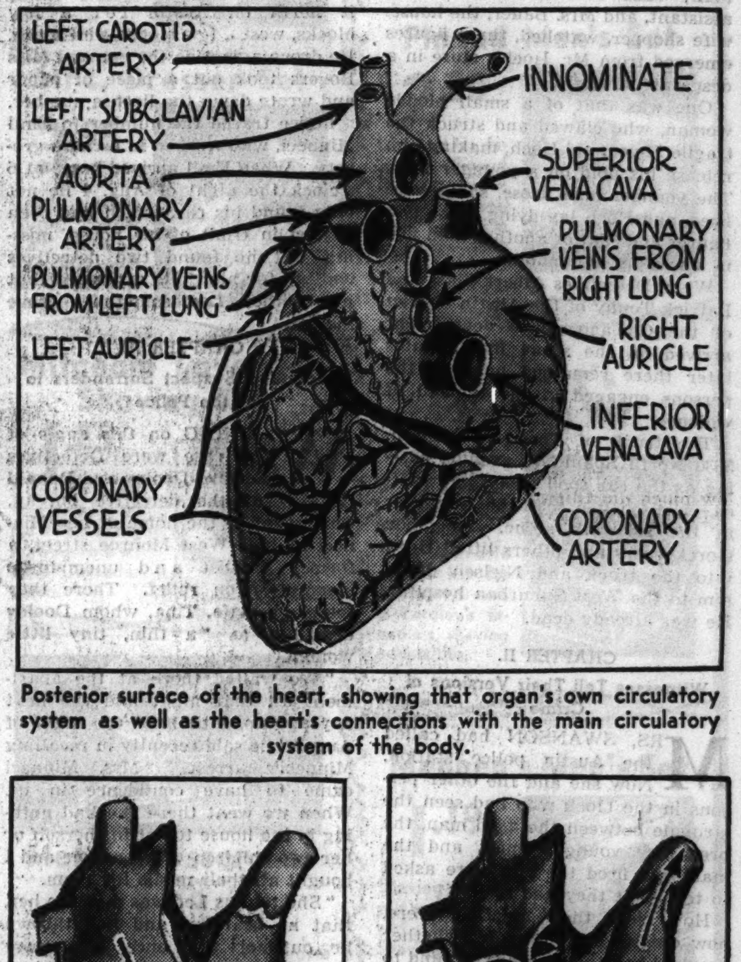
In syphilis of the heart, which may occur in the twenties but which is more common in the middle or later middle life, a great deal of caution must be exercised by the treating physician. Syphilis can cause extensive damage to the organ before the patient becomes aware that anything is wrong. Blood tests for syphilis naturally do not show whether the heart has become infected, and for that reason X-ray examinations are frequently necessary. Heart specialists generally agree that in cases of syphilis of the heart, treatment should be directed primarily at that condition, with the underlying syphilis treated secondarily and with extreme caution. A heart that has been infected with the spirochetes of syphilis can be repaired if treated in time so that it can carry on its essential work in a competent manner. Damaged heart muscle cannot be replaced, but damaged muscle can be healed over adequately with scar tissue. The organ can continue functioning. In that respect it is unlike the brain that has been damaged beyond repair by syphilis.

Another condition, which affects the circulatory system and is closely connected with the heart itself, is hypertension, or high blood pressure. It comes in middle to late life. Usually it is without any particular symptoms. And there is little that can be done about it, except that plenty of rest and calm relaxation, with moderation in eating and drinking, make of it in many cases a fairly easy burden to bear. Frequently persons with high blood pressure live to a ripe old age.

Perhaps most dreaded of all heart ailments are angina pectoris and coronary thrombosis. Though both of these diseases frequently prove fatal, neither is necessarily deadly. In fact, persons suffering from angina pectoris sometimes live for years. Angina is caused by a temporary stoppage of the heart's own blood supply, and coronary thrombosis is caused by a prolonged stoppage of the organ's supply of blood, usually because of a clot in a blood vessel. In the first named there are short, sharp pains, in the last named the pains are continuous.



Posterior surface of the heart, showing that organ's own circulatory system as well as the heart's connections with the main circulatory system of the body.

Both ailments occur most frequently in middle age, with the peak at about the age of fifty-five. The treatment for one is virtually the same as for the other, with great emphasis placed upon rest and relaxation. Angina occurs commonly among professional or business men who work under tension and have many worries. Often when they are able to get away from their business and their worries they become all right and have no attacks. The same holds true in coronary thrombosis.

Many are the drugs and medicinal preparations that have been discovered or perfected that are used in the treatment of heart ailments. There are those that are employed as tonics for their building-up and strengthening effect upon the heart, and there are others that are used only in great emergencies to save or prolong life. Many drugs that enter the circulation exert some action on the heart, pronounced in some cases, negligible in others. As previously pointed out, virtually all medicinal treatment of heart ailments is secondary to rest and relaxation. It is only the drug used in an emergency that stands apart from this group. Because only a physician is competent to administer heart medicines, the names of such medicines, even commonest ones, are purposely left out of this article. It is not advisable—not even safe—for the afflicted person to attempt to treat himself. The most one should do, and in the manner described in the introductory paragraphs of this article, is:

Tiger Woman!

MURDER BY GUN GIRL AND TWO COMPANIONS

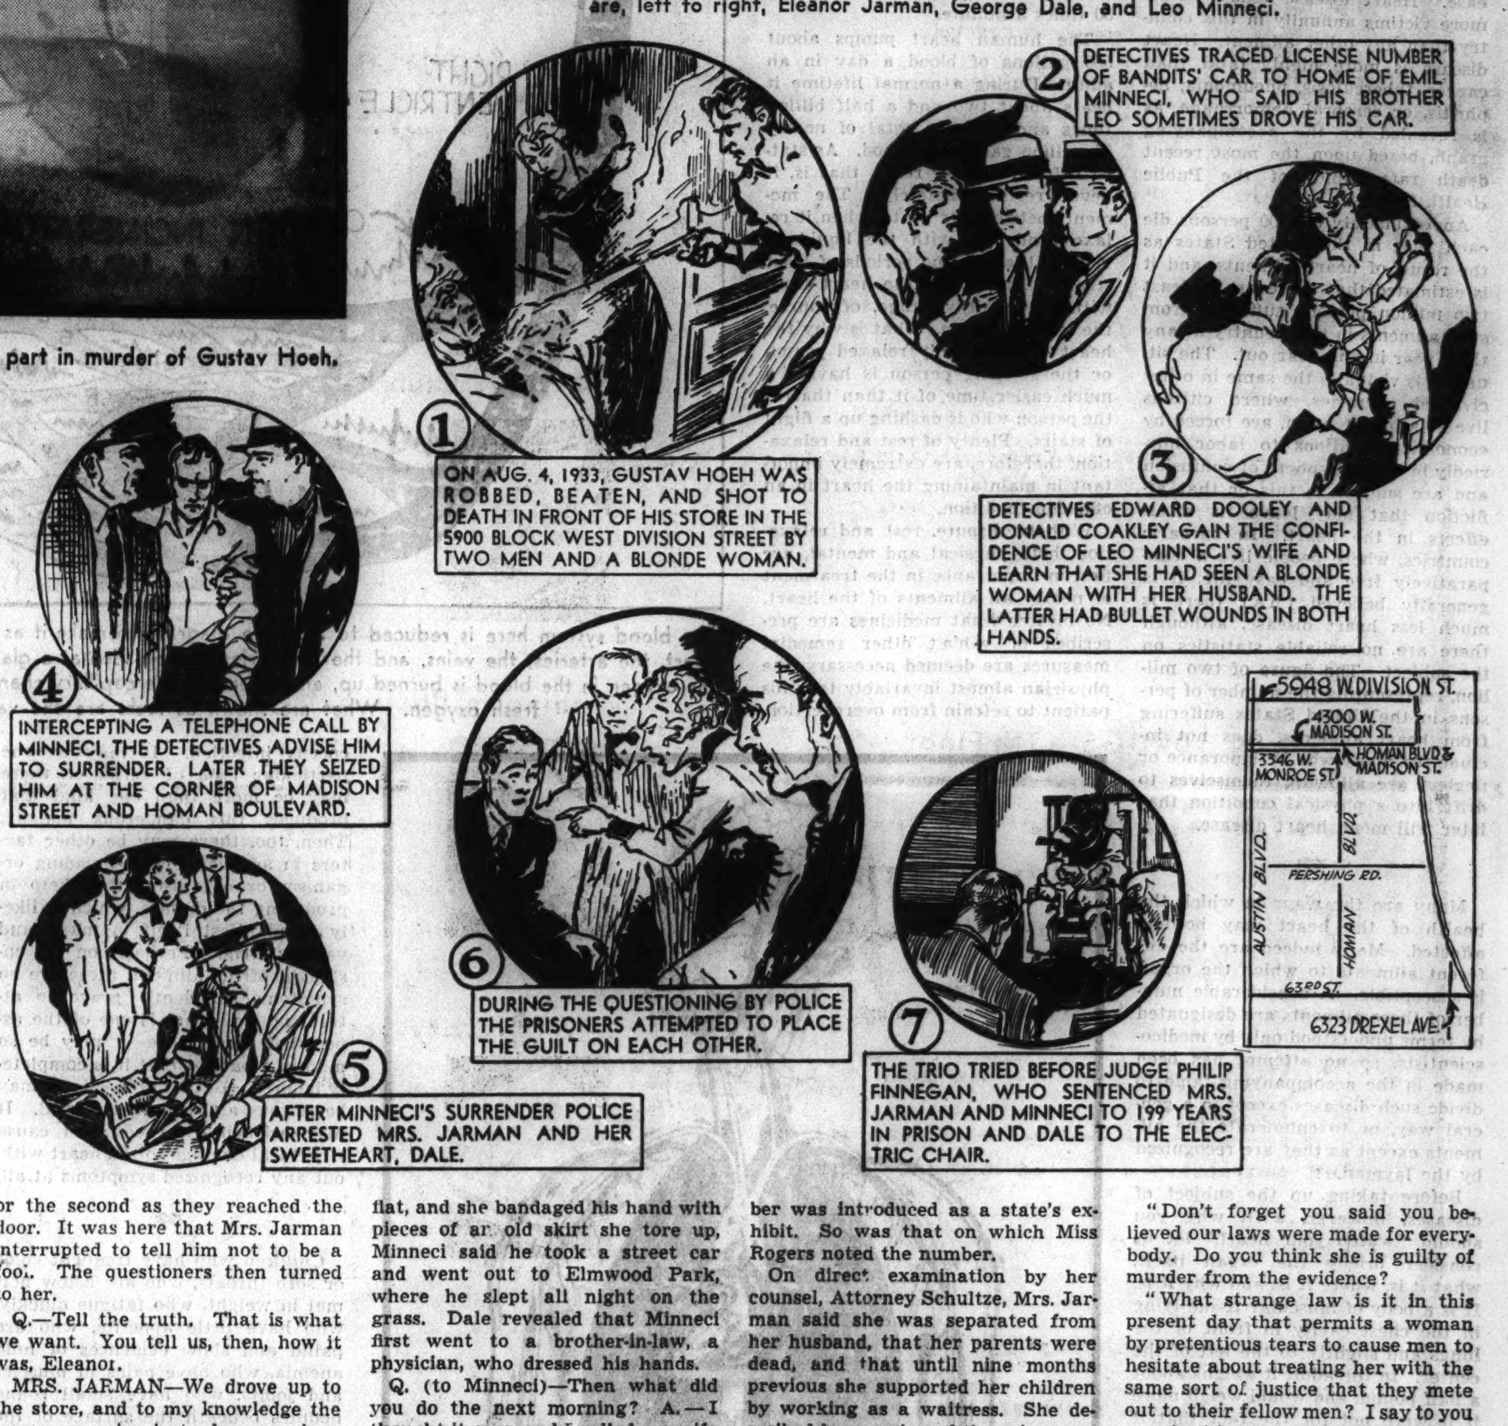
Eleanor Jarman, the "blonde tiger woman," who got 199 years for her part in murder of Gustav Hoeh.

The three defendants in court on the day that they were sentenced. Sitting in front of a guard of bailifs are, left to right, Eleanor Jarman, George Dale, and Leo Minneci.



CHAPTER I.

Murder of an Elderly Haberdasher

AT 2:39 O'CLOCK on the afternoon of Aug. 4, 1933, the 5900 block in West Division street, Chicago, presented a peaceful, prosaic appearance in the sultry midafternoon heat.

Various persons were pursuing their thoroughly respectable occupations, some of them with conscientious strenuousness, others in a desultory manner.

Across the street and four doors west of Gustav Hoeh's men's furnishing store, 5948 Division street, Swan G. Swanson was pressing a pair of pants in his tailor shop. His wife, Mae, was standing near the front of the store.

Mrs. Gertrude Bauer, 1016 North Humphrey avenue, Oak Park, was waiting for a street car at Austin boulevard and Division street.

Almost directly across the street from and a little west of Hoeh's store Dorothy McFee, dentist's assistant, was standing near a second floor window, getting a little air in a lull moment.

William Charles Frederick of 801 North Humphrey avenue, Oak Park, representative of an Indianapolis hosiery mill, was in a barber shop just east of the Hoeh haberdashery. He was waiting for a haircut.

This was the setting, then; these the persons brought together by fate or circumstance in the 5900 block of West Division street at 2:39 o'clock on Aug. 4, 1933. At 2:40 o'clock the 5900 block sprang into action suddenly, violently.

As the tailor's wife, Mrs. Swanson; Frederick, the hosiery salesman; Miss McFee, the dentist's assistant, and Mrs. Bauer, the housewife shopper, watched, three figures emerged from Mr. Hoeh's store in a desperate struggle.

One was that of a small blonde woman, who clawed and struck the fragile 71-year-old Hoeh, making him release his hold on a younger man. The younger man arose, shots were fired, and Hoeh lay dying. The two figures and that of another man fled in a waiting automobile.

When Detectives Albert Glass and Patrick Touhy of the Austin district of the Chicago police department arrived on the scene five minutes later there remained none of the persons engaged in the tableau of violence.

The truck of Theodore Nielsen, 5630 North Spaulding avenue, passing as the car sped away, had halted. Nielsen had seen the confusion in the sidewalk scene. Neighbor storekeepers and others lifted Hoeh into the truck and Nielsen drove him to the West Suburban hospital. He was already dead.

CHAPTER II.

Witnesses Tell Their Versions of Crime

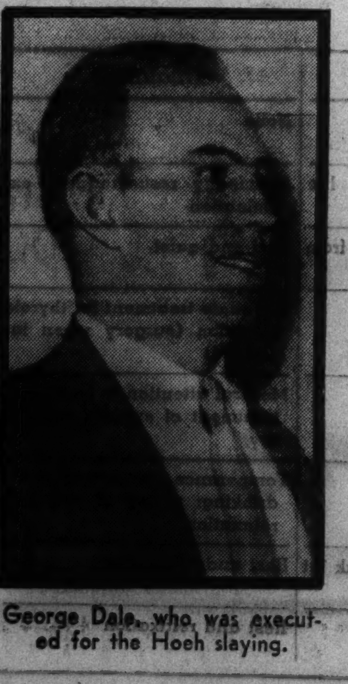
MRS. SWANSON had called the Austin police station. Now she and the other persons in the block who had seen the struggle between the aged man, the predatory young woman, and the man who fired the gun were asked to tell what they had seen.

How clear their reactions were, how quickly they thought, whether any had had the presence of mind to get the license number of the fleeing automobile, were matters on which depended the success of the detectives' work. On this hot afternoon the eventual safety or conviction of the three who had escaped from the murder scene depended on the tailor's wife, the tailor, the salesman, and the dentist's assistant and the clearness of their mental processes.

Detectives Glass and Touhy, as they leaped out of their squad car, saw nothing unusual. The 5900 block once more was quiet and serene. Their job was to reconstruct the scene through words of the witnesses.

Their statements reveal their versions of the incredibly brutal minute which preceded the flight of the blonde woman and two men in a car.

"I was waiting to get a haircut," Frederick told police. "I heard a scream for help. I jumped up and opened the door and ran across the street from the barber shop. On the way I saw Hoeh struggling with a man at the entrance to his store, and I saw a young woman stooping over, striking him. As I got about two feet from the victim the man got up and pulled a gun from his pocket and pointed it at the victim and I heard a shot."



George Dale, who was executed for the Hoeh slaying.

Frederick obtained the license number, Illinois 790748. The 21-year-old Miss McFee heard a man yell, saw Hoeh struggling with a man on the sidewalk, heard one shot, then four more, and before she saw the trio speed away she wrote down the license number on a slip of paper.

Other versions were substantially the same, although they differed as to the number of shots. Some heard four, some three, some two. This is the way any group of persons reacts under an emergency, according to Capt. Willard L. Malone of the Austin district, who directed the police work on the case. Testimony of all members of the group never will be identical, he said.

Not all of the persons who saw the aged man grappling with the younger man and the fierce blonde woman, described as weighing 110 pounds, obtained the license number of the car. A third person who thought quickly enough to do so, however, was Morris Zimbler, newsboy, 1149 North Austin boulevard, who was in a restaurant at 5959 Division street when he heard shots.

The scant descriptions of the three persons who fled the murder scene, which agreed principally on the woman's size and the fact that the driver of the car was dark and the other man bareheaded and in shirt sleeves, and three bullets found at the scene of the crime, were what the police had to work with.

Meanwhile two other persons provided information. John Brabec, 3048 South Hamlin avenue, was riding north on Austin boulevard with his friend, Miss Estelle Rogers, 3304 South 59th court, Cicero. He stopped for a light at Division street and saw a car drive rapidly away. He chased it north on Austin for a few blocks, west a few blocks, and south. He drove alongside the car and Miss Rogers took out a piece of paper and wrote down the license number.

Police traced the number to Emil Minneci, who worked in a chain grocery. When Emil arrived home at 6 o'clock the night of Aug. 4 he not only found his car, which had been parked in front of his house, missing, but he found two detectives waiting for him. He explained that his brother, Leo, sometimes drove his car.

CHAPTER III.

Wounded Suspect Surrenders to the Police

WORKING on this angle of the case were Detectives Edward Dooley and Donald Coakley of the detective bureau. They went to the home of Leo Minneci at 3346 West Monroe street, a former pugilist and unemployed steamfitter on relief. There they found his wife, Tina, whom Dooley described as "a thin, tiny little woman."

"We waited there at the apartment all that night and the next day and up until 10:30 the night of Aug. 5," he said recently in recalling Minneci's arrest. "Mrs. Minneci came to have confidence in us. When we went there she had nothing in the house to eat for herself or her two children. My partner and I bought all their meals for them.

"She told us Leo was mean to her, that he beat her and had thrown her out more than once. They were on relief then. Finally she told us that she had seen Minneci after 2:40 o'clock on Aug. 4." She had gone over to the apartment of a woman named Mrs. Eleanor Jarman at 4300 Madison street, a woman with whom Minneci was associating much of the time, Mrs. Minneci told police. There she had seen Mrs. Jarman bandaging her husband's hands. He had been shot through both palms.

"Mrs. Jarman pointed a gun at me and told me to forget what I had seen," said Mrs. Minneci, Detective Dooley recalled.

The Jarman flat was raided after Mrs. Minneci's story, and evidence of recent flight by its occupants was obtained. Then at 10:30 o'clock the night of Aug. 5 Minneci telephoned his wife. Detective Dooley took the phone receiver.

"Listen," he began, "we know where you are and we'll catch up with you. When we do we're going to shoot first and ask questions later. You'd better surrender and save your life."

Minneci agreed to surrender in front of the Bell Telephone company building at Madison street and Homan boulevard. Detectives Dooley and Coakley picked him up there. Blood poisoning was threatened in the fugitive's hands and infection already had set in. He said he had spent the previous night sleeping in prairies.

Hurried to the bureau and given medical attention and lockjaw serum to forestall blood poisoning, Minneci talked. He named George Dale, alias Kennedy, who occupied the West Madison street flat with Mrs. Jarman, as the actual killer.

Mrs. Jarman was named as a companion in the crime. Minneci admitted having been present but denied any part in the killing.

Detectives Glass and Touhy asked him where he met Dale and learned that a man had introduced them when Minneci worked at the Municipal nursery on Harlem avenue. The man's first or last name—he could not recall which—was Lloyd. A relief station at Western avenue and Harrison street had placed Minneci on the Municipal nursery job for a few weeks. At the station the detectives learned what dates he worked there.

They next went to relief headquarters, and examination of the time rolls showed that a Lloyd Grant had worked on this work relief project at the same time. He lived at 4808 Iowa street. After a four-hour wait there the detectives learned he was the man who had introduced Dale and Minneci. They asked him about other acquaintances of Dale. The only one he knew, he said, was a man who had lived with Eleanor Jarman for two years before Dale met her and lived with her.

"He said that this fellow had lived at 35 South St. Louis avenue," Detective Glass continued. "We went there and found he had moved two months before. We next went to the postoffice at Harrison street and Crawford avenue and learned he had changed his address to 32 South Kedzie avenue.

"At that address we learned the man was out of town. We had the janitor let us in the apartment. There we found a dog and three pairs of shoes bearing the brand of a certain group of chain stores.

"Now, it happened that half an hour before Hoeh was shot to death a shoe store of the chain store group, at Crawford and North avenues, was held up by two men and a woman. Witnesses had described her as a small blonde woman.

"My partner and I waited in the apartment with the dog and the three pairs of shoes for two days and nights. Then we were rewarded. The man who occupied it returned. In the pocket of the suit he wore we found a ticket he had purchased when he crossed a toll bridge over the Mississippi river. His car was muddy and dirty.

"We told him that if he withheld any information from us that we later learned he automatically would be an accessory after the fact. He decided to tell us the truth. He had taken Mrs. Jarman's two children to a sister of hers in Sioux City, Ia.

"We brought him into the station," Glass continued. "He finally told us that Mrs. Jarman and Dale had rented a room at 6323 Drexel avenue and were living there under the name of Anderson. We took along a dozen policemen and went out there.

"We went up to their second-floor apartment, put our shoulders and feet to the door and broke it in."

CHAPTER IV.

Woman and Companion Taken Without Resistance

ELEANOR JARMAN and Dale were arrested there without resistance about 9 o'clock that night. Mrs. Jarman had dyed her hair a reddish yellow in an effort to avoid detection. It was Aug. 9, five days after the Hoeh killing. A neatly wrapped package was seized in the apartment when they were arrested and was found to contain four guns and a blackjack.

Shortly before 10:30 o'clock that night the three companions in crime, Mrs. Jarman, Dale, and Minneci, were brought into the Austin police station. Then began the police work of questioning them separately throughout the night.

Captain Malone broke down stories. Numerous persons who had been held up by a bandit trio identified them. They were identified by a total of 37 robbery victims, most of them declaring that Mrs. Jarman carried a pistol and a blackjack in a large purse. Her custom, they said, was to hand Dale the gun, while she stood by with the blackjack and in several instances aided in beating a resisting storekeeper.

As robbery victims piled up evidence of Mrs. Jarman's brutality, police gave her the name of "the tiger woman", or "the blonde tigress." Although no evidence concerning previous crimes could be introduced in court in their trial, the Austin police amassed an impressive record of their crime career. They admitted taking part in 48 robberies and slugging many of their victims. Of the three Mrs. Jarman was described as the most savage by their former victims.

"A tigress is a beautiful but a vicious animal," said Captain Malone, recalling his blonde and attractive prisoner. "Mrs. Jarman was not exactly beautiful, but she was small, graceful, and attractive—and Dale was desperately in love with her. She was the brains of the three. And cruel she must have been. A witness at the inquest (held at 5837 West North avenue) said she kicked Hoeh in the face as he lay dying on the sidewalk."

Police describe the scene which took place in Captain Malone's office in the Austin station at 5327 West Chicago avenue, at 11:47 o'clock Thursday night, Aug. 10, 1933, as one of intense drama. Minneci, trying desperately to lie his way out of guilt in the murder, had done nothing to shield Mrs. Jarman and had pinned all he could onto Dale. He had identified a blue .38-caliber revolver as Dale's gun and said Hoeh was shot with the weapon.

Dale, who had been told what Minneci was saying, now faced Minneci. So did Eleanor Jarman, who accused him of lying. Eleanor, the tigress, fought fiercely to save Dale, and Dale likewise fought to shield her.

At one point during the questioning Dale was asked who had the gun. He evaded the question, saying there was a gun in the store and that he and Minneci scrambled for it. Mrs. Jarman interrupted to say to Dale:

"Don't be a fool. Leo is shielding himself. He had the gun or you had the gun. Don't be a fool. He is not sticking up for you, and he lied on me several ways. Don't be a fool."

Present as they were questioned were Assistant State's Attorney William T. Crilly, Deputy Chief of Detectives William V. Blaul, Detectives Patrick Touhy and Albert Glass; a reporter, C. H. Isaacson, and the prisoners—Dale, alias George Kennedy, 28 years old; Minneci, alias Joe Miller, 27 years old, and Mrs. Jarman, 29 years old. Mrs. Jarman was the mother of two children, Leroy Jr., 10 years old, and Laverne, 9 years old.

Dale said that he went to Mrs. Jarman's flat at 4300 West Madison street on Friday, Aug. 4, and found Minneci there. They drove west and then north to the haberdashery at Austin boulevard and Division street. He said he went in to buy a shirt, that Joe also came in for a shirt, and that "some kind of an argument started" in which they scuffled for a gun Hoeh had. The gun was discharged, he said.

"All three of us scuffled at the front door and the revolver was discharged," he said. "She was not in on it at all [alluding to Eleanor]; she cleaned away from us, did not even know what was going on at the time."

Minneci said Dale and Mrs. Jarman were standing near each other and close to Hoeh, the merchant, on the same side of a long counter, and that he was some distance away.

"Eleanor must have given the gun to George," he said, "and George says 'Stick 'em up.' Mr. Hoeh was still fighting there with him, and somehow I pulled the gun away. . . . He shot me through the hand."

Dale was asked if Minneci's version were correct. He said it was not, that "she was away over on the other side here," and that he and Leo were on either side of Hoeh. He said he didn't know which one fired the first shot in the "scuffle" or the second as they reached the door. It was here that Mrs. Jarman interrupted to tell him not to be a fool. The questioners then turned to her.

Q.—Tell the truth. That is what we want. You tell us, then, how it was, Eleanor.

MRS. JARMAN—We drove up to the store, and to my knowledge the men were going in to do some shopping. Minneci did not come in later. We all went in at the same time. The two men stayed at the front of the store. Mr. Hoeh was right at the front of the store, and he was showing them shirts, or whatever they asked for. I walked back and was looking at ties. There were some pretty blue ties and I was admiring them. I heard somebody ask for a longer shirt sleeve, and that is all that was said, and the shot was fired. There was no this or no that. There was no nothing. Just the shot was fired. I turned around that instant.

Q.—Do you know who fired the shot?

MRS. JARMAN—No, I do not. I did not even know what they were doing.

Q. (to Minneci)—Didn't you tell the officers that when you got in the car George said, "I got that —— —— —— in the shoulder"? A.—Yes. After they went to Mrs. Jarman's flat, and she bandaged his hand with pieces of an old skirt she tore up, Minneci said he took a street car and went out to Elmwood Park, where he slept all night on the grass. Dale revealed that Minneci first went to a brother-in-law, a physician, who dressed his hands.

Q. (to Minneci)—Then what did you do the next morning? A.—I thought it over, and I called my wife up. She said, "It is in the paper already; did you kill somebody?" Then I told her about this here.

Mrs. Jarman related how at 10:30 o'clock that night when she saw "a big headline" in the newspapers, "I started packing in a hurry." She and Dale went to a rooming house at Chicago avenue and State street, obtained two rooms, and spent several days there. She went out once a day to get food. On Monday they moved to the Drexel avenue address. She did not leave that place at all, she said. George went out to purchase the food.

Toward the close of the statement taken in the police station the three had an argument over the gun. Policemen reminded Minneci that he had said Eleanor carried a large purse and had taken the gun from this purse and given it to George. Minneci replied that George had had on a shirt, with no place in his clothing to conceal a gun.

CHAPTER V.

Trio Tried Before Judge Philip L. Finnegan

MRS. JARMAN, her sweetheart, Dale, and Minneci went to trial before Judge Philip L. Finnegan in the Criminal court Aug. 28, 1933. Attorney Jefferson Schultze represented Mrs. Jarman, and Attorney Irving Abrams represented Minneci. Dale was represented by Joseph Power, then public defender.

Witnesses testified that Mrs. Jarman had helped Dale beat Hoeh and pommeled and pushed the aged man until, worn out with the struggle, he had released Dale. Frederick, the salesman of hosiery, identified Mrs. Jarman as the woman who struck Hoeh on the back of the head, and Dale as the man who fired several shots. He did not see Minneci.

Brabec and Miss Rogers identified Minneci as the driver of the car in which they fled from the scene of the crime. Miss McFee identified Mrs. Jarman, and the scrap of paper on which she wrote the license number was introduced as a state's exhibit. So was that on which Miss Rogers noted the number.

On direct examination by her counsel, Attorney Schultze, Mrs. Jarman said she was separated from her husband, that her parents were dead, and that until nine months previous she supported her children by working as a waitress. She described her version of the crime.

Under cross-examination by Assistant State's Attorney Wilbert Crowley, who conducted the prosecution in the speedy trial of the three for Mr. Hoeh's murder, some of the questions asked of the woman and the answers included the following:

Q.—The first thing you noticed about a commotion was a shot? A.—My back was turned to them until the shot was fired, and then I got excited and turned around, and the three of them were in a huddle, scuffling.

Q.—You didn't stop and stare; all excited, you ran toward the automobile, didn't you? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—You weren't excited when you saw Dale back away from the old man and fire at him with the gun? A.—I didn't see that.

Q.—You didn't get too excited when you got on the other man's back and set him up like a tenpin to be knocked down, did you?

MR. SCHULTZE—I object to that as utterly immaterial and prejudicial.

THE COURT—Objection overruled.

MR. CROWLEY—Were you in the doorway on top of that old man? A.—I wasn't near him.

Q.—Were you clawing at him and hitting him? A.—I wasn't near him.

Q.—Striking him in the back? A.—The nearest I could get to the three of them was when I ran around him to get outside.

Q.—And right in that doorway, when he held your boy chum Dale down, didn't you slug him from the back, and didn't he straighten up that way? A.—No, sir.

Q.—And wasn't it then that Dale jerked away and pulled the gun and gave it to him? A.—I got out of the store; I didn't see a thing.

During his closing argument Assistant State's Attorney Crowley asked the jury to impose a death sentence on all three. He described Minneci as "yellow and crawfishing."

Speaking of Mrs. Jarman, he declared:

"Don't forget you said you believed our laws were made for everybody. Do you think she is guilty of murder from the evidence?

"What strange law is it in this present day that permits a woman by pretentious tears to cause men to hesitate about treating her with the same sort of justice that they mete out to their fellow men? I say to you men in this case, don't give Dale any more than you give her. She is just as guilty as he."

On Aug. 30 the jury found all three defendants guilty of murder. Dale's penalty was fixed at death in the electric chair. Mrs. Jarman and Minneci were given penitentiary sentences of 199 years each, setting a record in Cook county courts.

CHAPTER VI.

One of Three Put to Death for Murder

THE cases were appealed and the Supreme court found that all had been given a fair trial. On April 19, 1934, Dale was put to death in the Cook county jail just as the sun was rising. He was calm and walked erect to the chair. The last few hours of his life he spent in writing to "the blonde tigress." The letter was delivered to her in the women's model prison at Dwight, where she is incarcerated.

In his short note he told her that he had not forgotten her.

Mrs. Jarman's children are with a sister in Sioux City, Ia. She declared she had taken precautions that they never should know her whereabouts. Before she was sentenced Mrs Jarman told reporters, "I feel lucky that I got out with a prison sentence instead of—well, you know what."

While Minneci is in the prison at Joliet, having been denied supersedeas and bail last June by the Supreme court, Mrs. Jarman is imprisoned in the "medium security building" at Dwight. This building is heavily barred. Officials at the institution said that because of her heavy sentence and her periodic discouragement it was safer that she be in a building heavily barred.

She spends part of the day working in the laundry and part of the morning hours in school. Her behavior has been good and she has "gotten along unusually well," it was said by institution officials.

Society Avers It's Returned to Simple Life

'Any One Ready for Dates Any Time; Week's Thrills Begin with Spanish Prince.

By Cousin Eve.

ONE drinks enough tea these shortest days of the year to drown in, everybody being more truly social than in memory of man. You can get anybody for any party at almost any time. Nobody has any affectations of being dated up. We are back at rugged simplicity.

Of visitors this week, a royalty in the person of Don Alfonso of Bourbon-Orleans, a distinguished Spaniard and first cousin of Alfonso, former king of Spain. The prince is a tall blond with straight figure and serious face who works from dawn until dark in the automotive industry. Before the Spanish revolution he was one of the wealthiest men in Europe. Now he is one of the workers of the world and would not, for anything, return to his former life. Don Alfonso, here on business, is the guest of Ira Nelson Morris.

There are so many people in town it surprised me to hear that the Arizona Biltmore at Phoenix is full. Mrs. Ogden Armour had already arrived there for the whole winter. Her Lake Forest building has come to a standstill, as David Adler, her architect, had one of the worst accidents of the hunting season at Lake Forest a fortnight ago. Noble Judah, missing the rider late in the afternoon, went back over the course and found him lying unconscious under his horse, which was blotto, too. Noble Judah sat on the horse's head lest he recover and begin to struggle before help should come for the injured man. For days the noted architect lay in coma and his condition is not yet good.

Elting Gives Tea After Symphony.

On Tuesday, after the symphony concert, Victor Elting's tea in the library of International Relations, of which he is chairman. A small suite of rooms in the John Crerar library, full of pamphlets on dry subjects, I should say. But the last word, perhaps, in information, league of nations, and all that sort of thing.

Eloise Requa is director of the International Relations library, and Mrs. William B. Hale, vice chairman. On the library committee, Mrs. Charles S. Dewey, Mrs. Warren Everett, Henry Field, Mrs. William G. Hibbard, Mrs. Frank Hixon, Morton D. Hull, Mrs. William McGovern, Bernadotte Schmitt, George Voevodsky, Mrs. Paul Welling, Quincy Wright.

Susan Follansbee, Irma Platte, and several other charming misses were passing edibles. Present also were Mrs. Mitchell D. Follansbee, Mrs. William Hibbard, Mrs. William B. Hale, Mrs. Albert Wetten, George Voevodsky, Mr. and Mrs. Sadao Naguchi of Japan, Lewis Bernays and Gordon McLain of the British foreign office. The latter attractive guest of the Bernays has an interesting job of traveling. He is one of the three inspectors of consulates for Great Britain in the whole world.

Mr. and Mrs. Bernays were at home at 5 o'clock to one of the gayest tea mobs in weeks. I don't even know who was pouring tea, it was so lively. Dr. and Mrs. Waclaw Gavronski of Poland, Mrs. Reinald Baumann and her daughter, the lovely Baroness Wedell of Wedellsborg, Denmark; Mrs. Chauncey B. Borland, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Ayer, Mrs. Edward Litsinger, Mrs. Charles H. Chadwick, Mrs. Charles Hamill, Mrs. Eric Gerstenberg.

Templeton Plays Handel Version of "It Ain't Gonna Rain No More."

Among the guests Alec Templeton, the young blind pianist, traveling with the Jack Hylton company. Late in the afternoon young Templeton went to the piano and sang three skits—the first how Italian opera sounds to him. This was too funny! The second was a French cabaret singer with her la las, and the third, as Handel would have written, "It Ain't Gonna Rain No More."

Alec Templeton can learn a concerto in twenty-four hours. An interesting feature of his interesting life is that his father, also on tour, went regularly to school with him during childhood, and was eyes for his son in the classroom, as well as in music.

Mrs. Bernays' costume was notably smart—a tea gown effect of dark red velvet with a short coat of striped lamé in many colors. The last post from London has brought an election photograph of Robert Bernays, M. P., together with Anthony Eden, both returned to parliament by large majorities.

Couturiere Halts Everything to Make Dress for Virginia Pope.

A Cinderella story from New York about one of our playmates, Virginia Hamilton Pope, now fashion editress of a New York newspaper. Miss Pope, born in Chicago and popular in society, had ever a flair for dress and wore interesting clothes. After she took up writing in Gotham, she served an apprenticeship with a New York newspaper along various lines, until the fashion billet became hers. Now the great couturiers of Paris and London bow before her, and those of New York, too, judging from this tale. A while ago there was a Velvet ball in New York. If one went, velvet was obligatory. Miss Pope provided herself with a velvet dress, but it was an absolute fiasco, so she decided not to go at all. The most fashionable dressmaker in New York heard the day before the ball that Miss Pope was not going and why, so she called her up. Certainly she must go to the ball, said the artist. No, said the writer, her frock was terrible.

"I myself will design and make you the loveliest velvet dress you ever saw," said the great dressmaker, who forthwith stopped the wheels of her establishment, and had all hands at work on her original model for Virginia Pope. At midnight Miss Pope stepped into the magnificent Velvet ball at the Waldorf-Astoria and later received first prize for having worn the most beautiful dress at the dance. Not a prince but a prize for this latter day Cinderella.

Settings of "La Fiamma" Five Centuries Too Late.

Speaking of prizes, Mrs. Bernard J. Mullaney of Chicago won a worthwhile trophy, a silver fox of much beauty offered to the women who sold the greatest number of opera boxes for the season just closed. Mrs. Mullaney sold six boxes—one to the mayor of Chicago. This fur was presented privately at the last matinée, the "Thais" of Miss Jepson.

This was an interesting performance to Mary Garden's admirers, as Helen Jepson was schooled in the rôle by the great diva herself, and was letter perfect in the stage technique, lovely as to voice, and lacking only in the fiery personality with which Miss Garden dominated the stage.

Lacking, too, were the glamorous Dalmores and Rene Maison of other days, as Nicias and the Athaneal of Dufranne. Mr. Fardulli has a good voice but he was made up like a gorilla, and it was hard to imagine any one being in love with his Athanael. So much knowledge goes to the makeup of an opera. One of my nippiest friends was irked at "La Fiamma" because in an opera of the seventh century the cathedral was twelfth century Gothic. For "Der Rosenkavalier" there was nothing but high praise. It is a lovely thing, given beautifully. I heard also that "Lohengrin," with Lotta Lehmann as Elsa, was an admirable performance.

Edna Kellogg as Dramatic as Duse.

In connection with the last days of grand opera, Miss Edna Kellogg, in the Blackstone ballroom, interpreting "Jewels of the Madonna," by Wolf Ferrari, to a large audience. Frederick Persons, an operatic accompanist, played themes of the opera softly as she spoke. It is a thrilling opera, full of fire and divine music, and Miss Kellogg does it with a charm of voice and manner almost hypnotic. She wore an afternoon dress of trailing black velvet, no hat, and was as dramatic as Duse.

Coming home from Paris for the holidays, Miss Elizabeth McCormick, gone since last February. She will arrive in New York for Christmas with her sister, Miss Mildred McCormick, and the Nelson Williamses. Robert Hall McCormick returns Tuesday from Boston, where he has been since September.

Coming home for Christmas with Mrs. Frederick Haskell, her mother, lovely Lila Luce, with her two little boys. Mrs. Luce has a 600 acre country place at Peapack, N. J., where recently a private horse show was held, attended by the country side.

Daughters of Danish Consul Here for Holidays.

Also just home in time for Christmas are the two Baumann girls, Rijgmar and Vilma, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Reinald Baumann, Danish consul general, and his wife. They have been in Denmark for three years, with their own establishment, as bachelor maids, and have come home full of gayety and entrain. The elder daughter, Rijgmar, a handsome, interesting girl, was chosen by the crown princess of Denmark to be one of her demoiselles d'honneur. The day before the girls arrived in Chicago fire broke out in the consulate wall in Bellevue place, and the house had to be fairly well torn up by firemen, unluckily.

St. Chrysostom's Bazar of the Church Windows passed into our village history as a success. And the turkey supper following captained by Newton Perry was the usual democratic event: long tables, red candles, Christmas greens, and the rich and the poor of the parish sitting haphazard most happily, eating the national bird in unison.

The art exhibit following, arranged by Doris Winterbotham and Eleanor Holden, was an infinitly well done showing of twelve canvases from the Art institute, with living figures. Robert Harshe, Dan Rich, and all the honorable directors of the institute should have been invited to see their masterpieces in the flesh. There were Toulouse-Lautrecs' "Circus," with Ned Platt and Eleanor Holden; a Degas ballet girl, Grant Wood's "American Gothic," Peggy Hambleton's chic and efflorescent self being compressed into a drab, ancient farmeress. The backgrounds, lighting, and posing were beautifully done.

Newton Perry, publicized as the best dressed man in America—he says by his tailor—but certainly he does wear clothes with enormous dash, has had to endure much badinage in La Salle street: seems men are jealous cats, too. Last year, the day after this onslaught of praise of his sartorial perfections, Mr. Perry attended a board meeting. To his great surprise when the other men came in, each looked like Solomon in all his glory. Bright linen, huge, puffy neckties, Woolworth rings, enormous watch chains, loud plaids and stripes until the meeting was turned into a lively parody of a man's dress show. Every man present said he was prepared to dispute Newt's title to being Best Dresser. Newton Perry has plenty of gayety and poise to carry off this or any other blague wished upon him.

But years ago there was another championship that came out of the air, to one of the women of his family, a cousin, Marjorie Burns. A newspaper started the story that Sir Edward Burne-Jones had called her the handsomest woman in the world. She was, it seems, exceedingly good looking, but it bored her to be placarded as a queen of beauty. It also bored Sir Edward Burne-Jones, but no newspaper would publish his objections. So he wrote a book, and in it he stated that he had never laid eyes on Miss Marjorie Burns, and didn't give a hoot what she looked like either.

Mrs. John Hayward Still a Religieuse.

Speaking of books, our beautiful and charming friend, once of Chicago, now of New York, Mrs. John Hayward, formerly Mildred Marshall Blair, has written one. It is called "Christ Appears" and was privately printed. I have the little volume and shall read it in some hour of ease, if ever there is one. Mildred Hayward is one of those women devout by nature, who probably would have been an 18th century abbess had she lived then. In every great European family there were those grandes religieuses who often had more worldly influence even than the grandes amoureuses.

Mrs. Chauncey B. Blair—as she was then—used to conduct a short noontime service downtown, and looking like an angel just from heaven, she preached a little sermon and prayed divinely.

The room was usually crowded with Russians in exile and personal friends who took time off from business for a religious hour. This little church service was notable because Mrs. Blair, in her mondain moments, was a great belle, seen everywhere in exclusive circles. One hears that she and her husband, John Hayward, are taking great interest in the Oxford union now.

Not Even Standing Room at "Hi, Eda."

The opening Monday night of the second season of "Hi, Eda" at the Cordon club was like grand opera in its brilliancy. This "streamlined co-opera in four acts" by Mary Cameron had such vogue last spring that it has run the entire week past. Not even standing room in the large club theater. There were many dinner parties in the Cordon salle à manger. Mrs. Frederick Haskell had a dozen guests. Mrs. Herbert Bradley had a large party, and so did Miss Katherine Wolcott, the club president.

The piece is exceedingly up to date, being set in Ethiopia, and, owing to the producer being from Hollywood, the natives are not black but platinum blondes. I liked especially the prologue in heaven with a board meeting of opera composers. Chairman Bach calls to order, Mozart, Gounod, Wagner, Verdi, Bizet, and Puccini, all best sellers.

I especially loved the Added Attraction, Major Blows amateur hour by Major Blows in person. The major was Clara Laughlin, author of "So You're Going." In fine, large edition of white tie and tails, and a blonde wig, she was a scream, having traveled far to see the author of this popular hour in action.

Major Blows receives a telegram "from Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt," he says brightly. "She wants to sing for us." The audience laughs aloud. "Her song is 'I Didn't Raise My Boy to Be a Chauffeur.'"

In the orchestra, Conductor Mary Cameron, and Amy Neill, Priscilla Carver, Bernice Little, Stella Roberts; prima ballerina, Berta Ochsner. The piece was excellently well sung, two of the cast being opera singers, the others singers with fresh young voices. The patronesses present were Mrs. Walter S. Brewster, Mrs. Wentworth Field, Mrs. Henry Gale, Mrs. Frederick Haskell, Mrs. Frank Logan, Mrs. L. Hamilton McCormick, Mrs. Martin C. Ryerson, Mrs. Frank D. Stout, Mrs. Silas H. Strawn, Mrs. Charles H. Swift, Mrs. Frederic Upham, Miss Mary Walsh.

WILL VISIT PARENTS OVER THE HOLIDAYS

Mrs. Eugene A. Tracey is an addition to the young matrons who live on Lake Shore drive. She and her husband moved to Number 1430 from Cedar street last May. She is going to New York later this month to visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel H. Lavezzo.

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

A TALENTED ACTRESS

TO WINTER IN SOUTH

Miss Betty Jane Crandell and her father, George Crandell, of 179 Lake Shore drive, will be leaving soon for Miami Beach to spend the rest of the winter. Miss Crandell's engagement to Walter Whitaker Murphy Jr. of Buffalo, N. Y., was announced recently.

Mrs. Langworthy Has Top Honors in Civic Activity

TOP honors in the realm of organized women's activity go to Mrs. Benjamin F. Langworthy of Winnetka: mother, humanitarian, civic worker, and president of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers.

MRS. B. F. LANGWORTHY.

She is known and respected in her home community on Chicago's north shore, and in the city, state, and nation. Not the least among her many qualities are a dignified bearing, a sense of humor, and a speaking ability that combines brilliance with sympathy.

Mrs. Langworthy was born Mary Lewis in Alfred, N. Y., the daughter of Abram and Augusta Lewis. When she was 24 years old she married Attorney Langworthy, and to them were born two daughters, one now Mrs. D. B. Murray, who lives in Winnetka, and the other Mrs. Dwight Taylor of Hollywood, Cal. Incidentally, Mrs. Taylor's husband was the author of the script for the current movie, "Top Hat." Mr. Taylor's mother was Laurette Taylor, who achieved stardom in "Peg o' My Heart."

Ever since childhood the collection of old glass and dramatics have been two of Mrs. Langworthy's chief interests. In fact, she taught dramatic art for a time in Lewis institute. This was when she was living in River Forest, bringing up her family, and finding a vital interest in parent-teacher work.

One chairmanship or office in this parent-teacher activity led to another until she was elevated to the presidency of the Illinois Congress of Parents and Teachers in 1914. Then came national appointments and, to climax this career, the national presidency a year ago last spring.

The home is receiving great emphasis in the program of the National Congress under Mrs. Langworthy's leadership. She made this clear in the summer, when she traveled to Honolulu to speak and visit the parent-teacher groups there, also in the late summer when she went to London to address the International Federation of Home and School.

The Woman's City club indicated its admiration and respect for Mrs. Langworthy recently when it gave a luncheon for her. At one time she was the president of this civic minded organization. From 1932 to 1934 she was a member of the board of managers of the League of Women Voters in Illinois, and she still is a vice president of the Cook County School of Nursing. Politically, Mrs. Langworthy is a well known Republican.

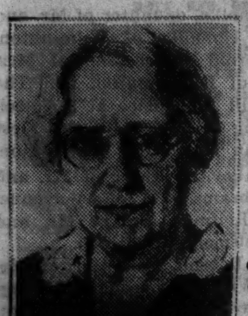
Jews to Honor Miss Szold on 75th Birthday

Chicago Clubs, Temples to Devote Programs to Leader in Palestine.

By Ruth De Young.

IN homes, in clubs, and in temples throughout Chicago, the seventy-fifth birthday of a great Jewess, Henrietta Szold, will be celebrated this week. On the anniversary next Saturday rabbis will devote their sermons to her life and achievement. Sunday school pupils will recount her many fine deeds in essays, and Hadassah, the world organization of which she was the founder, will have a tea party.



MISS HENRIETTA SZOLD.

The Hadassah party is to be held Tuesday afternoon in the Palmer house, with Mrs. Harry M. Fisher, Chicago Hadassah's new president, heading the receiving line. There will be a program of music and speaking, and then a candle lighting ceremony to typify all that Henrietta Szold's life has meant to Jewry. Every member who has joined Hadassah since Nov. 21 will light one candle.

As a gift to Henrietta Szold, who now is in Palestine, a number of the Hadassah members will contribute toward the purchase of land for the Palestinian colony that is to bear her name.

Judge Fisher Expresses the Value of Miss Szold's Work.

It is not women alone who consider Henrietta Szold one of the great persons of this era. Read the opinion of Mrs. Fisher's distinguished husband, Judge Harry M. Fisher of the Superior court: "No living Jewish leader is so universally accepted, admired, and believed in as is this American Jewish woman. Her personality, her intellect, her vision, and her achievements have combined to compel the verdict that she is the foremost woman in American Jewish history.

"She is the founder of Hadassah, the American woman's medical unit in Palestine. In her hands Hadassah has become the instrument through which she has brought a new civilization to the countries bordering the eastern shore of the Mediterranean. The mandate to Great Britain over Palestine has assured the Jews the right to settle and to establish their national home there, but the spirit of human service which Henrietta Szold has brought to that land, more than any other factor, helped translate the right into an accomplished fact.

Humanitarian Methods of This Leader Created New Palestine.

"The statesmen of the world might do well to examine carefully the work of this noble woman. They will discover that greater conquests can be made through love than through slaughter of human kind. No amount of compulsion would have achieved as much for the Jews in Palestine as did the humanity of the social service groups under Miss Szold's leadership. In the effort to settle one people on a land already occupied by another, it is natural to expect that the new settlers should strive to increase their number so as to become the majority, yet Henrietta Szold, who for years has been dreaming the great dream of a Jewish Palestine, has extended her humanitarian service alike to the Arabs and the Jews, thus increasing the Arab population by reducing their infant mortality, improvng their health, and lengthening their lives.

"The work of Hadassah in Palestine has brought to that land the type of social service which has become an integral part of American civilization. It ministers to the sick, aids mothers in childbirth, saves and preserves the lives of the little ones, helps to clear the land of malaria, and carries on relentless warfare against disease. It has brought new human values to Jews, Arabs, and Christians alike.

Name of Henrietta Szold a Keystone of Jewish History.

"When the future historian will record the events and measures which welded the old and new Palestinians into a coöperative people living in peace and with sympathetic understanding among its several constituent parts, the name and work of Henrietta Szold will appear as a major portion of that record."

An interesting out of town leader in Chicago this week is Mrs. Winona E. Reeves of Keokuk, Ia., editor of the P. E. O. Record. Mrs. Reeves will speak to the meeting of chapter A of the Illinois P. E. O., scheduled for 11:30 tomorrow morning in the Palmer house. A breakfast will be followed by a short business session, and then Mrs. Reeves' address, which is entitled "The Lengthened Shadow."

Mrs. Reeves, known for her charm and personality, has done an able job as editor of the P. E. O. Record. On several occasions it has been commended as one of the best organization publications in the country.

Frederic A. Delano to Talk Before Recreation Commission.

Frederic A. Delano, uncle of President Roosevelt and a regent of the Smithsonian institution in Washington, D. C., is to be the guest speaker Tuesday evening at the dinner conference of the Chicago recreation commission in the Auditorium hotel. Mr. Delano will speak in his capacity as president of the American Planning and Civic association.

Philip L. Seman, president of the Chicago commission, explains: "Mr. Delano is coming to our first dinner conference to talk about the city planning of recreation, a subject in which he has been deeply interested since he, as a prominent Chicagoan, participated in the development of the Chicago city plan." Mr. Delano always has been enthusiastic about the creation of parks, field houses and community centers.

Forum Teaches Women of City Finance Facts

THAT women need and want instruction in the elementary matters of finance has been proved by Mrs. Lorraine L. Blair in recent weeks through the organization of the Woman's Finance forum. The forum has won the recognition and support not only of Chicago women but also of leaders in other parts of the country.

For many years Mrs. Blair, Zonta club member and head of the women's department of a large insurance company, has held that women generally cannot answer simple questions on finance that would vitally concern their future were they widowed. She came to this conclusion after interviewing thousands of women applying for positions and by lecturing before women's clubs.

As the result she has organized the finance forum and has invited women from all organizations to attend the sessions. There is one meeting in the afternoon for housewives and another in the early evening for business and professional women. The third meeting of the latter group will be held at 5:30 Thursday in the Sherman hotel. The subject will be "Various Investment Plans."

"I have found many wives shy about asking their husbands about their wills out of sentiment," Mrs. Blair has explained. "There is nothing sentimental about the fact that at the age of 65 there are two women alive to every one man."

Mrs. Blair teaches her classes in simple and not too dry terms. For instance, she has prepared a glossary that explains the meaning of administrator, corporate, fiduciary, executor, legatee, equity, and other such terms. Another brochure translates Wall street language.

Other meetings are scheduled through June 25.

The Chicago Smith College club and the North Shore Smith club, which include in their membership a number of Chicago's socially and intellectually interesting young women, are to hold their annual Christmas party next Saturday in the Blackstone hotel. This will be a breakfast at 12 o'clock noon. One of the program high lights will be "Flashes of Smith, 1935," by Marion Hill Holch. Mrs. Edwin O. Griffenhagen, who has two Smith daughters, is the president of the Chicago group, and Mrs. Donald Jones, the former Virginia MacLeish, president of the north shore alumnæ.

Miss Virginia Riesterer of Wheaton is president of the Chicago Stephens College club, which will hold its third annual Christmas dinner-dance Friday evening in the Continental room of the Stevens hotel. Special guests are to be President James M. Wood and members of the faculty of the college, which is located in Columbia, Mo. The college is celebrating its 102d anniversary.

MISS VIRGINIA RIESTERER.

Another event that concerns young Chicagoans is the twilight musical and tea which the junior committee of the Big Sisters is sponsoring at the tea hour this afternoon in the Illinois Club for Catholic Women, 820 Tower court. Brother Anthony, a blind musical prodigy from the Carmelite monastery at Niagara Falls, is to give the program. The proceeds are to be used to bring Christmas joy to underprivileged children. The chairman is Miss Evelyn McIntyre, assisted by Miss Antoinette Egan and Miss Margaret Wenigman. Mrs. Leo P. Cummings is general chairman of the junior committee.

AUBURN TRESSES ARE GREATLY ADMIRED

Miss Shirley Logan, whose auburn tresses are greatly admired by the young beaux of the debutante crowd, is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Logan. She and her sister, Loraine, were presented to society at a tea at home Nov. 30, and they will have another large party given for them on Dec. 30 when Mr. and Mrs. Logan will give a ball at the Blackstone. Miss Shirley is a student at Sarah Lawrence, and Miss Loraine at Smith.

British Vicar Excites Public a Second Time

Some weeks ago the Rev. T. B. Scrutton, vicar of All Saints, Kingston-on-Thames, stirred up LONDON an ecclesiastical controversy by inviting girls and women to come to church hatless if they felt like it.

Well, he has done it again, this time on housing. He has preached the only sermon on housing that has been quoted and read from Land's End to John o' Groat.

For the point he made was rather arresting in a country which admires and respects the royal family. He was preaching the official sermon to the corporation, on the Sunday after the election of the mayor and the burgesses, all of whom attended, and when he had got warmed up he said: "Let us avoid the temptation to say that other places are bad, but Kingston is good. It is not good. If you doubt that much remains to be done here, apply this test:

"Suppose that the king announces that, in token of his affection for this royal borough, the next royal baby shall be born in Kingston, and that the house where the royal mother shall have her child shall be chosen from all our inhabited dwelling places by lot drawn six months from today, and that, after the drawing of that lot, the house so chosen shall remain exactly as it then is in structure and decoration.

"Would the burgesses take no action in these six months to improve the housing of the borough?

"Have we no houses that would be found unworthy of the honor of a birth of a royal baby? If there are some, how many? Ten? A hundred? And if those houses are not fit for the birth of a royal baby, how in God's name can they be fit for the birth of any other baby?

"This kind of test, honestly applied, clears the mind of cant."

The vicar's test not only cleared the mind of cant, but it almost cleared the church of the burgesses. They were furious and held a private indignation meeting at the Guild hall right afterward. The deputy mayor, aggrieved, pointed out that the borough had borrowed up to about $2,250,000 since 1913 for the provision of new houses and was doing all it could.

But the vicar is famous overnight. He may prove a man worth watching. He is the son of the late Lord Justice Scrutton, and was appointed to All Saints two years ago by King's college, Cambridge, which controls the living. Perhaps this accounts for his unusual independence!

N. Y. Old Guard Gets Set for Opera Opening

Society Eager to See If Johnson Technique Puts New Life Into Met.

By Nancy Randolph.

The baton is poised to signal the parting of the great yellow damask curtains; the soprano NEW YORK is all primed to strike high C; and the Four Hundred is polishing up top hat and tiara for the fifty-third annual opening of the Metropolitan opera tomorrow night. Despite the changes in time, tide, and managerial policy, the première of the Met continues to be the pet splurge of Manhattan's old guard. When the opening chord of "La Traviata" sounds from the orchestra pit, New York's first families will be on glittering display in the diamond horseshoe.

There's an unusual amount of interest in the outcome of the 1936 opera season. Under its new and dynamic director, Edward Johnson, the old Met has received a shot in the arm, and every one's dying to know if it'll take.

Mr. Johnson believes the glamor of the diamond horseshoe is as much a part of the pageant as the procession behind the footlights. He means to entice proletariat and prince alike with promises of a splendiferous array on both sides of the asbestos curtain.

Only Few Changes Among Habitues of Diamond Horseshoe.

With few exceptions, the lineup of purple and fine linen in the diamond horseshoe will be the same as it has been these many years.

Mrs. Manville Gould, sister of two-gun Tommy Manville, makes her initial entry into the golden horseshoe not with one box, mind you, but with two. Such splash and splurge is almost unprecedented at a Metropolitan première.

Oddly enough, the asbestos heiress and her guests will be seated almost directly opposite Lorraine's dignified uncle, H. Edward Manville, and Mrs. Manville. Mrs. Gould has boxes 6 and 8 and the Manvilles occupy cubicle 17 across the horseshoe.

Vincent Astors Will Occupy Box Alone.

The Vincent Astors will occupy their own box [No. 7] alone this year. It is hoped the recent appointment of Helen Astor as a director of the Met will bring the Astors to the opera more often.

Recently the Astors have been in Bermuda, showing their new and beautiful winter home to Vincent's mother, Lady Ribbesdale of London. If the trio returns in time for the opening of the Met it'll be a gala occasion indeed.

Since she recently acquired a daughter-in-law, the duchess of Roxburghe has earned the prefix "dowager" in the Met's official box holders' listing. The former May Goelet shares box No. 1 with her brother, Robert Goelet. But since the dowager duchess prefers London as a residence, brother Robert and his wife have entire use of the box.

Beverly Bogerts Rent Cubicle Twice Weekly.

Right next door, in No. 3, is Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, aunt of Bobby Goelet and the dowager duchess. And the box is listed in her name, too, not that of her husband, Brig. Gen. Cornelius Vanderbilt. So it would seem that Mrs. Vanderbilt wears the opera glasses in this family, since it is the only box so listed.

The Beverley Bogerts are such opera enthusiasts they're renting Mrs. de Lancey Kountze's box on odd Mondays and the F. A. Juilliard partition Friday nights. There's no doubt the Bogerts' attractive daughter, Lesley, will be on hand tomorrow night with several of her young Newport friends.

The beauteous Marjorie Post Hutton, who'll become Mrs. Joseph E. Davies tomorrow, will be a paying guest in Mrs. W. Seward Webb's box this season. But it's doubtful whether the former wife of Edward F. Hutton will see much of the opera, since she and her bridegroom are planning a five month honeymoon cruise this winter. And if the bride shows up at the opera opening, that will be news!

Photographers, reporters, and spectators will be on the qui vive for a glimpse of J. P. Morgan tomorrow night. Although Mr. Morgan has only attended one opera première in the past eight or nine years, his public keeps on hoping.

However, even if the elder Morgan doesn't grace the Met with his presence in the center of the horseshoe, some of the Morgan family will surely be on hand. They'll be scattered between Mr. Morgan's box 35, and cubicle 21 of Charles Steele, senior partner of J. P. Mr. Morgan's two sisters, Mrs. Morgan Hamilton and Mrs. Herbert L. Satterlee, are paying guests in the Steele box.

Jimmy Mills, who sets purty on a polo pony, is taking up aviation. This to enable him to fly on even terms with his pretty bride, the former Alice du Pont.

Young James Paul Mills is a high-goal polo player, but he never tinkered with planes until he fell in love with the du Pont heiress.

Alice has had a pilot's license ever since she was 17, and Jimmy feels he ought to be a sky pilot too. No one knows yet whether Alice is going to take up polo.

ENJOYED THE DANCE

Exhibition of Cinema Art Is Club Project

Chicago Woman's Group Is Sponsor of Show to Be Opened Next Thursday.

AN exhibit opening next Thursday in the Art institute will be of special interest to Chicago clubwomen. It is a showing of architectural and costume edsign studies sponsored by a committee of the Chicago Woman's club in coöperation with the Paramount studios and the institute.

In short, it offers a new approach to the appreciation of motion pictures. The exhibit includes studies of fabrics to produce certain lighting effects, models for stage sets, and blueprints that show the enormous amount of research necessary for the making of a motion picture.

Committee Chairman Describes Opportunity for the Schools.

"Few people in this section of the country know of the months of intensive, arduous work that goes into the preparation of a picture long before the dramatic story filming takes place," Mrs. Maurice S. Kuhns, chairman of the Chicago Woman's club committee, pointed out yesterday.

"In this field there is opportunity for students in our art and library schools. During the exhibit there will be a number of gallery tours and talks under the supervision of Dudley Crafts Watson."

Choir Program Feature of Chicago Woman's Club Fete.

The exhibit is to continue through Jan. 17. Members of Mrs. Kuhns' committee include Mrs. Arthur Osterholm, Miss Louella Chapin, Mrs. George E. Cook, Mrs. Frederick W. Hill, Mrs. Walker G. McLaury, Mrs. Milo B. Randall, and Mrs. Warren R. Smith.

Barney of Evanston is making the arrangements for this event. This does not mean, however, that the auxiliary members are neglecting their own children, for they will have a party for them next Saturday afternoon.

Incidentally, Mrs. James Webster, auxiliary president, is the proud mother of a new baby boy, born Dec. 3 at the Presbyterian hospital. Young Mrs. Webster's mother-in-law is Mrs. Ralph W. Webster, president of the senior organization.

Mrs. Henry Vanzwoll Heads Board of Woman's Symphony.

This is an especially busy season for Mrs. Henry Vanzwoll, for she is president of the board of the Woman's Symphony orchestra, which is playing its tenth birthday concert this afternoon in the Studebaker theater. In the audience will be a number of representatives of women's organizations who have made gifts to the orchestra's sustaining fund.

Much credit for this good work is due Mrs. John W. Carroll, who is chairman of the club coöperation for the orchestra. Mrs. Carroll will attend the concert and so will Mrs. William J. Piggott, chairman of music for the General Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. Edward J. Lehman, president of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. William F. Public speaking, dramatic, and sewing courses also will be offered. There will be no tuition for club members and only a small registration fee.

Early in 1936 the club dormitories are to be opened for girls living away from their own homes. The club, designed to serve the needs of women generally, no matter what their religion, also is being operated to accommodate all incomes, Mrs. Frank J. Lewis, chairman of the board, has explained.

Federated Music Clubs Will Hear Premiere of Opera.

Postcards wreathed in holly have been issued by the Illinois Federation of Music Clubs, inviting its members and friends to come and hear the première of Eleanor Everest Freer's opera in one act, "Christmas Tale," at 11 o'clock Thursday morning in the theater of the Chicago Woman's club. After the performance there is to be a special luncheon in the club dining room, according to Mrs. Louis E. Yager of Oak Park, the federation president.

Three groups in the Chicago chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, the Wheel and Distaff committee, the junior group, and the Mary Virginia Ellet Cabell society, will unite in presenting a Christmas pageant at 2:15 Friday afternoon in the Stevens hotel. Dickson is regent of the Chicago chapter.

Woman's Progressive Club to Have Christmas Party.

Another Christmas party of the coming week is that of the Woman's Progressive club Tuesday afternoon in the Auditorium hotel. Seventy-five underprivileged boys and girls from the Lutheran home in Addison will be brought to the party and given an afternoon replete with toys, candy, and games and then returned by motor to their home. Mrs. G. W. Kunstman is the club president, and Mrs. Thomas Clyne is the party chairman.

On Thursday afternoon the Service Council for Girls is to have its Christmas party in the council quarters, 203 North Wabash avenue. There will be a Christmas tree, presents, and games, and after supper the singing of Christmas carols.

Dressed in native German and Austrian costumes, a number of Uhlich orphan children and the Steirer Damen group will dance and sing this afternoon at the pound party in the Stevens hotel for the benefit of the Gesellschaft Erhelung, Chicago's oldest German charity. The organization, which recently celebrated its 50th anniversary, cares for needy families with funds derived mainly from the donations of friends and members of the organization.

Paris Social Whirl Steadily Gathers Speed

Smart Audience Sees Toscanini Direct French Orchestra at Opera.

By May Birkhead.

PARIS There is a certain amount of activity which shows that the social season is gathering gear. Many luncheons and dinners are being given, not only in the homes of well known hostesses but at such caravansaries as the Ritz and the George V., to mention only those two. The shooting season is over for the fashionables, although hunting is going on at the moment, and nearly every one who belongs to Tout Paris, as it is called, is back in town. There were large and smart audiences at both performances of a French orchestra directed by Toscanini at the Opera.

Paris Theater in Midst of Vigorous Season.

Toscanini always attracts an enormous following here as everywhere else. He was heard for the first time in Paris conducting the famous Saga of Finland, by Sibelius, in honor of that composer's 70th birthday. For several years, Toscanini, for his appearances in Paris, gave his concerts in the Théâtre des Champs Elysées, owned by Ganna Walska, and the orchestra he led was that brought together at this theater under the inspiration of the same impresario, by the late Walther Straram. This group soon took its place among the most distinguished in the capital.

The theater is having something of a fillip, what with several notable new offerings. One of them is the story of the notorious Reine Margot by Edouard Bourdet, some of whose plays are well known in the United States. Instead of being given at the Théâtre de la Michodière, as have most of his plays for some years, it is being put on at the Marigny. The stars are Yvonne Printemps and Pierre Fresnay. One of the most Parisian of playwrights, as they like to say here, is Jean Giraudoux, whose "Amphitryon 38" and other successes always attract the smartest of audiences for the first few weeks. His latest, "La Guerre de Troie N'Aura Pas Lieu," is a satire in his superior vein which is making a big hit.

Comtesse de Chambrun Conducts Literary Program.

The Comtesse de Chambrun, the former Clara Longworth, is in charge of the literary programs or talks that are being given on Sunday afternoons at the American library in Paris, in the Rue de l'Elysée. Last year she gave a talk on her researches into Shakespeare, but she has many strings to her bow, and recently she spoke of the American novel of the day. Her son, René de Chambrun, and his bride, José Laval, the daughter of the French premier, have returned to Paris after their honeymoon.

The Herman Gades, who have closed their Château du Mesnil St. Denis and are at present in Paris, at the California, are thinking of spending the winter in a quiet climate in Spain, but have not yet chosen their resort.

Louise Clews, who was married in London the other day to the Hon. Ian Campbell, heir to the Duke of Argyll, has arrived with her husband, and the couple is staying at the Ritz on the first stage of their honeymoon.

SHE WORE GARDENIAS

Miss Claire McCahey wore gardenias in her hair to match those fastened at the neck of her gown when she went to the Misericordia benefit ball. The party, given by the board of the Maternity Hospital and Infants' Home, was a decidedly successful one.

Cuba Legalizes Dice Throwing for Bars Only

HAVANA.—[U. P.]—The rolling of American dice for drinks and food, favorite pastime among the patrons of Havana's bars, cafés, and restaurants, has been again legalized by presidential decree. The sport was banned two months ago because of the national laws regulating gambling in public places.

An increasing amount of trade, in bars especially, was accounted for by the practice of small groups of Habaneros, who would sit around a table rolling dice, the loser buying the drinks.

After the dice had been prohibited, bar and café owners flooded the department of interior with protests that the sale of soft drinks and other beverages had fallen off considerably, and asked that the game be again permitted.

Heeding the requests made, the president signed a decree authorizing the dice game, but ruling that it be only to decide who is to pay for the drinks and food consumed. All other purposes of the game are outlawed.

John D. Rockefeller Jr. Buys Monastery Ruin

THE chapter room of the Twelfth Century abbey of Pontaux, in the Landes department of France, has been bought for $30,000 by John D. Rockefeller Jr. and is to be reconstructed stone by stone in the Museum of Medieval Art at Tryon Park, near New York City.

The entire structure was sold by Paul Govert, Paris art dealer, after extended negotiations. He discovered it some years ago at Pontaux in an abandoned state. It was being used by peasants as a stable for oxen, and its architectural merits were hidden by a growth of vines. M. Govert had it transported to Paris, where it was inspected by James J. Rorimer, curator of the department of medieval art of the Metropolitan museum.

Mrs. Lehr Gives Series of Parties in Historic Paris House

PARIS Mrs. Henry S. Lehr, whose book about her late husband is being much read here, is giving a series of affairs to celebrate the opening of a new wing in her historic house in the Rue des Saints-Pères. It is called the Hotel de Cavoye. It is a remarkable 17th century structure. It was the Swedish embassy in the days when Grotius, the authority on international law, represented Sweden in Paris. Mrs. Lehr, an officer of the Colonial Dames of America, of which her mother was one of the founders, is receiving the women of the local chapter, also their husbands, and the members of the Cincinnati and their wives. After the buffet entertainment, the group will be regaled with lantern slides, touching upon many scenes and paintings of the American revolution, which were lent by the Metropolitan museum.

Free Spending Cheers London

LONDON.—(AP)—The worn but still serviceable comment that "Christmas is coming" is being invoked as London prepares for a revived holiday trade.

Merchants are convinced that the improvement in England's property will be reflected to the full in loosened purse strings at Christmas.

"For many months," said the head of a large London store, "the people have indicated that they both have money to spend and are willing to spend it. We are preparing accordingly."

ENGAGED TO MARRY

Miss Kay Williams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cyril C. Williams of River Forest, whose engagement to be married to Burton H. Doherty, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry J. Doherty of Oak Park, has been announced. Miss Williams attended Rosary college and her fiance is a graduate of the University of Chicago. He is a member of Alpha Delta Phi fraternity and captained the University of Chicago polo team in his senior year.

Journey to Bali from Manila Is Tedious Affair

10,000 Ton Ship Requires 6 Days to Go 1,700 Miles Through Southern Seas.

By Mason Warner.

ON BOARD S. S. TJISADENA, en route to Bali.—The Tjisadena is a 10,000 ton ship, 460 feet long with 62½ foot beam. It makes only 12 or 13 knots an hour and so requires six days to make the 1,700 mile voyage from Manila, through the Sulu sea, the Celebes sea, Macassar straits, and Java sea, to Boeleleng, chief seaport on the island of Bali.

There are more than 1,200 passengers, of whom only thirty-five are first class and twenty second class. Two spacious upper decks are reserved for first and second class, with a good swimming tank, small but comfortable cabins, electric fans, awnings to protect against alternate burning sunshine and rain—all the comforts possible to provide in this trying climate.

Sailing these southern seas presents a continuous study in meteorology. The clouds fly at an altitude of not more than 800 feet. When you pass under one, it rains—often a regular downpour. Then you come underneath a bit of clear sky and the sun shines bright—and hot. Smoking a pipe gives one constant employment. The tobacco is so moist it will not burn steadily and the matches are too damp to light. It is inexpensive recreation, as a pipeful of tobacco and a box of matches lasts more than an hour.

Sailing Through the Southern Seas.

There are six classifications of passengers: First class, second class, second class B, third class, third class B, and fourth class. Second class B occupies staterooms containing four to six cots. Third and fourth classes sleep on cots on any level horizontal space to be found on the lower decks.

More than 1,000 passengers, mostly Chinese, are in third and fourth classes. They swarm like bees in a hive or ants in a hill—men, women, and children sprawled about, panting for breath. Several games of fan-tan and mah jong can be observed, but only coppers in sight—no silver or small bank notes as displayed in the steerage of north Pacific liners. Nor is the play as frantic and feverish as it is crossing the Pacific.

Along the rail are several bathing parties, water being hauled up in pails lowered over the rail; or, for the fourth class below decks, in small pails juggled through the portholes.

In addition to the ship's food there are five or six stands where Chinese tidbits and delicacies are sold. There are no dining rooms in third or fourth class. The people line up at the kitchen door, their bowls are filled, and they squat wherever space is available to eat. I was fascinated with the dexterity with which chopsticks were manipulated while the diner was walking, running, scuffling, gambling, or taking care of a child or two.

Where Yellow and Brown Predominate.

There are only three Americans on the passenger list, and two Britishers. The others are Dutch, Javanese, Filipino, many Chinese, and lonesome representatives of every country on the globe. The white race is an insignificant minority.

The foursome at my table consists of a Bagdad diamond merchant long resident in Java; a Japanese on business bent; a member of the Philippine senate—who is directing a tour of the Manila football eleven through the East Indies, playing exhibition games—and myself. The eleven is traveling second class.

The senator is a lawyer by profession and a typical shrewd Filipino "politico." There is Spanish blood in his veins and he has the cold and calculating eye of a bullfighter. It is a mixed group, but all speak English—and all are hearty eaters of the good Dutch tropical food.

Only the ship's officers are white, all Dutch. The crew is Chinese and Malayan, and its members certainly work hard. My cabin steward is also table steward and acts as a deckhand between those double duties. The Dutch officers are friendly and cordial in manner, making everybody feel at home on board ship. I played bridge with three of them. The bidding and the leads were the same as in Chicago, but the tempo was that of chess. Perhaps it was the effect of the lazy southern seas, or it may have been the Dutch slow temperament.

Seven Hands in Two and a Half Hours.

Anyhow, concentration and deliberation were required and displayed—with business of furrowed brow, far-away looks, and other registration of deep thought. Every lead and every play of a card was a serious matter. They may have laid out a campaign for the playing of a hand, but every trick was a separate battle and was handled as an individual problem and a separate crisis. We played two rubbers, only six or seven hands, in two hours and a half. All post-mortems were in Dutch, but reassuring smiles encouraged me to believe I was not a hopeless player. An innovation was the privilege, frequently indulged, of turning all the tricks over for scanning when in doubt as to whether any card had been played.

Later the diamond merchant and I played bridge with a young Chinese couple. Chinese bridge compares to Dutch bridge as does "Dixie" to the "Dead March of Saul." Our opponents were as vivacious as a lighted bunch of firecrackers. She was a better player than he, but the husband kept criticizing his wife's play until she became seasick. At least so she said.

Apparently none of the first class passengers was crossing the equator for the first time; so the reception to Father Neptune and accompanying antics were dispensed with, but each traveler was presented with a gorgeous certificate, bearing the name of ship, with date of crossing, and officially signed and sealed by the captain as proof that he or she had sailed over the line dividing the northern and southern hemispheres.

No Religious Services There.

Roulette was played Saturday night in the smoking room. A passenger from Batavia banked the wheel, and lost about 50 guilders. The Filipino senator won 19 guilders, and the diamond merchant 17; so our table did pretty well, although the Japanese was seasick and I did not play.

There are no religious services on these Dutch ships, because of the many different beliefs represented. The Sabbath days—Christian Sunday, Hebrew Saturday, and Mohammedan Friday—are not officially observed and do not differ in routine from other days of the week. On Sunday night horse races with dice for cash pool sweepstakes are held in the smoking room.

Before its arrival at Macassar the ship sails through the group of Little Paternoster Islands, going within a few miles of longitude 118 degrees east, and 3 degrees south, the dramatic scene of the climax of Kipling's "The Mary Gloucester." The ship's officers knew the poem. The captain smiled when I inquired about the ship's position, and seemed to relish the fact that in his experience the Dutch and Americans appeared more familiar with the poem than did the British whom he had met.

Could you tell us something about the Tower of London? —G. F.

The tower, situated on the banks of the Thames, is perhaps London's most interesting historical monument. Surrounded by a moat, it dates back to the Roman period, and in turn has served the purposes of a fortress, a royal palace, and a state prison. It is now a show place, museum, and military barracks. The tower has been associated with the darkest scenes of English history. Its oldest part, the White tower, was built by William the Conqueror, outside what then were the walls of the city, to overawe the inhabitants within them. The walls of this Norman work are from 11 to 15 feet thick. In the Wakefield tower, built by Henry III. in 1260, lie the crown jewels. The memorial retains an atmosphere of grandeur and girmness unsurpassed in England. Anne Boleyn, mother of Queen Elizabeth, spent her last night there before being beheaded. The spot where she and many other personages were put to death may be seen by all tourists.

Bermuda Shown in Travel Talk

"BERMUDA and Romance" is the subject of an illustrated lecture to be given at the Fair store at 11 a. m. Friday by James N. Findlay, educator and traveler. This will be the last of these meetings sponsored by the World Travel institute until after the holidays.

"There is always something new to be said of Bermuda," relates Fred W. Darby, director of the institute. "Bermudians themselves are never able to get over the wonder of their little islands. It is a land of gorgeous flowers, of swaying palms, of white sand beaches, of turquoise, sapphire, and emerald waters. It is especially inviting to Americans, since it requires only 43 hours of pleasant sailing from New York to reach this subtropical setting."

JAMES N. FINDLAY.

Another travelogue, including talking pictures, will be given at the Auditorium hotel at 8 p. m. Monday, with "The Conquest of the Pacific by Air" as the topic. It will be open to the public. The lecture was arranged by the International Travel society in coöperation with the Pan-American Airways and the United Air Lines.

Vigorous Art in Three New Exhibits Here

Oils Varied, Water Colors Gay; Mexican Crafts Display Opens Tomorrow.

By Eleanor Jewitt.

THE three most brilliant exhibitions this month are the members' show in the Chicago galleries, 220 North Michigan avenue; the exhibit of water colors by Millard Sheets in the Anderson gallery, 536 South Michigan avenue, and the collection of Mexican antique arts and crafts assembled by Miss Florence Dibbell Bartlett and shown in the Art institute.

The Chicago galleries member show presents a crowded appearance. A great many stunning paintings are on the walls and a number of interesting pieces of sculpture are scattered through the three rooms. Chief among these is the fascinating "The Secret," by Mabel Landrum Torrey, an adorable baby Pan whispering a long tale of endearment into the soft ear of a rabbit. C. Warner Williams shows a sympathetic portrait of John T. McCutcheon, Elisabeth Haseltine has a stunning "Great Blue Heron Fountain," Alice Littig Siems shows an effective bust of Bruce Perry Hicks, and Maeble C. Perry gives us a graceful "Deer."

Arthur Ryder's "Still Life" Forceful, Almost Violent.

Among the paintings Arthur G. Ryder stages a great surprise with his dramatic "Still Life," an arrangement in color so big and forceful, nearly violent, that it gives an entirely new meaning to a some time effete subject. Sam Malmberg is another painter who scores a striking success with his contribution, in this case a figure canvas, "Portrait of Young Man." On the authority of two painters of distinction in Chicago this is one of the outstanding paintings in the show.

Jessie Arms Botke, of whose work to our great regret we see less and less as time goes on, contributes a decorative and romantic panel, beautified by the presence of a gorgeous peacock, "A Garden of Long Ago." Frederic Tellander has a glorious beach painting "Distant Surf"; the wet sands in the foreground silver the silence that dissolves in the line of dark waters along the horizon. Frank J. Gavencky offers a capital piece of painting, the interior of a room, beautifully done, under the misleading title "Still Life." Charles P. Killgore is represented by "Taxco," a scene from the colorful Mexico which, as a source of inspiration, has not failed an American painter yet. This particular canvas is most intriguing. The balance between design and color is exquisitely kept.

Carl Hoerman shows a decorative "Sunset Symphony," and J. Jeffery Grant offers a characteristic "Street in Rockport," well done. Josephine L. Reichman has a delightful "Begonia," and Alice Bidwell an attractive study of flowers. Helga Dean rather goes to pieces in "Mirrors" [there is a great deal of one woman scattered about], but Joseph Allworthy restores a decent composure to the face of things by contributing the neighboring "Vanity." Gerald A. Frank shows "Decoration," a landscape with deer that suggests an earlier canvas of his to which we were always extremely partial—"Dawn," with little deer leaping through the woods. Oskar Gross brings a chuckle with "Darwinists," busy monkeys at the telephone. F. R. Harper gives us the charming portrait "Natalie." Othmar Hoffler shows "Evening in a Brittany Harbor," romantic sailing vessels placidly anchored.

Siren Song Better than Sermon for Sheets' Water Color.

Among the paintings not to be missed are "The Praline Vendor," by Karl Wolfe; "After Prayers," by Susan Ricker Knox; "Sam, Bub, and Reuben," by Mary Blanke; "Water Lilies and Swan," by Benjamin Kelman; "Hollyhocks," by Elmer A. Forsberg; "Winter Bound," by Will Vawter; "A Rainstorm Over Gould Mountain," by Adolph Heinze; "Midsummer Blossoms," by Anna Lynch; "The Old Apple Tree," by Walter Krawiec, and "Bird of Paradise," by Karl Plath, this last a strikingly decorative flame of color.

The exhibition will continue to Dec. 31.

The water colors by Millard Sheets in the Anderson gallery are excitingly and vibrantly alive. They are gay, alert, and so well done that it is a pleasure to stop over almost each inch on every picture. Raphael died at 29, Richard Parks Bonnington, English, died at 27; both men left enviable records and deathless reputations behind them. Millard Sheets is neither a Raphael nor a Bonnington, but he has their youth and in that youth a rare genius and passion for painting. He is 28 now. If his ability does not weaken into facility he will go far. Already his work is stamped with a power and purpose beyond that of most young men.

This exhibition is characteristic of his skill in water colors. He paints fluently and vividly. He has a keen sense of color and a delightful feeling for design. Pattern and color run side by side in painting after painting like a well matched team running a familiar road. The exhibit is far too cheerful for a sermon to be preached about it. The better thing would be a song, such as the sirens sung, so that any one passing the gallery could not resist entering. The first glimpse of the brilliant greens in the Hawaiian scenes on the far wall would complete the charm. They beckon one closer and closer. And when you are in the center of the circle of water colors do not break away before you have seen "Mesa, Twilight," "Bay St. Louis," "Alabama Baptism," "Spadra," "The Big Pine," "Paradise Cove," "Biemmer's Ranch," "The Hill, Norcross Mine," "Magnolias," and "Kalihi Valley."

The exhibition will continue through December.

News of Interest to Lovers of Art.

The exhibition of Mexican antique arts and crafts opens tomorrow in the three easternmost galleries of the east wing of the Art institute to continue to Jan. 19. The Antiquarian society has sent out cards for the preview and tea tomorrow. The opening of the English galleries is also an event of tomorrow.

The Davis Store Eighth Floor galleries announce an exhibition of paintings by members of the Palette and Chisel academy of the Fine Arts to Dec. 31.

The Jewish Women's Art club is holding an exhibit of works by Chicago Jewish artists in the Bialik room, 30 North Dearborn street, to Dec. 22.

Stewart Clayburn, Mildred Lyon Hetherington, and Helen Adele Lerch Miller are exhibiting in the library of the Ridge Park fieldhouse, under the auspices of the Ridge Art association, through December.

Mrs. Katherine Lewis is directing an exhibit of prints by well known Chicago artists, among them Frances Foy, Raymond Katz, and Gustaf Dalstrom, on the ninth floor, Mandel Brothers, to Dec. 31.

The Allerton House gallery is showing through December work by E. R. Smyth, Erel Osborn, L. G. Michaelsen, and George Charney.

Paintings by Grachene Nell Brodt, under the auspices of the All-Illinois Society of the Fine Arts, are in the Lord Nelson room, Drake hotel, to Jan. 2.

The Chicago Woman's club, 72 East 11th street, announces an exhibit of paintings by Blanche Kerr, Carl Buehr, George Buehr, Maurice Topchevsky, and Laura Van Pappelendam from Dec. 15 to Dec. 31 in the Tudor gallery.

The American Artists group has issued a series of Christmas cards that is most unusual. The cards are of all kinds, prices, and subjects, but similar in that each is representative of a well known American artist living and painting today. They are a marvelous find and one of the most interesting collections to own that this year has offered.

PRIZE WINNER IN ALL-ILLINOIS SHOW

"The Toilers," by Robert P. Kilbert, awarded the gold medal in the current All-Illinois Society of the Fine Arts' Tenth Annual exhibition in the third floor galleries, Stevens hotel. The exhibition will continue to Dec. 31 and is well worth seeing.

WILL WED IN MARCH

Miss Delphyne Foley's engagement to John Hollis Gleason was announced last fall by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Jordan Foley of Wilmette. Mr. Gleason's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Hollis G. Gleason, also of Wilmette. The engagement was announced at a tea and dinner-dance at the Exmoor Country club.

When Chicago Was Young

By Herma Clark

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, June 25, 1886.

DEAR JULIA: We are still in town and likely to be here most of the summer, as Will has an important lawsuit which drags its weary length out, regardless of our desire to get away. Our real vacation must be postponed, I fear, till autumn. To get a little fresh air, we have Michael drive us to a deserted spot north of Lincoln park, and there we spend the late afternoons and evenings reading. Dickens is the author we favor, Will doing most of the reading while I sew.

Last winter we began Dickens and have gone on with the dear, familiar works during the spring and summer. I never tire of him. Not that we read every word. Many pages are just as well skipped, for they are sometimes wordy; but there's so much one loves to linger over.

What Dickens novel do you like best? I believe "Nicholas Nickleby" is my favorite. Will, like many men, likes "Old Curiosity Shop" after "Pickwick." The "Curiosity Shop" has always seemed highly sentimental to me, yet I know it was the book that made Dickens' fame in America; and I remember that Bret Harte took this story for his motif in the beautiful tribute he paid the novelist when news of Dickens' death came to America in 1870. To me, Harte's lines, "Dickens in Camp," are among the finest ever penned by an American poet. They are truly American, though written about a British novelist. Do you remember:

Above the pines, the moon was slowly drifting,
The river sang below;
The dim Sierras, far beyond, uplifting
Their minarets of snow.

And then, while 'round them shadows gathered faster,
And as the firelight fell,
He read aloud the book wherein the master
Had writ of Little Nell.

The fir trees, gathering closer in the shadows,
Listened in every spray,
While the whole camp on English
meadows
Wandered and lost their way.

I love Dickens' description of food, don't you? Never was there any writer who stressed the pleasures of the table as he does. Yet we are told he was the most abstemious of men. Perhaps his enjoyment of the contemplation of good dinners . . . his luxuriating in food, as it were . . . was due to his starved boyhood. The picture of the 10 year old Dickens, when his parents were in the Marshalsea prison for debt, is most touching. The story of his life when he worked in the blacking factory, humiliated by his lot and wondering if he should ever be able to get an education, is poignant.

The food he ate in those days is amazing. His dinner, he testifies, consisted of "a four penny plate of beef from a workshop; a plate of bread and cheese and a glass of beer from a miserable old public house across the way." What wonder he died early!

At Christmas time we always gather some congenial spirits in our library and read "A Christmas Carol" to begin the celebration of the happy day rightly. Each one is assigned some part to read, and we have quite a drama.

Immortal tale it is! I believe it will live when some of our modern stories are forgotten. William Dean Howells and Henry James are the rage just now, but I agree with Will, who says he can't get his teeth into anything in their works. Will heard Dickens read his own stories when he visited America the last time, and thinks he never heard anything so dramatic in his life.

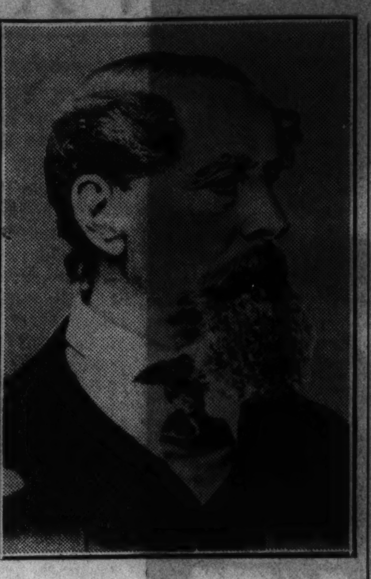
Now, my dear, do write me soon and tell me all about life at Newport. We hope to go to New York in the fall. Lovingly yours,

MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

FOOTNOTES.

A bow to L. O. Leonard, Iowa State university, who sends us the script of a radio talk he gave over the university station [WSUI], inspired by Martha's recent mention of Mrs. Norman B. Judd. Mr. Leonard has collected much information about men of the middle west prominent during the civil war period.

Mrs. F. L. Pray, Chicago, sends information about a building which, she tells us, survived the fire. "The building," says Mrs. Pray, "is at the southwest corner of Madison and Canal streets. At the time of the fire it was a frame building, named the Phœnix hotel, called also the Buck house. It is now the Marion, and a few years ago was refinished with brick."



Charles Dickens, from a rare photograph. A "Dickens Evening" will be presented by Herma Clark at 8 p. m. next Friday in Fullerton hall, Art institute. A short talk, "When Charles Dickens Was Young," and readings from "A Christmas Carol" will make up the program.

Old Chicago Harthstones.

1827 Prairie Avenue.

The J. W. Doane home was in the center of what was then recognized as the Gold Coast, though that term was not used in the '90s. Three stories high, it was built of brownstone, the dernier cri in construction then. Adjoining the Doane property on the north was the Norman B. Ream home; on the south, the Marshall Field mansion. Reception room, dining room, and cardroom were on the first floor. The latter room was fully equipped, and it is said many a stiff game was played there by the owner and his neighbors. The master bedrooms on the second floor were handsome, the walls being paneled and these panels hung with silk damask, quilted and drawn tight, which gave the impression of large pin cushions suspended on the walls. The bedroom carpets extended into the bathrooms, tile floors not being much used at that time. Servants' quarters and a ballroom were on the third floor. Many gay parties were given there for the three Doane children during the '80s and '90s. The house was equipped with a passenger elevator, an unusual feature in those days, operated by water power.

This home was closed about 1900, when the Doane family moved to Connecticut. [Information from Robert J. Thompson of Milwaukee.]

EGYPT UNDISTURBED BY WAR; PLANS FULL WINTER SEASON

CAIRO, Egypt.—Through its recently organized tourist bureau the government of Egypt is cooperating with the hotel, railway, steamship, and aviation interests to make the 1936 winter season an unusually entertaining one for visitors.

At no time have plans for the winter program been halted. Anxious to dispel alarmist rumors, the government has cabled its representatives in America to reassure prospective visitors that all is normal in Egypt and that arrangements for their accommodations and entertainment have not suffered the slightest disturbance.

A continuous program of winter entertainment, with new opportunities for side trips, has been arranged to induce visitors to make longer stays here this winter. Train, Nile steamer, and airplane schedules now permit tourists to traverse all parts of Egypt in luxurious fashion. New motor routes and bus lines open visits to many parts of the kingdom out of the usual tourist paths, including remote oases in the Libyan desert.

The question of expense has been carefully considered. The leading chain of hotels has thrice reduced its rates since the boom days of 1929. Egypt is not on the gold standard; its currency bears an unvarying relation to British currency, with the result that current expenses compare with those in the United States and are often less.

Visitors may pass the winter in Egypt as reasonably as in any large American city. The government tourist bureau has listed the maximum and minimum tarifs at all the well known hotels and pensions. Including the new modern apartment houses, Egypt has modern accommodations for approximately 100,000 visitors.

Plans are being consummated to illuminate the great Mohammed Ali mosque at night by flood lighting.

Last summer Shepheard's hotel underwent its annual refurbishing, and it will be a center for the social life of Egypt, as it has been for ninety years.

With government encouragement a season of French, English, and Italian opera will be put on in Opera square, Cairo, closing at the end of February.

THE TRIBUNE TRAVELERS' GUIDE

TOURS—CRUISES

Going to Spain? Here's Dope on What You'll See

Tribune Correspondent Gives Sparkling Resume of the Good and the Bad.

By Henry Buckley.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MADRID.—Spain rarely has first place in the tourist's program when he or she sets foot in Europe. Spain is apt to be a reposeful intermission between the hectic round of English cathedrals, French art, the Rhine, Swiss lakes, and Venetian gondoliers. The charm of the peninsula lies in its atmosphere, and atmosphere is much easier to take even in large doses than is Gothic art or Italian painting.

But, if money and time spin out far enough, sooner or later the traveler slips into the Spanish tourist office in Paris and emerges with a pile of literature and details as to how many pesetas there are to a registered mark, and much other informative but not necessarily useful material. If he or she is purposeful, then that very night will find an extra passenger or two on the "Cote d'Argent" express.

Next morning you can have coffee in a great restaurant with an enormously high roof in Irun, and the spotless white jacket of the little waiter and newly scrubbed floor will be a pleasant surprise, because all the French friends you may have made will almost certainly have said dramatically: "Mon Dieu! My poor friend; Spain is so dirty!" Through one window of the café you can see the more or less elegant express looking as rumpled and frowsy as trains do after a night's run, and, on the other side the big square, forbidding looking cars on the Spanish broad gauge track, with a great, lumbering electric locomotive up top. After that you sit in the Spanish train for hours and look in vain for orange groves as the train clambers over mountain ranges and crawls like a great snail across lonely barren plateaus fringed with bare mountains and scarcely a sign of life.

Where the Scenery Really Begins.

There is nothing to see until you get to Burgos, where a reward for those who get off is the lovely old thirteenth century Gothic cathedral, with its delicately beautiful 300 feet high twin towers. You can also smell cooking in oil, see workmen in blue jeans, lots of policemen in all kinds of uniforms, movie houses, American cars, crowded, noisy cafés, and other phases of twentieth century Spain.

Then comes Avila, a fine old town chiefly remarkable because it is still walled in when almost all the rest of European cities have scrapped their walls and put up anti-aircraft defenses. Lots of local color for the camera here. Madrid is only two hours away and downhill all the way. As you are still 1,800 feet above sea level in Madrid, you can figure out how high you were in Avila, if you have a mathematical mind.

In Madrid you need at least three hours for the Prado, because it just happens to be one of the best picture galleries in the world and if you like art three days probably will be too short. Then there is the royal palace, ex-royal if you like. President Zamora doesn't live there, although there is no suggestion that it is haunted. He continues to live in his own home, which has central heating, and just uses this great old Italian palace as an office and reception place. There you can see the queen's bed, if you get any kick out of seeing a queen's bed in real life—the fact is that the Hollywood versions are better. There are also excellent pieces of furniture and decent and indecent tapestries and a temperature of somewhere around zero.

Camera Gets a Rest There.

That is all there is to Madrid except for nice old wine shops and beer places and bullfights and all those other things about which Mr. Ernest Hemingway writes so feelingly. You can go out to the solid old palace of El Escorial, built by Felipe II., who founded Madrid and then got tired of it, although the initiated say it was the loss of the great Armada and lack of an adequate love life with that embittered lady, Mary Tudor [otherwise "Bloody Mary"], which really weighed on him.

Then there is Toledo, which again will overwork the camera, which has had a rest in Madrid. Toledo, with its grim grayness, its narrow streets, the bright eyed girls who gossip in low tones at the troughs where they go for water. Toledo is a city that died in the fifteenth century and has stayed dead as if a magician's wand had stilled its life. It is a perfect place to dream, if you like to dream.

Well, then, you have to go to Seville and in the middle of the night as you are slipping down a dark mountain pass of the Sierra Morena [Brown hills] you will hear the vendors selling milk on the platform of a tiny village named Santa Elena. Why they sell milk at this station, when all the others offer water or pop or beer, is a mystery, and one wonders who buys it at 2 o'clock in the morning as the leisurely express sizzles peacefully while waiting for the up-express to pass. And at dawn you will see the white walls of El Carpio, the first village in Andalusia, and perhaps a boy singing a quavering age-old song.

White Walls, Peace, and Moonlight.

Seville is all that you dreamed—white walls, peace. Glorious on a moonlit night. Arty? Then you can see hundreds of Murillos, for that gentleman had his home here. Geographically inclined? The Archivo de las Indias will show you maps, documents, and such-like relating the discovery and conquest of America. The tomb of Columbus is in the great old cathedral and is rather inadequate. One has the feeling Spain isn't altogether grateful. Or perhaps they are still not quite sure that the body is really that of Columbus. You can drink manzanilla—a thin sherry—or montorilla—rather sweeter—in lovely old wine shops. But the cafés are foul and filthy—Spain's worst. And God help you if you want tea.

If you really want tea served up with slabs of bread and butter by a reserved waiter in an uncomfortable teashop, then best take the bus to smiling Algeciras, from where you can slip over to the Prudential sign of the Mediterranean; otherwise Britain's sentry box. The tea will be good, but that is about all, and—heavens above—don't stay in Gibraltar. Stay in Algeciras, where the hotels have hot water and central heating and other amenities which only the English who read the Saturday Evening Post—three back numbers for sixpence in Woolworth's—have heard of. But don't forget while in "Gib" to stroll past the barracks in front of which is that charming sign: "Married Quarters; Trespassers Will Be Prosecuted."

After that you are almost sure to go to Malaga, where if it is winter you will want to stay. Malaga is handy for a trip to Granada, which nobody who had ever read Mr. Washington Irving's books would want to miss. The Alhambra has been wonderfully restored and you can see the gypsies dance and the cathedral is painted white inside, and that great couple, Fernando and Isabel, who drove out the Moors finally from Spain, repose in dirty little lead coffins which you can look at. Surrounded by great snow capped peaks, Granada is a chilly place in winter.

Very Modern and Very Ugly.

Moorish Almeria; discreet Alicante—near Alicante you can see the greatest palm grove in Europe, at Elche—and so up the coast to Valencia, which is very modern and very ugly and is surrounded by orange groves and rice paddies and endless irrigation ditches.

From Valencia there is one of the world's worst railroad services, to Barcelona, 200 miles up the coast. And the motor bus service has been suspended, because the railroad companies have been busy around parliamentary lobbies. Still, it is worth fighting these obstacles so dexterously placed to hamper tourism and commerce, because Barcelona is worth seeing. It is Spain's most charming big town, with big town comforts, sweeping avenues, reposeful cafés, all not so modern as Madrid, but more comfortable and polished. Not for nothing has the Mediterranean been a channel of culture and civilization for centuries.

Then, regretfully, you sneak away up the lovely Costa Brava—now becoming almost an English colony—to the French frontier and back to francs and the French and Marseilles and whatever the future may hold for you.

THE VOICE OF THE TRAVELER

Letters regarding travel conditions and experiences are welcomed. Please keep them brief. Address: Travel Editor, Chicago Tribune.

APPRECIATION.

Chicago, Dec. 12.—To the Travel Editor: With the coming of the holidays and the seasonal hubub of good wishes to friends and acquaintances, we want to extend to you our sincerest greetings; but, in your particular case, we feel that the stereotyped form of Christmas card, even if it depicts some glorious Madonna or a scene imbued with Christmas spirit, would hardly be adequate.

To you go not only the friendly greetings, but warmest congratulations for having developed throughout the year the keenest of interest among the readers of THE TRIBUNE in matters of travel, and our deepest thanks for having extended to us the most splendid, impartial, unstinted coöperation.

THOMAS SILVESTRINI,
Manager, Italian Lines.

THE ANSWER IS YES.

Chicago, Dec. 11.—To the Travel Editor: Am attaching clipping from today's CHICAGO TRIBUNE and would call your attention to the paragraph in your answers to the travel queries, wherein you mention all-expense tours of the Illinois Central railroad to New Orleans, Hot Springs, and Mexico.

The Missouri Pacific, in connection with Chicago-St. Louis lines, is the shortest route from Chicago to Hot Springs, and our through trains make the quickest time. We are also operating approximately fifteen all-expense tours to Mexico, as well as one to the Mardi Gras at New Orleans.

I am just wondering if, in answering future inquiries, you would not be willing to give our tours some mention, along with the Illinois Central.

J. J. MCQUEEN,
Assistant General Agent, Trafic, Missouri Pacific Lines.

AMERICA FIRST.

Chicago, Dec. 9.—To the Travel Editor: I note in yesterday's issue of THE TRIBUNE you advised, under "Tips to Tourists," in answer to an inquiry as to when one might leave for Germany so as to be there in time for the Winter Olympics the second week in February, that "there are German liners sailing from New York Jan. 23, Jan. 25, Jan. 30, and Feb. 1."

I cannot quite reconcile why you should only advise the party making the inquiry concerning German liners. What about the United States Lines' S. S. Manhattan, sailing from New York Jan. 29? Also the Baltimore Mail Line, another United States flag line, operates a regular weekly combination mail, passenger, and high class freight service from Baltimore direct to Hamburg at very attractive rates.

I should think patriotism alone would prompt you to mention the United States flag line service at least with an equal footing with other services. Other nations encourage their citizens to travel on their own flag lines, but in this case you suggest traveling on German liners and make no mention of the American liners.

EDWARD AYRE,
Foreign Freight Agent, the Pennsylvania Railroad.

The Great Thrill of Soaring High Over the Andes

McCutcheon Tells of Grandeur Encountered in the Course of His Flight.

By John T. McCutcheon.

ON a previous trip to South America I had been up to an altitude of nearly 16,000 feet on a railroad, but that was after a couple of weeks' preliminary travel at altitudes of more than 10,000 and 11,000 feet. I had heard that the planes occasionally went up to 16,000 and even 18,000 feet in the flight over the Andes, and I'm frank to say I was a trifle concerned as to how my various organisms would stand it.

The night before our start was rather a restless one for me. Burton Holmes had just come back with his harrowing stories of the Frenchman who collapsed in the high altitude around Cuzco.

I had seen the film showing the mountain flight and it occurred to me that it was a lot of flying far from the vicinity of landing fields. At the same time there was reassurance in the fact that loaded planes were going and coming every two or three days with no disturbing newspaper mention of unpleasant mishaps. I also recalled that in the last week I had stood hours of flying at 12,000 feet without feeling it in the least.

The distance from Santiago to Mendoza, on the Argentine side, is 151 miles, and the time usually allotted to it is about one hour and ten minutes. In this short time the plane rises from 1,700 feet and crosses the mountains at anywhere from 14,000 to 18,000 feet, which is rather an abrupt climb from normal air to thin air.

Into the Face of the Andes.

On the morning of Aug. 3 we were awakened at 5:30. We dressed, and got our bags downstairs, where the bus was waiting and where they weighed the bags, 74 kilos, one under the limit, and then drove out through empty streets to the modernistic pink and glass airport, the finest we found on the west coast, and had coffee and toast. In the presence of such matter-of-fact preparations, all the nervousness of the night before faded away.

As we boarded the big, capable looking plane the sun was beginning to send its rays over the Andes, black against the pink sky. It was quite cold, with clear weather ahead, but there was a slight morning mist along the ground. The observation man who always sits up at the summit, where the Great Andean statue of Christ commemorates eternal peace between the two nations, and without whose approval no plane starts across, had sent word the pass was clear on both sides. This was fortunate for us, as it permitted the plane to fly very low between the mountains instead of above them, so that we had excellent opportunities for seeing.

We took off at 7:40 and flew north for a ways and then turned to the eastward, facing the great walls of snow and ice. At first we followed the valley of the Aconcagua river from Los Andes, getting up into the snow.

At 8:05 we were very close to snow-capped peaks on the right. Farther away to the left were tremendous snow peaks. Vast ice fields were on both sides as the pass opened. It was very bumpy. Mount Aconcagua seemed near. The summit was clouded. Our altitude was 11,000 feet. Only one woman, a stranger, was seen to be using the oxygen tube at the side of each seat.

A Sense of Exhilaration.

Even in the face of our surroundings and the shadowy depths below I felt not the slightest trace of nervousness. There seemed to be a sense of exhilarating joy in the presence of such a magnificent adventure.

At 8:10 we were still climbing the pass of Rio Aconcagua. Some place far beneath was the Lago del Inca. We were surrounded by gigantic peaks glistening in the sunlight.

At 8:20 we passed over the Andean Christ. It seemed microscopic from our height. Aconcagua was clear cut and unclouded. The height was more than 14,000 feet, and still not the slightest sense of thin air. We passed over the Tupungato river, a tiny strip below.

At 8:25 we reached the peak of a flight of overwhelming grandeur. Then at 8:30 bare reddish mountains showed up on the right. There was less snow. To the left was bright sunshine. We began dropping, and I went up and joined the pilot, Bob Disher of Bloomington, Ill., and Radio Operator Easton.

We had crossed the last ridge and found below us, stretching ahead as far as we could see, a cloud floor level like a polar sea. We plunged into it at 10,000 feet and for many minutes slid down through this opaque mass until at 7,000 feet we emerged. Some distance ahead lay Mendoza.

I took my seat, the purser came through and adjusted our straps—always done both in landing and taking off—and a few minutes later the local reporter was asking me my impressions of South America.

For a magnificent experience let me commend this flight. If it seems somewhat perilous, just remember that the Panagra service has made 1,867 crossings since 1929 with only two major accidents, both before the radio was installed.

Like a Checkered Billiard Table.

We crossed the Argentine pampa, 606 miles, at 10,000 feet. It was like traveling over a checkered billiard table. The first 150 miles were largely uncultivated, but after that we found the whole expanse laid out in neat patterns, great estancias scattered along, vast herds of cattle, occasional lakes, and most always lazy clouds floating along a mile or so beneath us.

There was a stop at Villa Mercedes, and then, as we neared Buenos Aires, we found the last fifty miles the roughest flying I've yet experienced. An extremely gusty cross wind—perhaps the mild pampero—struck us and we tossed about considerably.

When we got to Buenos Aires we felt that we had reached our farthest point. Thereafter we should be homeward bound, although somewhat circuitously by way of Africa and Europe.

Buenos Aires, as we knew, was a great city patterned after Paris. We were stunned by its splendid palaces, the city homes of the wealthy land owners whose baronial estancias we had seen on the pampa.

The first three days were delightful. Then the change came—clouds, fog, and rain—good for the cattle, but not for air travelers. We were scheduled to leave on Aug. 8, but the sailing had to be delayed a day on account of fog.

We left Buenos Aires at 7:10 in the morning. There was a very low ceiling, scarcely a hundred feet or so, but the fog which had been reported at Montevideo had disappeared, and with this news we took off.

The distance to Montevideo was only 132 miles—a little more than an hour's flight over the River Plate, which is a hundred miles wide down near the sea. The fog got thicker and thicker. Once we jumped 200 or 300 feet to avoid a low layer of fog and the possibility of meeting some ship.

Shortly after 8:15 we began circling around and came through the fog and landed in the water. We taxied about, with occasional spurts when the fog cleared slightly. Twice we took off, but the fog made us come down again. After that we stuck to the water, hoping a ship wouldn't come along, for we were in the track of ships.

It was an hour and a half of circling around, trying to find where the harbor of Montevideo was. While I know that fog is the airplane's most dangerous enemy, yet I was not conscious of any uneasiness on the part of the passengers as we waited for the pilots to get us out of the difficulty. Radio beams are not employed in airplane navigation in South America; so we did not have that aid to guide us.

At last, after what seemed a long and doubtful wait, we got to Montevideo at 10:40. Three hours—two of which we spent groping around—to do 132 miles.

This was the beginning of our bad weather. We were held up all day in Montevideo and were now two days behind our schedule. Furthermore, we didn't know how long the fog conditions might last. If for three or four days, we might be prevented from reaching Rio in time to catch the Graf Zeppelin on the 17th.

We debated. Should we take the Highland Patriot, the ship which we had seen loading chilled beef at the Swift plant in La Plata? That would get us there beyond doubt. A ray of sun coming through the clouds decided us to stick with the plane.

At the End of the Airplane Trip.

The next morning, when we reached the mooring barge of the plane, a stiff wind was blowing. The harbor was filled with white caps, the flags were whipping straight out, but the fog had been dispelled. We took off for our trip up the east coast to Rio. It was one long succession of rain squalls and fog—not bad, but always threatening worse conditions. The scenery consisted of a coastal plain dotted with small lakes and herds of cattle—not tiresome, but not particularly exciting.

From Santos, the great Brazilian coffee port, we detoured by motor up to Sao Paolo, the Chicago of South America, so called because of its magical growth and enterprise. After visiting the famous snake farm, from which serums are sent all over the world, we caught a 9 o'clock train, South America's best, and arrived in Rio de Janeiro, 250 miles away, in the morning.

I shall not dwell on the beauties of this incomparable seaport. I doubt if there is anything of its kind more lovely in all the world.

We did all the required things. We went up to the tip of the Pan de Azucar, the Sugarloaf mountain, 1,200 feet, in a car suspended on a cable. While undoubtedly perfectly safe, it seemed like the most terrifying thing we did on the whole trip. We also went up the dizzy heights of Corcavaco, another spectacular pinnacle shooting up from the bay. We visited Petropolis, summer refuge of diplomats; Tijuca, with its marvelous mountain rides, and Copacabana and its beautiful but treacherous horseshoe of beach. The day my son swam in the surf, the deadly undertow took a toll of three persons.

But to us Rio meant the end of the airplane part of our trip and the beginning of the Graf Zeppelin part.

Next Sunday, in the concluding instalment of the story of his flight over three continents, Mr. McCutcheon will tell of his dramatic trip across the Atlantic to Africa and Europe.

DETOURS

By Frederic Babcock.

AT this time of the year Florida, with its seashores and playgrounds, is about as attractive as any place on earth, but it is lacking in one thing. It needs a mountain. Especially in the summertime. Even the biggest boosters down there admit they get hot under the collar when the sun shines too continuously. A state with an elevation of only two or three hundred feet isn't very well equipped to handle such an emergency.

Now one of those boosters has come forward with a plan which so far hasn't been taken seriously, but may be some day. You never can tell about such things. After all, Chicago's Streeterville had its beginnings in driftwood from Lake Michigan, Venice stands on wooden legs in the Adriatic, Leningrad was built on an impossible swamp, and Tokio was made from the waste lands above Yedo bay. And mechanical, materialistic America turned a vast region of lakes, swamps, and beaches into a land of splendid palaces, hotels, residences, club houses, and avenues of palms and arbors of roses. That's Florida.

● The latest idea is advanced by one Rube Garden. He would create the first made-to-order mountain in all history. He would take the dirt from the proposed new cross state canal there and pile it and shape it into an eminence 1,500 feet high. Where else, he asks, would you put all that dirt?

Any first class mountain worthy of the name must have a mantle of snow. How Mr. Garden would manage that in the land of perpetual sunshine he hasn't said, but doubtless he can figure it out. He seems to have a fertile mind.

● These are some of the project's advantages, as set forth in the Citrus Industry magazine:

"A real corkscrew road from bottom to top, with such easy grade that grandmothers may make it on roller skates. All terraced to avoid the waste land of an ordinary mountain and to permit a maximum number of building lots and garden plots. Pick your location, southern exposure or north front. Select your own preferred altitude. Choose your own view.

"Thousands of building lots, each fronting on the main road. A predestined architectural ensemble, under supervision of a Presbyterian architect, to avoid the clash between Italian villas and Dutch colonial cottages so frequently found in summer colonies. Thousands of beautiful summer homes, and each to be self supporting through its own 4.6 acres of garden plot, to be devoted to not raising hogs."

● The gag about the mountain that labored and brought forth a mouse has long since grown whiskers. But, if the reverse ever happened, quite a story could be written about it. It would come under the time honored man-bites-dog definition of news.

GIVE COTY AND YOU GIVE GLAMOUR

If she's human... and feminine... she wants a glamorous gift. Any gift by Coty is twice glamorous. Once, in the luxury of its contents, its exciting perfumes, its fine cosmetics. Again, in the brilliance of its setting... new presentations of rich and intriguing loveliness.

At the left are three of the glorious stars from the repertoire of Coty Perfumes. L'Origan is $7.70, L'Aimant $14.30 and Emeraude $8.00, all in crystal flacons of classic dignity. Smaller sizes are also available.

Coty

$5 Partners in Glamour! A new Coty idea! "Pour l'occasion" give not one, but two or more bottles of perfume—ensembled in shimmering silver-and-blue cases. Odeurs include the classics of the perfume world, the famous favorites... L'Aimant, L'Origan, Emeraude, "Paris," Chypre, Styx. You may choose quite a few combinations—up to a sextette—of which we have illustrated just two. $3.50

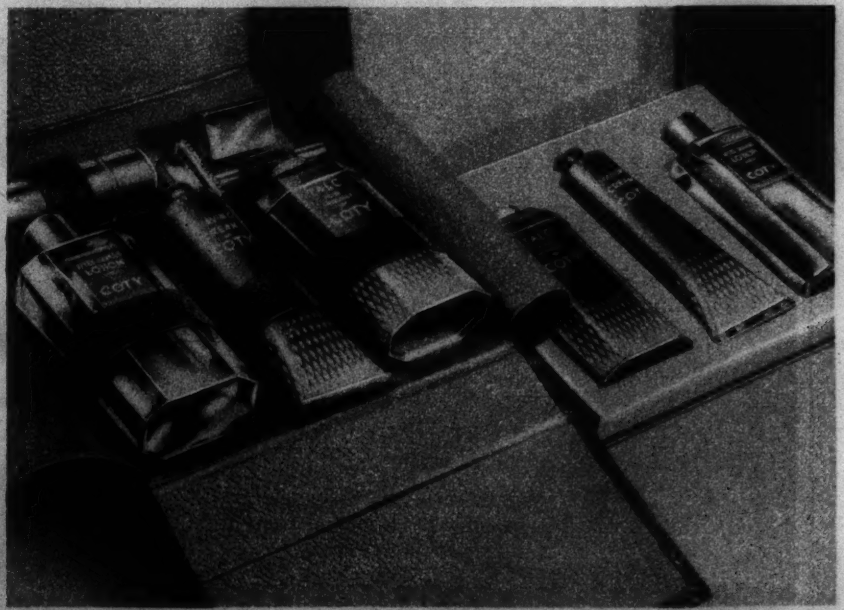
$10 Left... Dark, mysterious A Suma, the new European perfume sensation in a glass sphere that rests in splendor on an ebony pedestal. Center...Fernery at Twilight, a cool and woodsy odeur. $20 Right... A bottle of Coty's L'Aimant in its new, delicate flacon with peacock tracery. This is the $3.75 size. Other sizes $1 (think of it!) and $2. $3.75

$6.75 Now we come to something regal in gifts! One of the Coty DeLuxe Sets containing Coty Perfume, Lipstick, Compact, Toilet Water, "Air Spun" Powder...all in a silk-lined case. Right... a new Coty Bath Set, its design suggesting Neptune's realm, and containing the new Coty Eau de Cologne Parfumée and Coty Dusting Powder. A "big impression" gift... for very little! $2.75



$5 Men get two kinds of gifts: (A) the kind they like; (B) the kind they're polite about. Coty Men's Sets are distinctly "A". Left... a new Leather Kit with all the Coty preparations... Shaving Cream, stimulating Lotion, Men's Talc... plus a fine Shaving Brush, an excellent Razor and Blade Holder. P. S. It's leather—not imitation! Right... a masculine, gun-metal box containing Coty Shaving Cream, Lotion and Talc. $2

A PICTORIAL PARADE OF AMERICAN PLANES

PRESENTING FOR YOUR SCRAPBOOK: THE FIRST MAIL PLANE TO SPAN THE PACIFIC—Newest and biggest flying boat built in the United States is this Martin ocean transport, the China Clipper, which inaugurated the 8,000 mile air mail line between the Pacific coast and the Philippines. This is the first of a number of American planes which will be pictured in this section, in proportionate scale. For convenience in mounting in a loose leaf folder, filing markers are printed at the left. . . . The China Clipper is able to carry 30 passengers and mail or express for 3,000 miles nonstop. Top speed at 7,000 feet, 180 miles per hour; at sea level, 167 miles. The flying boat weighs approximately 26 tons. It has a wing spread of 130 feet, and the hull is 90 feet long and 24 feet deep. • THE RULES •

WHO CAN ENTER: Every man, woman, boy and girl is eligible, regardless of residence, excepting employes of the Chicago Tribune, employes of Balaban & Katz theaters and members of their families.

WHAT TO DO: The pictures must be cut apart, assembled and pasted together. Below each picture must be written the name of the star. You may trim off rough edges if you wish to make perfect rectangular pictures. Three pictures will appear each Sunday in the Chicago Sunday Tribune until 36 pictures have appeared. Each set of three pictures, when cut apart and assembled properly, will make complete portraits.

WHERE TO SEND ENTRIES: DO NOT send in pictures one at a time. Hold all pictures until you have the complete set of 36. Then send them to "Misplaced Faces," Chicago Tribune, Post Office Box 1539, Chicago, Illinois. No entry will be returned. All entries must be in by midnight 15 days after Set No. 12 is published. Each entry must be sent by first class mail, postage prepaid. Entries with insufficient postage will be returned by the Post Office Department.

THE PRIZES: The Chicago Tribune will pay 428 cash prizes totaling $10,000 to the persons who send in the nearest correctly solved and neatest complete sets of pictures in accordance with these rules. See prize list above. You do not necessarily have to solve each of the 36 pictures correctly to win. Prizes will be paid to the persons whose entries rank highest. Elaborate entries are not necessary. Just make your entry simple and neat.

JUDGING: Entries will be judged by a committee appointed by the Chicago Tribune. Entrants agree to accept this committee's decision as final. Accuracy in assembling and naming the pictures, and neatness of entry will be the sole determining factors. In case of ties, duplicate awards will be paid.

NOTHING TO BUY: It is not necessary to buy the Chicago Tribune to compete. You may copy or trace the pictures. The Tribune may be examined at any of its offices or at public libraries free of charge.

Cleanse system and combat acidity
...How SAL HEPATICA does both!

"WATCH out for colds during this month!" doctors warn. "For this is one of the worst 'cold-catching' periods of the year."

And these medical authorities agree on the most effective treatment for clearing up a cold quickly . . . for stopping many before they start:

"Cleanse system thoroughly," they advise, "and correct the acidity that always aggravates a cold."

Sal Hepatica is one laxative specially designed to do both. Just take two teaspoonfuls in a glass of water. Quickly, its alkaline action begins to counteract your acid condition . . . to build up your normal alkaline reserve. At the same time, it gently, but thoroughly, frees your intestinal tract of wastes and poisons.

These same results cannot, of course, be expected from ordinary laxatives. For, while the usual laxative does cleanse your system, it is not designed to correct your acid condition.

So, at the first sign of a cold, take Sal Hepatica to cleanse your system and to correct acidity—get plenty of rest and quiet (go to bed if your cold is severe)—watch your diet and drink plenty of liquids. That is the scientific way to treat colds successfully.

NOTE: Until your cold is under control, take Sal Hepatica as an alkalinizer. For this purpose many physicians recommend half a teaspoon in a glass of water.

RECOMMENDED BY DOCTORS FOR OVER 40 YEARS FOR . . .

COLDS
HEADACHES
INDIGESTION NERVOUSNESS
UNNATURAL FATIGUE

All these ailments are commonly associated with and aggravated by constipation and an acid condition.

FOR CONSTIPATION

To get real relief from the disagreeable effects of constipation, you must correct acidity as well as cleanse your system. That's why millions are turning to Sal Hepatica, the unique mineral salt laxative that is specifically designed to do both.
